RIOTERS WERE CLUBBED

Police Called Upon to Suppress Trouble With Rioting Workmen at Rochester---Mob Finally Dispersed.

Rochester, N. Y., June 28.—Striking laborers, numbering 1000, had a brisk encounter with the police, in which eleven policemen and twenty rioters were injured. The rioters set out, as several times before, to drive off the laborers who were at work on street improvements. At Mill and Commercial streets they encountered fifty laborers, employed by the Rochester Gas and Electric company, in digging a trench, and advanced on them and drove them from the trench. The workers sought was filled with bricks, stones and wood pany and the police undertook to disperse the mob.

The police reserves were drawn up in a platoon of fifty across the street and upon orders advanced with drawn clubs upon the mob. Immediately the air was filled withs bricks, stones and wood and shovels and picks, in the hands of the strikers were used freely.

Amid the melee, a shot rang out and Sergt. Stein, comanding the platoon, ordered the policemen to fire over the heads of the strikers. This had the desired effect. The strikers scattered, and the police chased them through the streets to the city hall park, where they were held awaiting action by the mayor. Police reinforcements were hurried to the scene of the riot, but their services were not required.

The injuries sustained by several of the policemen are of a serious nature. The hurts of the rioters were mostly scalp wounds inflicted by the officers' clubs.

WAGE SCALE.

Workmen Get Advance of Two Per Cent By Adjustment.

Cleveland, June 26.—The conference of the American Tinplate company's officials with the representatives of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, which has been in session here for several days past, has resulted in the signing of a new wage scale to go into effect July 1. The workmen asked for an advance of 10 per cent. Under the new scale they will receive an advance of 2 per cent. Nearly 30,000 men, it is stated, will be benefited. While the new scale only applies directly to the employes of the American Tinplate company, it is said the independent manufacturers undoubtedly will be governed by the action taken at the Cleveland conference.

The conferences of the tinplate officials with the representatives of the Tin Workers Protective association, which was adjourned last Thursday evening to make way for the conference just closed, was resumed today.

THE INDEPENDENCE.

Designer Crowinshield to Be Sole Manager.

New York, June 26.—A dispatch from Boston, appearing in the World, says that Thomas W. Lawson and B. B. Crowninshield, the designer of the Independence, have just been in close consultation, following which it was announced that Mr. Crowninshield has been appointed sole manager and that from now on the boat will be directly under his charge.

DRIVES OUT.

Mrs. McKinley Able to Enjoy an Outdoor Drive.

Washington, June 26.—Mrs. McKinley's condition is so much improved that she was able to take a drive with the president this forenoon.

Mrs. McKinley was taken down stairs in her rolling chair. The president accompanied her to the side entrance, where they entered a carriage. The drive lasted about forty minutes.

ERIK ARRIVES.

Peary Club's Steamer Has Reached New York.

St. Johns, N. F., June 26.—The Peary Arctic club's steamer Erik, Capt. James A. Farquhar has arrived here from London, "all well." The captain, officers and crew for the northen cruise will be shipped here after which the steamer will proceed to Sydney, C. B., and take on coal and stores for her final departure for the north about July 15.

Since the charter of the Erik by the Peary club she has been sold to a St. Johns syndicate, headed by W. S. Job & Bro., owners of the Diana, the Peary ship of 1899, delivery to be made after her return from her Arctic cruise. After leaving Sydney the Erik will proceed by way of the Straits of Belle Isle to West Greenland. It is believed the voyage will last about two months.

BOERS ARRESTED.

Kenhardt, Cape Colony, June 26.—The German authorities of Damaraland have arrested a number of male Boers who emigrated thither after the recent fight at Naroegas. Thirty-eight families of women and children have been placed in camp at Schmidt Drift.

FOUGHT FOR LIFE

Wrecked Passengers Were Panic Stricken.

Fortunately All of Them Were Taken Off Safely.

St. Johns, N. F., June 26.—The Orient Steam Navigation company's steamer Lusitania, Capt. McNay, from Liverpool, June 18, for Montreal, having 500 passenger on board, was wrecked last night off Cape Ballard. Cape Ballard is situated on the coast of Newfoundland, about sixty miles south of St. Johns.

The Lusitania was built at Liverpool by Laird Bros., in 1871. She is 379 feet 4 inches long, has 41 feet 4 inches beam and is 27 feet 7 inches deep.

The Lusitania was bound round Cape Race for Montreal with a cargo and a shipload of passengers. She mistook her course in a dense fog and went ashore near Renews, twenty miles north of Cape Race, before daybreak. The ship ran over a reef and hangs against a cliff. The passengers, who are mostly emigrants, were panic stricken. They stampeded and fought for the boats, but were overcome by the officers and crew, who secured control after great trouble and a prolonged struggle with the rougher element among the passengers, who used knives. The women and children were first landed and the men followed. The crew stood by the ship. A heavy sea was running, but at latest advices the Lusitania was holding her own. It is thought, however, she will prove a total wreck.

The disaster occurred ten miles from the nearest telegraph station and the details obtainable at this time are meager. Several steamers are fitting out here to go to the scene. It is expected that the large cargo will be salvaged.

As this dispatch was sent a report was current that a boat load of people from the Lusitania was upset and that twenty persons were drowned. It is impossible to verify the report at present.

The passengers of the Lusitania had a terrible experience. The first knowledge which they had of the disaster was when, owing to the ship rasping over the rocks they were all hurled from their berths by the shock. Many of them were bruised and they all hurried on deck in their night clothes. A scene of great excitement ensued. Five hundred people were clamoring to escape, while the crew tried to pacify them and launch the boats. The male passengers, in their attempt to seize the boats, trampled the women under foot and fought the crew with knives. Some of the more cool headed of the passengers assisted the crew in the efforts to get out the boats.

One boat was upset and its occupants were immersed. It is still supposed that some of these were drowned, but that point has not yet been definitely established. Another boat, having on board twenty persons, has not yet been reported. She is supposed to be adrift in the fog, and this may have given rise to the report which reached here that twenty persons were drowned by the upsetting of a boat.

The women and children rescued were almost naked. Drenched with spray, they were pulled up the cliffs by the coast people. Some of the boats were demolished in the surf while attempting to land, and their half drowned occupants held on to rocks, shivering with cold, until rescued.

This morning the unhappy passengers, after shivering for hours on the hilltop, tramped over weary miles in their endeavor to reach the houses of the fishermen, where they are now sheltered. Previous to reaching the cliffs, the passengers passed two hours of terrible anxiety on the wreck.

As a furious rain storm and heavy sea raged all night, it is feared the Lusitania will be a total wreck. The last reports received here said the steamer was breaking up, that her forepeholds were full of water and that her cargo was being salvaged.

There is hope of saving the effects of the passengers, as, where possible, they were stowed above decks. It is expected that the rescued passengers will be brought here tonight.

A WARM CONTROVERSY

Between Assistant Secretary Taylor and Chicago Contractors Over Proposed Changes In the St. Cloud Federal Building.

Washington, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—Assistant Secretary Taylor of the treasury department is just now engaged in a rather spirited controversy with Davis, Larkin & Co., of Chicago, who were awarded the contract, some time ago, for the construction of the new federal building at St. Cloud. The original bill provided $50,000 for the purchase of the site and erection of the building. This amount was subsequently increased by the addition of $18,000. Under the original bill a non-fireproof structure was contracted for, but when the additional $18,000 was secured, Secretary Taylor decided that this proposed building should be a fire-proof structure and at once communicated with Davis, Larkin & Co. These contractors, however, named a sum which Secretary Taylor deemed exorbitant for changing the plans, and thus far the contractors and the government have not been able to reach an agreement, and Secretary Taylor said today that unless Davis, Larkin & Co. put a reasonable bid for fire proofing he would annul their contract and readvertise for bids.

TREACHEROUS FILIPINO

Enticed American Soldier Into His Home, Treated Him Royally and Then Had Him Murdered---He Will Hang.

Washington, June 26.—The records of several court-martials of Filipinos have been received at the war department from Manila. A native sergeant of police, Pablo Tabares, ordered two of his policemen to induce Private George O. Hill, Company H, Eighteenth infantry, to enter the sergeant's house in the Pueblo of Cabatuan. Once in, Tabares treated the American with lavish hospitality and pressed glasses of vino upon him until the soldier was badly intoxicated. The sergeant then ordered the two policemen to take the unfortunate man outside the Pueblo and kill him. The wily Tabares promptly sent his two accomplices off to the insurgent ranks to get them out of American jurisdiction together with the dead man's uniform and accoutrements, while he remained discretely silent. He was found guilty of murder and also of arson, having caused about 100 dwellings in Cabatuan to be burned. He was sentenced to be hanged.

OUTDOOR ART.

Convention of American Association at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, June 26.—The fifth annual convention of the American Park and Outdoor Art association opened a three days' session at the Hotel Pfister today. Fifty delegates are present. After an adress by Mayor Rose, President L. E. Holden, of Cleveland, delivered his annual address. The secretary-treasurer's report showed a growth in membership and the association to be entirely free from debt. A paper entitled "Open Space Movement," written by Mrs. Basil Holmes, of England, was read by Mrs. Herman J. Hall, of Chicago, and generally discussed. J. G. W. Cowles, of Cleveland, read a paper on "The Cleveland Park System." The delegates were driven through the parks this afternoon.

PARTLY OPENED.

New York, June 26.—Eastern passenger agent Ellis of the Norfolk & Western Railroad company, received a telegram today saying that the Clinch valley division of the company's line, between Bluefield and Norton, is now open for business but that the Pocahontas division via Bluefields is not open for the present.

PAYS NO BOUNTY

Italy Dispels the Illusion of the Treasury Department.

Fact Made Known Officially Through the Italian Embassy.

In Answer to Recent Obnoxious Order of Secretary Gage.

Washington, June 26.—An official statement from the Italian government was communicated to the state department today to the effect that Italy paid no export bounty on sugar. This action by the Italian authorities follows eight days from the issuance of Secretary Gage's treasury order suspending the liquidation of all sugar imported from or produced in Italy, on the ground that the treasury had information leading to the belief that Italian sugar received a bounty.

Mr. Gage's order was dated June 17. The action of the Italian government was communicated by a cable to the Italian embassy here, and was made known to the acting secretary of state, Dr. Hill, by Mr. Carignal, the Italian charge d'affaires. Mr. Gage's circular did not state positively that Italy paid an export bounty, but said it appeared highly probable that this was the case, and accordingly the liquidation of sugar accounts with Italy were suspended pending further investigation. The declaration now made by the Italian government does not appear to be with any view of raising a sharp issue, but rather to make known in explicit and official language that Italy does not pay this bounty on sugar. The treasury order recites:

"In view of the information thus far received as to the operation of the law of Italy not in force concerning the excise on sugar, it appears highly probable that sugar produced in that country receives indirect export bounty as follows:

"Sugar below 20 Dutch standard, 5:60 francs per 100 kilograms; sugar No. 20 Dutch standard, 6:13 francs per 100 kilograms. Pending further investigation of the matter, the liquidation of all sugars imported from or produced in Italy shall be suspended, and the duties shall be estimated in amount sufficient to cover additional duties equal to the above specified duties."

From the standpoint of the Italian authorities, the foregoing order doubtless was preliminary to one putting into effect the differential rates against Italian sugar, and in consequence the official declaration is now submitted to the state department that Italy pays no bounty on her sugar.

RARE JURY

Will Be That to Try Earl Russell For Bigamy.

New York, June 26.—Commenting upon the coming trial of Earl Russell by the house of lords upon the charge of bigamy, the London correspondent of the Tribune says:

"The jury of peers is the most remarkable one known in criminal law. The panel includes the entire house of lords, from the junior barons to the bishops and the princes of the royal house. Every peer having the right to take part in ordinary business can present himself as a juror in this bigamy case and can be exempt from a challenge. A bare majority of these unsworn jurors will suffice to determine the guilt or innocence of their brother peer and the precise bearings of American divorce practice on the obligation of marriage in England.

BISSELL-TRUESDALE.

Well Known Society People of Chicago Wed.

New York, June 26.—The marriage of Miss Marie Melville Truesdale, of New York, and Richard Merwin Bissell, of Chicago, has been solemnized at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. William P. Truesdale, Indianfield, at Greenwich, Conn. Mr. Truesdale, the bride's father, is president of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western railroad. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Thaddeus A. Snively, of Chicago.

The bridesmaids were Miss Grace Hubball, of Greenwich; Miss Hazel Martyn, of Chicago; Miss Nona Wilson, of Minneapolis, and Miss Amie Jessup, of Scranton.

Arthur Bissell, of Chicago, brother of the groom, was best man.

The ushers were Charles Hamill, of Chicago; Joseph F. Kernan, son of ex-Senator Kernan, of New York; John R. Halsey, of New York; Victor Elting, of Chicago; Calvin Truesdale, brother of the bride, and Franklin Steele, of Minneapolis.

The bride and groom will sail on the Teutonic today for a European trip. Mr. and Mrs. Bissell will live near Chicago.

GUILTY OF TREASON.

De Lur-Saluces Sentenced to Banishment.

Paris, June 26.—When the senate as a high court of justice, re-assembled today, continuing the trial of the Marquis De Lur-Saluces, charged with treason, the public prosecutor, M. Bernard, resumed his speech, which was interrupted yesterday by the adjournment of the court. He dwelt at length on the participation of the Marquis in the intrigues of the anti-republican leagues and demanded his punishment.

The Marquis De Lur Saluces was found guilty, with extenuating circumstances and sentenced to five years' banishment.

PLUNGED TO DEATH

Terrible Wreck of the Wabash Limited.

Sixteen Killed, Many Injured Who Will Die.

Peru, Ind., June 26.—Sixteen persons were killed and about fifty were seriously injured in a wreck of train No. 3, the westbound Wabash limited, nine miles west of this city, at 12:30 a. m. today. The dead are all Italian emigrants en route to Colorado. Many of the injured undoubtedly will die.

The dead:

Sixteen Italian emigrants, names unknown; interpreter missing.

The injured: Mrs. William Cotter, wife of the general superintendent of the Iron Mountain railway, badly bruised; three children, names unknown, severely bruised; David Agnew, Green Oak, Ind., right arm injured; John O'Mara, Denver, right leg broken; unknown Italian, New York, right leg and right side mangled; Nocola Polasa, head and shoulder bruised; John Ickes, New York, head and body bruised; Anna Juber, St. Louis, head and body bruised; Jos Pozza, Trinidad, Col., head and left foot injured; Herbert Menger, Hillsdale, Mich., face cut; Jos Cruse, Italian, New York, head, body and left leg bruised; Mrs. Joseph Cruse, head and body bruised, will die; George S. Miller, Alton, Ill., left leg broken; John F. Williamson, Bowling Green, Ohio, news agent, both arms, both legs and right shoulder blade broken; E. P. Claugh, Toledo, Ohio, head badly crushed, right shoulder blade broken; J. B. Wood, Longansport, Ind., back bruised; G. A. Thomson, Little Rock, Ark., head and body bruised; William Brode, Angola, Ind., face cut; Clark Taylor, Loganspport, Ind., head and body badly cut; Rev. Father Welch, Loganspport, Ind., right foot crushed; John Wilkins, Lafayette, Ind., right arm and shoulder broken; Walter Laid, Wabash, Ind., right leg injured; Charles Flanigan, flagman, body bruised; John Adams, fireman, head and shoulder lacerated; J. S. Butler, head bruised; J. B. Lucks, Logansport, Ind., traveling salesman, slightly bruised; twenty others whose names have not yet been obtained, severely cut and bruised.

Two sections of train No. 3, one coming from Detroit and the other from Toledo, were consolidated in this city into a train of eleven cars, making up the flyer for its journey to St. Louis. These were—combination baggage and express, combination baggage and smoker, day coach, emigrant coach, three chair cars, three sleepers and the private car of General Superintendent William Cotter of the Iron Mountain road. Having left this city one hour late, the train was speeding westward at a high rate when, at a point nine miles west, the engine plunged through a trestle which had been undermined by the recent heavy rains.

The embankment on obth sides of the little stream drops at a sharp degree a distance of forty feet. Owing to the momentum of the train the engine appeared to leap nearly across the abyss, plunged into the soft earth on the opposite side and fell back to the bottom. Engineer Butler and Fireman Adams were thrown from the cab, but not seriously hurt. The express car and the first chair car were telescoped. The emigrant car followed by two chair cars went down on the left side of the track and the first sleeper pitched forward upon the mass of debris. Its windows and trucks were broken, but none of the occupants were injured. The remaining cars also left the trucks, but were not badly damaged. It was in the emigrant and day coaches that most of the deaths and injuries occurred. Heavy foliage lined the bands on both sides of the culvert, the approach to which was over a reverse curve. There was absolutely no means by which the engine crew could see the impeding danger. In fact, the engine ran out upon the trestle before the structure gave way. The night was intensely dark. For a few minutes after the fatal plunge and the dreadful roar of crashing timbers, a death-like stillness prevailed, which was only broken by the noise of the injured. Trainmen caught up their lanterns and rushed to the neighboring farm houses for assistance. The farmers, with their wives and children bearing torches hastened to the scene and all efforts were bent to giving first aid to the injured. Telephone messages were dispatched to this city, and every physician was hurriedly taken to a special train which carried them to the scene. The injured were placed aboard the cars and brought to the general hospital in this city, where everything possible was done to ameliorate their suffering. Many operations were necessary, the worst of which was the one performed on John Williamson, the news agent, a lad of 14 years. Both the boys' arms, both his legs and the right shoulder blade were broken. Under the surgeon's knife the lad bore up wonderfully and possibly may recover.

For a time after the rescuers reached the scene of the wreck little could be done in the way of removing the dead. Hundreds of tons of twisted iron and broken timbers rested upon the car where the unfortunate emigrants were crushed.

But by means of wrecking derricks the mass was gradually opened and by daylight nearly all the dead had been removed to this city.

St. Louis, June 26.—In an official report of the wreck made to President Ramsey, it is stated that thirteen Italians were killed, three probably fatally and eleven seriously hurt, and 31 slightly bruised and cut. A woman passenger is missing. Of the total killed and injured, seven were employes. Only one body, that of Fanny Mulvie, address unknown, has been identified. Arcoding to an official report the wreck was caused by the washing out of a culvert. It is stated that no person in the last sleeper or the private car of General Superintendent Cotter was injured.

RECEPTION TO KRUGER

Residents of Rotterdam Receive the Former President With Great Enthusiasm and Pay Homage to the Boer Nation.

Rotterdam, June 26.—Mr. Kruger, president of the late South African republic, was welcomed at the railroad station on his arrival here today, by the burgomaster, deputations from numerous societies and many ladies. Two bands of music on a platform played the Transvaal anthem, and hundreds of workmen's societies with flags were drawn up along the streets leading from the station to the town hall, to which Mr. Kruger was driven, escorted by a guard of former Transvaal officers. An official reception followed. Great enthusiasm was manifesated everywhere.

In a speech of welcome at the town hall, the burgomaster spoke of the similarity between the Transvaal and Dutch struggles for liberty, and said Rotterdam wished, through Mr. Kruger, to pay homage to the little Boer nation which had shown such faith and confidence in its own strength.

Mr. Kruger, in a brief reply, deplored the fact that his country was cut off from supplies and ammunition, whereas the Dutch had their own supplies during their struggle. He was fully convinced the Lord would deliver his country in his own good time. A luncheon followed the delivery of the speeches.

BUY THE KING'S WINES

Well Known Americans Secure Dozens of Bottles of Sherry of Rare Old Vintage From Buckingham Palace Cellars.

New York, June 26.—The second day of the auction sale of King Edward's sherry drew a large attendance, says a World dispatch from London. Many well-known Americans were present and they were among the most active bidders. Wines from the Buckingham palace cellar were sold off. Most of these were of old vintages, dating from 1869 to 1879. J. Pierpont Morgan bid in several cases from the bins representing both the St. James palace and the Buckingham palace cellers. So did Charles T. Yerkes and Foxhall Keene.

Richard Croker's representative bought fifty-one dozen bottles of pale golden sherry from St. James' palace, bottled in 1879. These will be shipped by Mr. Croker as a present to the Democratic club.

The Tammany leader's agent also bought liberally from Buckingham palace bins. American theatrical managers bought freely. The auctioneers received several commissions to bid in lots for New Yorkers, including the proprietors of well-known hotels. It has been suggested that an auction sale of the empty bottles would bring good prices, for they are blown with the royal arms.

CYCLISTS WILL ASK

The County Board to Name Side Path Commissioners.

This Is Under a Law Passed at Last Session.

Five to Be Named--- Law Provides For a License.

There is a well-organized movement under way at the present time which has for its object the construction and maintenance of bicycle roads and paths about the city and county. The movement was inaugurated by C. E. Richardson, secretary of the board of fire commissioners, who drew up and signed a petition directed to the county commissioners asking that they appoint sidepath commissioners under the act of the last legislature passed in April and providing for such commissioners, whose duty it is under the law to maintain and regulate the use of bicycle paths and for the licensing of bicycles. The question of bicycle paths has been agitated time and again by the wheel enthusiasts of the city, but there was no well-defined way clear of organizing a movement that would have the backing to make it a success.

The act also provides for the construction of the bicycle side paths. The act in question is in chapter 126, H. F., No. 375, and in substance provides that in counties in this state of more than 50,000 inhabitants the county commissioners shall, on the petition of 200 resident wheelmen of the county, appoint five persons, each of whom shall be a bicyclist, who shall constitute a board of side path commissioners for the county, giving to the cities and villages of the county as equal representation as possible in proportion to the number of wheelmen in the various localities. After their appointment one commissioner goes out of office each year, thus making the tenure of office five years after the first five years have expired.

As to the duties of the commissioners appointed, the act says that they shall construct and maintain side paths along any public road or street of the county, provided the side path commissioners shall have first obtained the permission of the county board to build on certain roads. This approval must be written and filed with the county auditor before constructing paths along any road outside the limits of incorporatde villages and cities. In the villages or cities the consent of the common council must first be obtained. Side paths must not be less than five or more than ten feet wide.

Another provision of the act is that the board of sidepath commissioners shall, within a reasonable time after appointment, adopt a form of license, badge or emblem suitable to be affixed to the bicycle and known as a bicycle license. These licenses must be numbered and bear on them the name of the county issuing it and the date of issuance. The fee for the licenses will be fixed by the commissioners at any sum not less than 50 cents or more than $1. No person can ride a bicycle on one of the paths established in a county unless he has a license, any violation of this provision, or attempt to evade payment of the fee by counterfeit, being regarded as unlawful.

The act further provides for the punishment by penalty of any person that shall destroy or injure any path by driving on the same, or by driving upon it cattle or other animals. Any person riding carelessly or recklessly on the paths is guilty of a misdemeanor. The penalty for violations of the act is a fine of not less than $5 nor more than $25, and in case of a failure to pay the fine a person may be imprisoned in the county jail for a period not exceeding one day for each dollar of such fine.

The matter has been broached to some of the St. Louis county commissioners and is said to be looked on with a considerable degree of favor, one of the commissioners stating that perhaps some of the money appropriated for road purposes could be used for the bicycle paths, where the roads could be improved for the use of the wheelmen. By this means the collection of a license could be made much easier, for wheelmen could not very well avoid using a road. The petition is being largely signed and is now in the hands of Roy Hoople, of the Board of Trade building. It will be presented to the county board on July 8.

Tom Reed cigar is proving a winner for us and will prove a winner for you if you will give it a chance.

FOR MUTUAL HELP.

Freimuth's Employes Organize Benefit Association.

Between 75 and 100 of the employes of the department store of I. Freimuth met last night at the store to perfect the organization of a mutual benefit association, the purpose of which is to help, both financially and otherwise, their fellow-employes in case of sickness, death or accident. A constitution and by-laws modelled on the lines of those now in use in the other large houses in the country such as Marshall Field and Mandel Bros. in Chicago, was adopted, and a free discussion of the ways, means and object of the society was held.

The following officers were then elected: President, George Gray; vice president, Frank Robinson; secretary, Harry Carroll; treasurer, Miss Mary Parsons; collector, M. Sattler; directors, H. Hirschman, Thomas Griffith, Fred Rasmussen, Karl Stern and James McNab.

It was unanimously decided to make Mr. Freimuth and honorary member of the association, and having ascertained that he was in his private office, President Grey delegated two of the members to inform his of their decision. Mr. Freimuth then came down and made a very clever speech, in which he said that he was very glad that this matter had been taken up by his helpers; that he appreciated the help that it would be, not only in assisting those who were sick, but in promoting the general good fellowsnip and co-operation among the people in his employ. He also said that he felt honored by being made a life member, and that he would do all in his power to make the organization a success in every way. The meeting then adjourned.

The object of this association is to render assistance to its members in case of sickness or trouble. It will pay a stated sum in case of illness or accident, and in case of death will pay a larger one to help out on the funeral expenses. This is the first of the kind in Duluth and indicates the progressiveness of the Freimuth people.

CLAIMS IT TOO HIGH

Valuation of Duluth-Superior Bridge Is Objected To.

Receiver G. G. Hartley Makes Proposition to the Board.

Board Astonished to Know How Many Diamonds Duluth Has.

The Duluth-Superior Bridge company was a complainant before the board of review this morning, through the company's receiver, G. G. Hartley. It was Mr. Hartley's customary visit before the board to have the assessment lowered, but this time he made a proposition to the board that will be taken under consideration.

This year, as in 1899 and 1900, the big bridge, or rather that part of it on the Minnesota side of the bay, will be taxed at $3000 on the basis of a valuation of $100,000, and the objection raised by Mr. Hartley was the old story—that the valuation of the structure has been placed too high.

In 1899 the receiver of the bridge company refused to pay the tax of $3000 and the matter was taken into district court, Judge Ensign holding that the valuation had been placed too high and that a fairer figure would be $1250 in taxes. Neither the taxes of 1899 or of 1900 were paid by the receiver.

This morning Mr. Hartley appeared and said that it was his intention to keep the matter out of the courts in the future and to pay up the tax on the bridge promptly if a satisfactory understanding could be arrived at with the board. He, therefore, made the following proposition: That he, as receiver of the bridge company, would turn into the county treasury $3000 to be payment in full for the delinquent taxes for the past two years, if the board will cut down the assessed valuation of that part of the bridge in Minnesota to $50,000, and will give assurances that $1500 will be accepted as taxes on the bridge for the current year.

Receiver Hartley holds the bridge is not earning enough to warrant the payment of taxes on a valuation basis of $100,000 and says that in paying $1500 he will be paying 10 per cent of the gross earnings of the bridge. The board, of course, is doing nothing further than receiving and keeping a record of the complaints made as to over assessment, and the proposition made this morning was turned over to the legal department of the city to look into the different phases of the question.

The board of review is realizing that there are many others yet to tell their tale of woe regarding alleged high assessments, and not a few were on hand to register their kicks this morning. One man declared that when the assessor visited his home he remarked that he would not go through it, but would sit down in the parlor and rest a few minutes. The property owner declares that after showing kindness in inviting the assessor into the best room and doing all he could for his comfort, the latter turned around and soaked him for just double the valuation of his property the year before, and all he had added to his stock of effects was a piano.

One citizen came in to protest and one of the members of the board in a facetious way asked him how many children he had. The reply being that he had four, the officer gravely remarked that it might be necessary to tax the father $100 for each child. This was a terrible blow to the affectionate father and he immediately offered to sell any or all of his children to those present for $100 each. There were however, no takers for his generous offer and the board told him that the assessment would be withdrawn.

It is said to be really amusing to learn the number of ladies in the city who have always been supposd to have diamonds, that can easily deny to the board of review their possession of valuable gems. Certain it is that diamonds are conspicuous by their absence from the person of the owner when he or she appears before the board. It has been learned that there are by far fewer diamonds in the city than have actually been seen. It is said to take a woman to deliver the little stabs to her neighbor and give "snaps" away. For instance, one woman whose diamonds or household goods were assessed a little higher than they should be, according to her estimate, declared that Mrs. So and So was making her brags how she had lolled up the assessor and got out of the tax business very easily. Verily the study of human nature is an interesting one and the members of the board are able to realize incidents that would furnish abundant material for thought on the part of the philosopher.

Salt Rheum

You may call it eczema, tetter or milk crust.

But no matter what you call it, this skin disease which comes in patches that burn, itch, discharge a watery matter, dry and scale, owes its existence to the presence of humors in the system.

It will continue to exist, annoy, and perhaps agonize, as long as these humors remain.

It is always radically and permanently cured by which expels all humors, and is positively unequalled for all cutaneous eruptions.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

AT WEST DULUTH

Miss Agnes Jensen and P. A. Lund were married at the home of the bride's parents, on Grand avenue, last evening. Rev. John Madson, of the Norwegian Lutheran church, pronounced the words making the two young people man and wife. After the ceremony a supper was served for the wedding party, which was not large, consisting only of relatives of the contracting parties and intimate friends. Mr. and Mrs. Lund have a large circle of acquaintances in this end of the city and are universally esteemed. They will be at home in a few days at Cody street and Fifty-sixth avenue.

RETURNS FROM NORWAY.

Ivor Torvig arrived in West Duluth last evening direct from Norway, where he had been on a visit to his parents, whom he had not seen since his departure from the fatherland when a boy several years ago. Mr. Torvig left last December for Norway, and while at home passed the time with his relatives and the friends of his boyhood. He says that general conditions are only fair in Scandinavia, in fact they are not as good as some years ago. He returns to America well satisfied to trust the future, and is glad to be back again. Mr. Torvig is proud of the fact that he is a citizen of this republic.

FORESTERS MEET.

The Catholic Order of Foresters met at its hall last night. P. H. Martin, delegate to the recent convention in St. Paul, read a report of much interest to the members. A committee was appointed to arrange for the attendance of the lodge in a body at the laying of the corner stone of the new Polish Catholic church, at Twenty-fourth avenue west and Fifth street, next Sunday morning. All the courts in the city are to assemble at the cathedral and proceed to the site of the new church.

FATHER UPHELD STEALING.

There are some precocious boys being reared in this part of the city. One, aged about 7 years, was caught in the act of stealing nails a day or so ago, and the owner of the nails, after securing about forty pounds of his light hardware from different receptacles in which the young culprit had placed them, sent the boy on his way with a swift kick and the admonition to pilfer no more. When the boy appeared before his father and told of what had taken place, the pater was very angry, and endeavored to have the owner of the nails and chastizer of his son arrested, upholding the boy in his early sinning. The warrant has not as yet been issued for the man who would protect his property from the raids of these youthful prowlers—as the boy caught was not the only one who was to share in the division of the spoils.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

A man named Robinson, residing on North Fifty-sixth avenue, met with an accident yesterday, losing one finger and receiving other lesser wounds while at work.

Misses May and Lillian Mallough leave Saturday for Buffalo. After a visit at the exposition they will leave for Canada, where they expect to remain two months.

Rev. John Madison yesterday withdrew his complaint against the women charged with unlawfully detaining a cow and the case was dropped.

Miss Georgia Knox, of Fifty-eighth avenue, entertained a small party of friends last evening.

In a cocking main at West Superior last Saturday night West Duluth birds were successful in the four fights in which they participated. West Duluth fanciers of game chickens are now engaged in a hunt for people who have birds to match against their chickens.

The recent heavy rains have created as much havoc as would frost with the street railway's track on Ramsey street. The rails commenced to spread at short intervals over several hundred feet of the Ramsey street line. The damage is being repaired.

Many new and substantial residences are in course of construction in the vicinity of Oneota.

Miss Maggie Floathe, of Two Harbors, is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. H. Benson.

Ladies of Westminster Presbyterian church will serve ice cream Saturday evening at Bonds, on Fifty-fifth avenue.

William Blamey, of Mountain Iron, is visiting with relatives. The mines around Mountain Iron are filled with water.

John Kramer, of 571 Fifty-seventh avenue, leaves Saturday with his family for Minneapolis, where they will reside.

Members of the Senate club will enjoy a banquet and literary entertainment at their rooms in the Palmer block Friday evening.

O. Olson is having considerable trouble with rheumatism.

The dance given by the Knights of Pythias, at the hall in Proctor knott last evening, was attended by a large crowd.

John Mitchell, of Iron River, is visiting friends in the city.

Messrs. Joseph Dudley and Joseph Baker leave Thursday for Cloquet where they have purchased a laundry.

Mrs. J. P. Musiel is home from Brule, where she had been visiting with a brother.

Mrs. William Wadleigh, of Milwaukee, Mrs. P. Carey, until after Independence day.

Born, a girl, to Mr. and Mrs. August Schulte, 323 Fifty-eighth avenue west.

Miss Victor Deloyia has resigned her position with the Western Union Telegraph company, at West Duluth, and left for Northern Wisconsin, where she has accepted a position.

JURY OUT.

To Consider the Case of Jessie Morrison For Murder.

Eldorado, Kans., June 26.—After closing arguments consuming two and half days, the jury retired today, in the second trial of Jessie Morrison, daughter of former Probate Judge Morrison, on the charge of killing Mrs. Clara Wiley Castle, wife of the defendant's former sweetheart. The first trial, which was long and drawn out and caused much interest, ended in a disagreement. It is thought probable that in case of another disagreement the case will be dismissed.

DEPEW'S WILL.

Executes Document and Sails For Europe.

New York, June 26.—Senator Chauncey M. Depew has just made his last will and testament, not because he is ill, but because he will sail for Europe today and he believes in being on the safe side. The ceremony of signing the will took place in the senator's office in the Grand Central station.

Senator Depew sailed for Europe today. He said he expected to return in time to take part in the New York mayoralty campaign in the fall.

YACHT FOR KAISER.

Will Have It Built In This Country.

New York, June 26.—It has been definitely settled that the German kaiser will have a new yacht built in this country. A firm in this city has received an order through the German embassy in Washington to design a yacht somewhat on the lines of the Induna, the American yacht now owned by the emperor.

The new vessel will measure about 120 feet on the water line, which is ten feet longer than the Induna. Other dimensions have not yet been decided upon, and the designers have practically carte blanche.

ANTI-CLERICALS

Created Considerable Trouble at Valencia.

Valencia, Spain, June 26.—A mob of anti-clericals surrounded a church here today while jubilee services were proceeding, smashed the windows and blocked the doors to prevent the departure of the procession. Many women fainted and a great uproar ensued. The police finally enabled the procession to start. The mob then proceeded to the archbishop's residence and to the Carmelite convent and broke the windows of those buildings.

NEWSPAPERS FREED.

St. Petersburg, June 26.—The Czar has freed all newspapers and other periodicals from all warnings, interdictions and punishments, and has decreed that such warnings and interdictions expire, hereafter, within definite periods.

A HUSTLER IN CHARGE

The New Man Is Making the Lerch Barn Move.

He Stands Ready to Move the Second Section Tonight.

Lerch and Sawyer Found Guilty of Obstructing Streets.

In the words of the immortal bard—Sawyer is IT. Because his lawyer, John Jenswold, Jr., who was his bondsman at one time, refused to continue in that kind office yesterday afternoon, the non-house mover was forced to spend the night in the lock-up, and this noon went in the charge of Court Officer Jensen to find something to stay off the pangs of famishing hunger.

Messrs. Sawyer and Lerch both came up in police court this morning, and Mr. Jenswold spent a good deal of valuable time trying to prove that, instead of being censured for the act of having his barn on the street, Mr. Lerch ought to receive the praises of the community for being a law abiding citizen and not moving the structure, known to fame as the Lerch barn, off of the public highway after the permit issued by the board of public works had expired. Mr. Jenswold is the counsel for both Mr. Lerch and Mr. Sawyer, and spent the larger part of the morning in trying to prove that the owner of the stable is not to blame for having the barn on the street.

C. W. Wilson, the president of the board of public works, was on the stand this morning, and said that he had been up to Mr. Lerch about the moving of the barn and that Mr. Lerch said that he was doing all that he could and wanted it off the street as badly as the board of public works did. When asked why he went to see Mr. Lerch, Mr. Wilson said that it was on account of the disturbance made by The Herald. Asked if they refused to grant Sawyer an extension of his permit for the same reason, he replied in the affirmative, and said that the arrest was made for the reason that Sawyer did not seem to be doing anything. William Butchart, of the board of public works, was also on the stand and testified similarly. At one time Judge Edson said that it seemed to him that Mr. Lerch was without intent in the matter, but might be guilty of a technical offense.

Mr. Lerch went on the stand in his own behalf and said that he did not pay any attention to the moving of the barn, but had urged it on as rapidly as possible.

After Mr. Jenswold was through exonerating Mr. Lerch, he took a whirl at Sawyer, who said that he had got the permit to move from the building inspector and afterwards the board of public works. When he started to move the building, he found the bottom very rotten and was forced to put in some new timbers, hauling the stuff on May 27. He had six or eight men on the job and could not work any more with profit, but the building was ready to move and was being moved June 8. He said the barn is 48.7 feet wide and filled the whole street.

Mr. Sawyer said that he left the building Saturday night and that the foreman was to see it brought out into the street, but the chain broke and hit him so hard that he was forced to leave work. He understood that the wires were to be down Sunday night, but was not there to see about it. He was stopped by the brick and lumber in front of a building in process of construction and while that was being cleared went back to the other section and commenced to work on that. He went to the council and got it to order the wires down on June 19. When the street railway people came the horses got restless on account of the swinging wires and the street railway man told his driver to go home as he was not going to take the wires down. His driver left and he could not do anything more.

Sawyer is out of the moving business now and has sold all of his paraphernalia for $200 to a contractor and carpenter by the name of Oswald Hacquoil, who arrived here from Canada but a short time ago. Hacquoil has the barn moving at a great rate today and has it half way on the lot, and says that he wants to get it up and take his stuff out from under it as soon as possible. He wants to take the last section across the street car tracks tonight, and says that if he is allowed to do this, he will have both parts off the street by tomorrow night. When Sawyer came up to the barn yesterday and tried to do a little bossing, Hacquoil says that he ordered him out of the way.

The council has ordered the street car company to take down its wires for the passage of the barn early Friday morning between the hours of 1:30 and 5.

Mr. Lerch, when asked about Sawyer selling his outfit to Hacquoil, said that he had had no dealings at all with him and that he had not talked with him about it.

The rest of the muddle arising from the terrific movement of the barn was being aired in police court this afternoon.

The attorneys finished their arguments shortly after 2 o'clock this afternoon and the case was submitted to Judge Edson, who found both defendants guilty as charged. Mr. Lerch was fined $1 and Mr. Sawyer was fined $25 and costs or twenty days in the county jail. The latter was given two days to settle. Mr. Lerch has taken an appeal.

TRANSFER IS MADE

Donora Mining Company Takes Sweeney and Adams Find.

This Is the Mining Corporation of Union Steel Company.

One of the Finest Mining Propositions On the Mesaba Range.

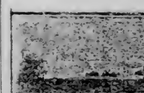
A mining lease of the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 3, and the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter of section 4, 57-21 was transferred today by John B. Adams and E. F. Sweeney to the Donora Mining company. Under the terms of the original lease the fee owner is to get 25 cents a ton royalty on all ore mined. Under the transfer Messrs. Adams and Sweeney are to get an additional 10 cents a ton. Mr. Adams transfers a one-third and Mr. Sweeney a two-thirds interest in the property. The minimum annual output is to be 75,000 tons.

The consideration is not named in the transfer, but the bonus paid for the lease by the Donora Mining company was $100,000.

The Donora Mining company is the name of the mining corporation of the Union Steel company, the new company which is erecting mammoth steel plants at Donora, near Pittsburg, and in which the Mellon Brothers, of Pittsburg, and Henry W. Oliver, H. C. Frick and others are interested. The mining company was organized a short time ago in the state of Minnesota with a capital of $500,000. This is the first large property it has acquired, but it has options on a number of other lands.

The property which has just been transferred to the company is said to be one of the very nicest propositions on the Mesaba range. An ore body of about 4,000,000 tons has been shown up and it is the very finest kind of ore, running from 63 to 64 per cent in metallic iron and plenty low enough in phosporus to come within the Bessemer limit. Furthermore, there is a surface of not greater than 40 feet over the ore body, which means that it is a stripping proposition and will be an open pit mine. The ore body, too, has a fine depth running to about fifty feet.

Altogether the Donora company has secured a very fine mine to start with. That it is in the field far more every iron man in Duluth knows well.



STEAMER J. C. SUIT

will begin tomorrow making daily trips from Duluth and Superior to Fond du Lac and return, leaving her dock at the foot of Fifth avenue west at 9:30 a.m. through out the summer season. She is open for charter to Fond du Lac during day and for evening excursions on the lake and around the horn.

THEY ACCEPT.

Personal Injury Suits Settled at Court's Figures.

The two personal injury plaintiffs whose verdicts against the Duluth Street Railway company Judge Dibell cut down some days ago have both accepted the cut rather than stand the alternative of a new trial, and at least one of the judgments resulting has been paid.

The two cases are those of Emma J. Wicks against the Duluth Street railway, in which a verdict of $800 was cut to $650, and Catherine M. Hall against the Duluth Street Railway company, in which a verdict of $4500 was cut to $2500.

The company applied for a new trial in both cases on the ground that the damages were excessive, and had been given under the influence of passion and prejudice. Judge Dibell did not grant the motions for new trials outright, but he cut down the verdicts and gave the plaintiffs the alternative of accepting the cut or standing new trials. In both cases the plaintiffs chose the cut, and they have filed remittiturs by which they give up their claim to the difference between the verdicts and the amounts allowed by the court. In the Wicks case a judgment was entered for the amount of $650 with costs and the judgment has been paid and satisfied.

The Company Fined.

For violation of the city ordinance regarding the placing of electric wires in buildings without permission, the Burgess Electric company was yesterday fined $5 and costs in municipal court. A stay of ten days was granted, as the company will take the case to a higher court to test the validity of the ordinance. Last week E. A. McMahon argued the case for the defense and J. D. Holmes for the city, the defense moving that the action be dismissed on the grounds that the ordinance was indefinite and uncertain in its requirements, also that the complaint was not sufficient to indicate that an offense had been committed. Judge Gearhart had the matter under advisement and yesterday announced his decision.

An Elks' Excursion.

The Elks, always noted for their hospitality, will be the hosts for an excursion on the lake in the palatial steamer Peerless, Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The money received will go towards defraying the expenses of taking the Head of the Lakes band of thirty pieces to Milwaukee about the middle of July when the grand lodge session will be held. The "Best People" at the head of the lakes want to be ready to get in the swim with the rest.

SEVERAL INJURED

Northwestern Train Runs Into Switch Engine at Elroy.

A Number of Passengers Were Slightly Hurt.

All Were Able to Continue on Their Journey.

Milwaukee, June 26.—A Journal special from Elroy, Wis., says: The Chicago & Northwestern passenger train No. 4, from Winona, T. A. Ward engineer and Phil Michaud conductor, collided with a switch engine at the north end of the Elroy yard last night. The switch engine was standing on the main track without protection, which was the direct cause of the accident. The following is a list of passengers hurt, and in no case were serious injuries inflicted:

MRS. E. GRUENZNER, La Crosse.
NORMAN GRUENZNER, La Crosse.
ISSIE SPAULDING, Cudahy.
HUGO KRIEG, Loganville.
MRS. LOUISE LEISNER, Jackson, Wis.
CHARLES KELCE, Nellisville.
A. ROLLES, Madison.
The REV. C. L. ROBINSON, Madison.
LOUIS AMUSSEN, Menominee, Mich.
A. F. JAMES, Chicago.
S. M. LODKOWSKI, Loganville, Wis.
A. E. TREVEN, Fond du Lac.
C. S. LAW, Chicago.
MRS. F. W. SCOVILLE, Germania, Wis.
MRS. ELLEN VALKENSTERN, Baraboo.
MICHAEL RINEY, Baraboo.
THOMAS CUMMINGS, Baraboo.
W. H. COLLINS, Elroy.

All the passengers were able to continue their journey after a short time. The damages to the engines were slight.

AGITATED.

Capt. Gaillard's Stand Not Liked By Log Towers.

The log towing concerns are much agitated by Capt. Gaillard's determination to enforce the regulations with reference to the towing of rafts through the entry and into the harbor.

One of them asserted this morning that the towing concerns would be driven out of the business if the rules were enforced to the letter. They called on the lumbermen to take up the battle with them, and a meeting was held with Capt. Gaillard yesterday afternoon and another will be held tonight.

Capt. Gaillard simply stated that the rules in force here were laid down by the secretary of war and he is charged with their enforcement. If they are not right they ought to be repealed. He was perfectly willing to consider the question of the fairness and advisability of making changes in the rules, and invited suggestions along that line.

This morning Capt. Gaillard said that he had no intention of working any hardship upon the lugmen, or to make examples of them for infractions that may have occurred in emergencies, such as severe storms, when a good explanation could be made, but he is required to see that the regulations are enforced, and must do it. There may be some of the regulations that ought to be amended, and if it develops that such is the case he will cheerfully aid in getting this done.

The matter is not all one sided, however, and there are many statements being made that it is impossible to get through the natural entry with a raft of logs of any size and not take up more than half of the channel, for the reason that riprap has been deposited on each side of the piers, so that a tug cannot approach within twenty-five feet of either side, and this means that it must keep to the center of the channel, the width of the entry is 350 feet, so that the riprap only takes up fifty feet, and then, too, the riprap is far enough below the surface so that the raft can run over it. This allows a width of at least 150 feet for rafts.

One of the lumbermen said this morning that he did not believe the regulations were severe, and he was satisfied that they could be lived up to, barring some infractions now and then in emergency cases.

FOR MURDER.

Police Arrest William Lajoi, Wanted at Bay City.

This afternoon Detective Irvine arrested William Lajoi, who is wanted at Bay City, Mich., for murder. Several telegrams were received from the chief of police there telling the police here to look out for the man as he was headed this way. He was caught on Fifth avenue west and admitted he is the man wanted. He has been in Duluth about a week. According to his statement a boy had angered him and he undertook to administer summary punishment in the course of which the boy fell and injured himself so that he died. Nothing further is known of the matter here. The occurrence took place lasts fall and Lajoi has eluded capture since then.

WECHLER WANTED.

Grand Jury Indicts Former Deputy Coroner.

Chicago, June 26.—The grand jury today indicted former Deputy Coroner John C. Wechler, for malfeasance in office, the specific charge being that he conducted a false inquest on the body of Miss Marie DeFenbach, about whom evolved the insurance conspiracy case, prosecution in which recently resulted in Dr. A. M. Unger and F. Wayland Brown being sentenced to the penitentiary. Wechler has not been located.

MAY COME LATER.

The Duluth Improvement association will be unable to secure Miss Good, of the National League of Improvement Associations for a lecture in Duluth at an early date, but it is very likely that she will come to the city later in the season. Miss Good is the lecturer of the national association and it was thought that she could visit Duluth early next month, but this would cause a conflict of dates and Thomas E. Hill has been so advised.

The secretary of the national association, at Springfield, Ohio, takes occasion in recent correspondence to compliment the Duluth Improvement association. The secretary also writes that the National League of Improvement Associations is using methods and plans of the Duluth association to stimulate interest in towns and cities in different sections of the country.

PITT ACQUITTED.

Provost Marshal Still Considers Him Guilty.

Manila, June 26.—Harold M. Pitt, manager of Evans & Co., government contractors, who has been on trial on charges of improperly purchasing government stores, was acquitted today. Four other purchasers of commissary stores were found guilty and fined $1000 each.

Pitt was acquitted by a military court composed of volunteer officers. Provost Marshal Davis considers Pitt was convicted on his own admissions and has ordered a reconsideration of the verdict. Those sentenced were Clarke and Boldt, a Spaniard named Riva and a Chinaman named Wung Ting. Clarke and Boldt, in addition to being fined $1000 each, were also sentenced to a year's imprisonment. Provost Marshal Davis commuted the imprisonment.

The balance of the season's stock including all of the season's best styles in plain jackets and novelties. Reductions and "bargains" are being advertised all over the city now—some are legitimate, some are false; as for instance, in one store that we know of, a reduction was made after the garment had been marked up.

Shop around thoroughly and notice well the cloth, the trimmings, the linings and see that the making is good. We keep our stock clear of any faulty garments, by laying down these rules:

1st—No cotton or part cotton cloth or body lining; even the sewing thread must be silk.

2nd—No trashy trimmings, even on the parts that are never seen—pockets, etc.

3rd—No careless or inferior tailoring—it must be skillful, honest and clean, and there is no exception to this rule, whether the price be regular or special, because no garment enters our store but what is made for our regular stock.

Buyers now have the advantage of our usual season clean-up, for we make it a rule that no garment is carried over from one season to another.

Women's Tailored Suits

At a fourth and a third and in some instances a half less than regular prices.

The time to clean-up is when women want to buy—when they can make use of the garment—present reductions on our high-class tailored suits should appeal strongly to women folks who want stylish, well made garments for little money.

THE HOTEL CROOK.

He Is a Shrewd Observer of Persons.

The diversity of methods employed by the modern hotel crook are so numerous and ingenious that the problem of dealing with this class of criminals presents new difficulties every day, says the Washington Times. The greater part of the responsibility of attending to guests, such as assigning them to comfortable quarters, looking after their baggage, answering all maner of interrogations, and attending to their wants in general, falls upon the shoulders of the clerks behind the desk, who, in turn, rely upon the bellboy or "front," as he is commonly called, to assist them. The office of a hotel is a veritable bureau of information, and woe be to the clerk who, in spite of the rush of arrivals, or the number of individual bills he may be writing, does not, in face of all such confusion, prove himself a human encyclopedia, carrying a smiling countenance warranted to please the average dred out traveler.

And, were this all, one might justly exclaim that such a position was no harder than many others. But there comes to the hotel a conventional character known as the hotel crook. In appearance he is in no wise different from the most distinguished guest in the house. His manners suggest gentility and refinement. His attire is not only stylish, but faultless, and he carries a lot of miscellaneous baggage, including a trunk, dress-suit case, leather opera hat box, and, sometimes, a shawl with cane, umbrella, etc., strapped to the same. Of course, the contents of these pieces of baggage remain a mystery to those who might be curious.

The hotel clerk does not confront his newly arrived guest with an x-ray, and hence, for all one knows, there may be bricks or bars in the trunks, as this latest type of a lawbreaker is merely acting a part. His luggage might be compared to so much stage property.

The first thing a clever hotel crook does when he intends stopping at any particular house is to send himself a superfluous number of letters and telegrams in order that when he arrives at the house he can inquire for "his mail." This may seem an unnecessary detail, but it is one of the little things which go to strengthen the prestige of the guest with the clerk. He even sometimes wires ahead to have a room and bath reserved. When such a character as the one described arrives at the hotel he registers, calls for mail, and begs to be immediately shown to his room.

This is the kind of guest a clerk suspects the least of being otherwise than honest. He is polite, brief, and considerate, inasmuch as he gives little or no trouble. Let a man register at a hotel and immediately, without the slightest provocation, enter into a lengthy and monotonous discourse about his own personal history, his acquaintance with men of distinction, and the fabulous amount of money he was once worth, invariably he creates an air of suspicion which causes him to be closely watched.

A clever hotel crook is methodical in all his operations. Sometimes it takes him as much as two days to "size up" a house before he starts in to work. The one place and time affording the best opportunity for this task is the main dining-room at the evening meal. It frequently occurs that when large amounts of valuable jewelry are discovered missing from the room of some guest, the natural question is asked: How did the thief manage to learn that such property was in the room? Yet the reply is not only simple, but discloses the keen ingenuity of the thief, who has carefully carried out his plans. Some women have a habit of wearing the bulk of their jewelry at dinner. This fact is quickly noted by the crook, and, without any knowledge of the fact, such a guest is carefully watched during the entire evening. This is done in order that the crook may learn whether or no the guest deposits her valuables in the office safe before retiring. Now the better class of people not only consider it vulgar, but abstain from wearing their jewelry at breakfast. The hotel crook, who is familiar with the fads and habits of well-bred people knows this fact, and when he sees his victim retire to her room in the evening with all her jewels on and then notices in the morning that this same guest comes down to breakfast with only a wedding ring on her finger, he draws the natural conclusion that the blazing gems his eyes had feasted on the night before are in the room upstairs.

How he manages to gain an entrance to this room needs no great amount of explanation. Rest assured he carries a full kit of tools for this work. Such obstacles as chain bars, pass keys, etc., are easily overcome, and while the unsuspecting victim is lingering over the first course of an elaborate "dejeuner" and perhaps mapping out a program of calls during the day, the clever thief is settling his bill at the desk and declaring without a blush that he has been so well treated he shall recommend the house to his friends.

Another and more difficult scheme, for it is attended with a greater amount of risk, is the following method of gaining an entrance to a room. The crook lounges around the lobby of a hotel and watches for guests who have just come from their rooms and intend going up the street for a walk or on business. Invariably such a guest will walk up to the desk, cast a glance in his box to see whether there is any mail in it and carelessly throw his key upon the counter. Oftentimes the clerk, if not waiting upon other guests, is busy making out a bill and here is the crook's golden opportunity. He slowly approaches the desk, watching his chance, and lays his newspaper over the key. This is done in a most nonchalant way, after which he picks up both paper and key and repairs to the room to look over whatever may be there, from the contents of a trunk to rummaging through bureau drawers.

When the loss of property is discovered the clerk declares in all truth that he has not seen the guest's key, and the guest in turn swears that he left the same on the counter.

In some hotels that have suffered in this way a small opening on the counter, over which is printed the inscription: "Guests will please drop their keys here," has been adopted as a remedy of this trouble, which at least releases the clerk from all blame.

The old methods of getting checks cashed is rarely accomplished. In cases where such requests are made the proprietor is consulted, and unless he is personally acquainted with the guest a polite refusal is the result.

As a matter of fact, the hotel crook cares as little about the "house detective" as he does about the guests he intends to rob. Such an official, in his opinion, might just as well be dispensed with as not. In the majority of cases this dignitary divides his time between the hotel bar or buffet and the lobby, where he reclines, smoking a Panatela and reading the latest news. Even the traditional night watchman, who makes his rounds hourly through the house, is more to be feared than the would-be sleuth whose duty it is to detect imposters and protect the interest of those who employ him. This fact has become so painfully apparent that in New York city, at the Waldorf-Astoria, all the male house detectives have been discharged and women employed in their places.

CROP IN DANGER

State Grain Inspector Pessimistic Over Minnesota Outlook.

So Much Rain That Wheat Is Developing Improperly.

Crop Reports Show Rains But Sound No Alarm.

State Grain Inspector E. S. Reishus does not find the condition of wheat in Minnesota at the present time very promising. He says there is too much wet weather and that the crop is in a dangerous condition and liable to serious damage. Yesterday at St. Paul he made the following pessimistic prediction which will be found quite different from the rosy predictions that have been coming from all quarters lately:

"Unless the rain stop off short, without a day's delay, the crop of wheat in Minnesota will not only be a disappointment, but it will be very, very light.

"Unless July should turn out an exceedingly dry month, crops will suffer materially. What we need now, especially in Southern Minnesota, is thirty days of hot dry weather. I have had thirty years of farming in Minnesota and I am speaking from my own experience. I do not like the way wheat is looking.

"People from the city drive out into the country, see a field of waving green heads, and they say, 'what a big crop there will be.' But the development is all going into the heads. The tops are so thick and large, owing to surplus moisture, that even in the middle of the afternoon, after a day's hot sunning, the wheat is wet underneath. The stalks will soon commence to look white and bleached like plants grown in the cellar, unless the rains stop. The sun must strike beneath the heads, or else when it becomes necessary for the stalks to have strength to bear the strain of the heavy wheat heads, over they will go, and development will be stunted."

The government crop report for Minnesota for the week ending Monday last tells of heavy rains, but reports no injury as yet. It says:

"The temperatures during the week have not been unusually high or unusually low. Showers were general on the 20th or 21st, and there were scattered showers on other days as well; these coming so soon after the heavy rains of the night of the 15th have supplied an abundance of moisture. Many correspondents are fearful that continued rains will cause lodging of wheat, oats and barley on rich soils, and bring about conditions favorable for rust, but as yet there are no reports of injury from excessive rainfall, except that in Western Polk county some wheat is drowned out, and sloughs are so wet as to interfere with gathering wild hay. The late sown grains are generally very luxuriant on rich soils, but in some places the early sown wheat is thin and spindling. Where wheat is thin the weeds are growing rapidly. Wheat, oats and barley are beginning to head as far north as Polk county. Flax is growing rapidly, and in Dakota county it is coming into flower. Corn is growing well, though still somewhat backward. Grass, clover and timothey are good in northern and western portions, but in the southeast the growth was shortened by dry weather early in the season. Some clover is being cut, but there has been no good haying weather during the week. Winter rye is beginning to turn color. Hail fell in different parts of the state, but no injury occurred, except in the vicinity of Minneapolis, where market gardens suffered a damage of several thousands of dollars on the 17th. The crops on about 400 acres in Sherburne county were injured by hail on the 15th. A native grasshopper is causing injury to crops, mostly flax, in northern counties."

The North Dakota report is excellent saying:

"Conditions during the past week have been very favorable to rall crops except flax, corn and millet. Heavy showers have fallen in all parts of the state, thoroughly saturating the ground, and in some places in the Red River valley, where the land is low, completely covering it. The temperature was slightly below the normal until the latter part of the week, when there was considerable of a rise.

"Wheat is doing finely; all reports agree that it was never in a more promising condition at this time of the year. Other small grain, except flax and millet, is also doing well, although some damage has been done oats by cut worms. Flax is backward in all parts, is generally thin and uneven, and in the eastern portion looks sickly and yellow. Corn is very backward, the weather having been too cold for it, but a short period of seasonable weather, with sunshine, will cause a vigorous growth. Grass has made rapid growth, and now promises a good hay crop.

"Cutworms and grasshoppers are numerous, and have done some damage, but the wet weather has been unfavorable for them during the past two weeks.

"A few hail storms are reported from widely separated places, none of them doing enough damage to mention."

WERE ACQUITTED.

David Weinberg Fails to Prove Charges.

On a complaint made by David Weinberg yesterday, Fred Clark, a plumber, and John Brodine were arrested for using profane language on the street. Clark was also charged with assaulting the complainant. The case was tried in municipal court and the evidence given by the complaining witness was that the defendants had insulted himself and brother while they were walking in company with a young woman, and that when the brothers resented the alleged indignity a fight ensued. The defendants were acquitted, the evidence tending to show both parties somewhat to blame.

Detective Troyer yesterday arrested Dell Henderson, an actor, who arrived in the city yesterday morning, on the authority of a telegram from Port Arthur asking his detention on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. The police department could learn nothing further of the alleged crime, and as Henderson refused to commit himself he was released, the Port Arthur authorities failing to answer a telegram of inquiry.

IDENTIFIED.

Body Found In Lake Is That of Andrew Nelson.

The floater found in the canal yesterday morning has been identified as Andrew Nelson, a tailor who disappeared last March, and for whom his relatives and friends have been searching for some weeks. It is said that the police department was also notified of Nelson's disappearance, but Chief Crandall stated yesterday afternoon that there had been no inquiry for a person whose initials were "A. N." The initials on the shirt and engraved on the ring found on the body and published yesterday afternoon were the means of locating the relatives of the drowned man, Peter Nelson, employed at the tailor shop of M. L. Parker, and Louis Nelson, employed by Nelson & Swanson, readily identifying the remains as that of their brother.

The brothers of the dead man believe that his death was accidental, for the reason that he was not despondent, and while out of work at the time of his death, could easily have found employment. At the time of his disappearance he told his brothers that he intended to start for Kansas City. Other people that were acquainted with Nelson say that he had been drinking heavily for some days, and that his nerves were so unstrung that he could not work.

Andrew Nelson belonged to the Tailors' union, and at a meeting of that organization last evening arrangements were made to take charge of the funeral, which was held from Durkan & Crawford's undertaking rooms at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The decedent was a widower and left no children. He was about 34 years of age.

HER DRESS

Hung Over the Electric Light and Caught Fire.

Massillon, Ohio, June 26.—Miss Emma Schultzer, who said she came from a small town near Cincinnati, arrived at the Hotel Conrad. The room to which she was shown was lighted by electricity. Being unable to sleep with a light burning, she attempted to blow out the incandescent lamp when she was ready to retire. But the harder she blew the brighter the light seemed to become. So at last, in desperation and with the conviction that if the light could not be put out it could not burn, she hung her dress over it and thus effectually darkened the room.

The clothes caught fire and the smoke, pervading the entire floor, caused guests to run from their rooms in excitement, thinking the house afire. Miss Schultzer's room was broken open and she was found in a state of almost suffocation. Her clothing was ruined and some of the furniture of the room was burning. A sharp fight was required to extinguish the blaze.

SHOT AT SIGHT

Former Chief of Police of Seattle Killed In Drug Store.

Was Shot By John Considine, Member of Sporting Fraternity.

Both Men Were Looking For Trouble and Got It.

Seattle, Wash., June 26.—John W. Considine, one of the promoters of the Standard gambling house and the People's theater, yesterday afternoon shot and killed former Chief of Police W. L. Meredith. The shooting occurred in Guy's drug store on the corner of Second avenue and Yesler way, in the heart of the city. Considine was also wounded slightly in the head by a ball from a double-barreled shotgun in Meredith's hands. The stories of the shooting are conflicting, and it cannot be determined who was the aggressor. The men had threatened to shoot on sight and both were prepared for trouble. The drug store at the time of the shooting was crowded with people, and one bystander was shot through the arm by a stray bullet. Meredith was killed while struggling with John Considine and Tom Considine, who had come to his brother's aid. Three bullets from Considine's revolver fired at short range pierced Meredith's body, one in the head, another in the chest and another in the abdomen. Considine was at once arrested by Sheriff Cudihee and two officers, who were in the drug store when the fatal shots were fired. He was taken to police headquarters and from there transferred to the county jail in a closed carriage. There was some talk of lynching in the crowd which gathered about the scene of the shooting.

Considine and Meredith had been enemies for about three years, although they were prior to that time warm personal friends and associates together in the theatrical business in Spokane. Meredith, who resigned his office as chief of police last Saturday on account of pressure brought to bear upon him by Mayor Humes, was a city detective before being made chief. While in the subordinate position he and Considine never spoke, but avoided open battle. After Meredith was made chief, however, he served notice on Considine that the latter could not remain in the city and do business, and followed the threat by making several police orders which affected Considine's business. In retaliation Considine publicly made charges of corruption in office against Meredith and reiterated them until the law and order league took the matter up and called for a council investigation of the police department. A council committee made a report to Mayor Humes advising the removal of Meredith and one of his detectives. Mayor Humes thereupon requested Meredith's resignation.

Meredith was a son of W. M. Meredith, of Chicago, chief of the National Bureau of Engraving and Printing. Considine belongs to a family well known in Eastern sporting circles and has a wide acquaintance throughout the United States. He was formerly a member of the Chicago police department and took part in the raid on the Haymarket meeting that led to the anarchists' bomb-throwing.

WOMAN'S VENGEANCE.

Publicly Whipped Man Who Traduced Her Character.

Lincoln, Neb., June 26.—Mrs. H. C. Tieman, a comely woman of 26 years, who has figured in Lincoln society functions, and whose character, acquaintances say, is without reproach, publicly horsewhipped Robert Van Brunt, a railroad man, Monday evening. The place was public, a street corner, the weapon a short raw-hide, which the woman used viciously, leaving two crimson welts on the face of her victim.

Mrs. Tieman says Van Brunt has traduced her character, continuously hounded and insulted her. Monday, she says, he telephoned her, asking an appointment. She consulted the police and was advised to have the man arrested or horsewhip him, and decided on the latter course.

Mrs. Tieman says she did not complain to her husband, a Union Pacific conductor, because she feared a shooting affray.

MAY RETALIATE.

Italians Discuss the American Sugar Regulations.

Rome, June 26.—Word reaches this city that the Italian chamber of commerce in London is about to convene a special meeting to discuss Secretary Gage's action in connection with Italian sugar. Llare Allatini, president of the chamber, is quoted as saying that he believes it is highly probable that Italy will adopt retaliatory measures. He said:

"I consider America's action very hard, especially at present, when she is rich and prosperous. She ought to be willing to extend a helping hand to other countries, instead of grasping every possible advantage for herself. It is only human nature if other countries seek to offset such a course."

The sugar interest of Italy is its most recent development. The government is encouraging the growth of the beet root for the purpose of improving the condition of the peasantry.

LIGHTNING

Struck and Fired College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Chicago, June 26.—During a heavy thunder storm last night a bolt of lightning struck the College of Physicians & Surgeons, Harrison street between Wood and Honore streets. The fire which followed the lightning in a short time destroyed the college building which is one of the finest of its kind in the West. Almost before the first fire engine had arrived the flames had spread all through the five stories of the building. Adjoining the college is the smaller building of the West Side hospital which was filled with patients, about 100 being in the various wards. As soon as it was seen the college could not be saved and that its walls were liable to fall at any time the work of removing the patients from the hospital began, most of them being taken to the county hospital one square distant. None of the hospital patients were injured.

The College of Physicians & Surgeons is the medical department of the University of Illinois, situated at Champaign, Ills. The loss on building and equipment is practically total and will approximate $200,000.

PRINCIPLES

Far More Important Than Men, Says W. J. Bryan.

Buffalo, June 26.—The following over the signature of Wm. J. Bryan, appears in the Times, Mr. Norman E. Mack's paper:

"I am not only not a candidate for any office, but I have no candidate in mind for any office. My interest centers in principles and men are important only as they aid in carrying out these principles.

"The Democratic party stands for definite, positive, principles and unless I mistake the sentiments of the masses the voters will insist upon adhering to these principles in spite of the threats of reorganizers. Those who argue from the standpoint of expediency will not have influence with the voters because no one can say what is expedient. We may deserve to win and yet lose, but it still remains that to deserve to win is the surest road to success."

TOWNE'S NEW COMPANY.

Huntley Oil and Refining Company Organized.

Beaumont, Tex., June 26.—Another new oil company, in which ex-United States Senator Charles A. Towne and Governor Benton McMillin, of Tennessee, are largely interested, was chartered in Beaumont on Saturday last. It is known as the Huntley Oil and Refining company, and has a capital stock of two and a half millions. Among the officers and directors are: D. H. Hardy, former secretary of state; S. B. Cooper, congressman from the Second district of Texas; I. D. Polk, the Beaumont candidate; Charles A. Towne, ex-United States senator from Minnesota; Benton McMillin, governor of Tennessee; Tom C. Swope, of Beaumont; A. B. Duncette, of the land department of the Southern Pacific railroad, and E. L. Chappius, general auditor for Cluett, Peabody & Co. Tom C. Swope is to be secretary.

The company owns some twelve hundred acres of land lying in a circle around the Beaumont gushers and extending through Sour Lake, Saratoga and on to Nacogdoches, practically covering the entire southern center of the oil business with its holdings.

Arrangements have been made for the commencement of the development of the property within the next thirty days, and operations will be carried on in all four of the above mentioned holdings.

A SQUALLY COURTSHIP.

Why Sartoris-Balfour Engagement Was Broken.

London, June 26.—Vivian Sartoris and Archibald Balfour found their courtship and engagement so squally that they decided not to venture upon the stormy sea of matrimony.

This is the explanation of the broken engagement that their relatives give. The granddaughter of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant and the brother-in-law of the Hon. Alfred Littleton and distant cousin of Arthur Balfour, the leader in the house of commons, are persons who know their own minds, and the end of their idyll, though prosy, is called by their friends a triumph of common sense.

They met barely eighteen months ago at a party given by an aunt of Archibald Balfour's at which Miss Sartoris was chaperoned by her late father's cousin, Henry Gordon. Another party brought them together a few weeks later. Their engagement was announced soon afterward. But familiarity increased only their mutual respect and failed to fan the flame of love.

Tiffs were frequent, and more than once the engagement was broken, but the quarrels were as frequently patched up through the good offices of Mrs. Gordon.

About a fortnight ago they had a hot quarrel over furnishing and other topics connected with the marriage, and by mutual consent they decided that nothing but misery could follow if they were to take the step that would bind them to each other forever. At a meeting of representatives of both families it was decided that the interests of the two most concerned demanded that no attempt should be made to heal this latest breach, and so the engagement was broken off.

Dyspeptics cannot be long lived because to live requires nourishment. Food is not nourishing until it is digested. A disordered stomach cannot digest food. It must have assistance. Kodol Dyspepsia Cure digests all kinds of food without aid from the stomach, allowing it to rest and regain its natural functions. Its elements are exactly the same as the natural digestive fluids and it simply can't help but do you good. Max Wirth.

RELIGIOUS EXPANSION.

Million Dollars Donated For the People's Church.

Chicago, June 26.—Official announcement has been made that the People's Church of America, which has been incorporated in this state for the purpose of extending religious work throughout the country along the lines followed by Dr. H. W. Thomas in Chicago, not only now has at hand $1,000,000, the gift of a friend of the movement, but that the donor has expressed his readiness to double his benefaction at any time the money may be needed.

It is also said that several other rich men have promised liberal donations as soon as the work begins to spread. This announcement was made by George W. Bowman, through whose efforts the $1,000,000 donation was made, and who acted as the representative of the donor in making arrangements and signing the papers in connection with the gift.

Mr. Bowman intimated that the munificent giver was a wealthy Western mine operator, but declined to give his name for the reason, he said, that it would result in a great amount of bother to his friend.

A WARM TIME.

Aida Blair and Her Third Husband In Hot Water.

New York, June 26.—The sensational melodrama in which Miss Aida Blair figured so long on New York and other stages has been having its counterpart at domestic life, with Miss Blair as the central figure, according to stories from Sunny Italy. As heroine of "Sporting Life," last season and the year before, Miss Blair gained first the attention and later the ardent affection of Dr. Frederick Tagliavia-Tanini, who lived in Thirty-fourth street and had an office in Fifth avenue. The doctor, although small, proved a bundle of energy in his determination to woo and win Miss Blair. He has money, and the pathway of the actress was a veritable bower of roses after he succeeded in meeting her. Miss Blair was then living at 625 W. Forty-fifth street, where her brother, Dr. Goldmann, still lives.

One day while the doctor was visiting Miss Blair a woman, who represented herself as his wife, called and there was a scene which startled the neighborhood. The doctor denied marriage to the woman, who soon after returned to her home in Italy, whence she had come about the time Dr. Tagliavia-Tanini came here. Within a few weeks Miss Blair became the doctor's wife, and from a hard working actress she was transformed into a matron, with maid, butler and footman, and a victoria and runabout in which to take her daily spins.

Mrs. Tagliavia-Tanini, some weeks ago, conceived a fondness for European travel, and persuaded the doctor to show her his ancestral halls and other things. From all accounts they are now sorry they took the trip, for the woman who in this city represented herself as the doctor's wife has been seeing to it that they should have none too many roses in Italy. She has been threatening [illegible] sunny sorts of dire disaster on the heads of the devoted pair, and has been making their stay decidedly uncomfortable, to say the least.

Miss Blair got her third husband in Dr. Tagliavia-Tanini, although still she is a very young woman. She is a brunette of large build. She was originally Ida Goldmann, the daughter of a well-to-do Philadelphia merchant. Her first husband was a man named Ringwood, by whom she had one child. She later married Dr. Blair, and with him moved to Minneapolis, where the husband built up quite a practice. But their married life was most unhappy, and the wife, taking the name of Aida Blair, strove for forgetfulness of her married woes in playing adventuress roles on the stage. During the run of the "Sporting Duchess," at the Academy of Music several years ago, she was the understudy of Miss Elita Proctor Otis, and several times played the star's role. In "Sporting Life," last season and the one before, she received favorable notice.

HIS LIFE SAVED

By Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"I am sure that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at one time saved my life," says A. E. Lafalette, of Gregory Landing, Clark county, Missouri. "I was in such bad shape that the doctors said I could not live. When I was at the lowest ebb, one of my neighbors brought in a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I took it and got instant relief. I soon got up and around. That was nine years ago and I am still in good health. Since then that medicine has always been in my house and always will be. It is the best on earth." For sale at Boyce's drug store.

HAUNTED ELEVATOR

Great Northern Steel House Getting a Reputation.

Said to Have Trouble In Keeping Night Watchman.

Hear Sounds of Spooks and Their Nerve Weakens.

A haunted elevator is something new in the supernatural line. Usually houses that have the reputation of being haunted are the old and rickety and dilapidated. In this case the building is new and large and handsome, for it is the brand new Great Northern elevator in Superior that popular reports say is equipped with a full line of able bodied and very noisy ghosts.

The story is that the elevator company is unable to keep watchmen in the elevator because they hear noises that alarm them so that nothing will induce them to stay more than a night or two. The result is that the company is offering $4 a day for night watchmen, and while this tempting wage induces many men to attempt the job, it is said none of them will stay, even at wages that are higher than they ever earned before and higher than they can expect to be offered again.

During the construction of the Great Northern elevator a number of men were killed. One report gives the number at five and another at eight, but the smaller number of them is more nearly correct. This fact is remembered when the watchmen begin to hear noises about the elevator in the mystic hours, and the combined effect on their nerves of the noises and the recollection is disastrous.

Watchmen who have been scared out say that their experience is something like this: They come there, with or without a belief in the existence of diaphonous visitors from another world, but with their nerves braced up to stand almost anything, and a determination to say there and earn that $4 per day. Everything goes along smoothly during the early part of the night and they begin to feel that their predecessors must have been alarmed at nothing, and that they are going to pull through all right.

Along about 1 or 2 o'clock in the morning, when everything is still as a grave yard and the watchman's fears have died away, he is feeling as chipper as you please over the absence of supernatural manifestations and the thought of what he will do with his $4 per day. Then, away up on the top floor comes a crash that can be heard throughout the great structure, and the watchman's blood freezes in his veins. The noise is described differently, some of the watchmen distinguishing the proper accompaniment of ghost stories, a rattling of chains and a chorus of groans, while others say the sound is like a piece of sheet iron being dragged over the floor. The latter sound is strongly reminiscent of stage thunder.

The watchman grasps his lantern and makes his way up the stairs toward the top of the elevator. The sounds die away on his approach, and again a hush settles over the building, only broken by the footsteps of the watchman, who is bravely mounting the stairs. Then without a moment's warning, there is another furious outbreak of the appalling sounds, and with his hair erect and beads of sweat starting on his brow, the watchman beats a hasty retreat, going down the stairs nine steps at a time.

That is the way the story runs. The elevator people laugh at the story, but, of course, they have not remained in the building over night, as the watchmen have. The fact remains that noises are heard and that watchmen refuse to spend more than a night or two in the building. The experiment of having two watchmen to bear each other company has been tried with indifferent success.

The peculiarity of the sounds, according to the descriptions of those who say they sound like the agitation of sheet iron, might have ground for a plausible explanation of them. It may be that a sheet of roofing is loose and that the wind causes it to make a racket. But to this the watchmen say that in that case the noises would be heard in the daytime, and would not be heard when there is no wind. Now, they say, they are heard usually about the same time in the small hours and that regardless of whether or not there is wind.

AGAINST IT.

Conference Committee Does Not Favor City Purchasing Agent.

The conference committee, composed of the mayor and heads of the different city departments, met in the council chamber late yesterday afternoon. The principal business that came up was that of reaching a decision regarding the creation of a new city office, that of purchasing agent, proposed some time ago. After some discussion, the proposition was turned down, the committee considering the idea impracticable, one of the main objects being that the charter does not provide for such an officer and there would be a doubt as to the legality of his tenure of office. The discussion ended with a resolution by the committee to be sent to the city council notifying that body that the committeee does no approve of the idea. The tenor of the discussion against the proposed officer, outside of the absence of charter provision, was that the different departments have widely diverging needs and that one man could not familiarize himself with the needs of all in a manner to make him a capable officer.

The idea of a purchasing agent for the city was suggested some time ago by the committee that investigated the charges of extravagance and carelessness of expenditure in the health department last spring. The matter was brought before the council and referred to the conference committee.

Nothing else of importance came before the committee yesterday outside of the routine reports.

Seven days before the Fourth

It's getting near to the Fourth—seven days between—only six shopping days to prepare in. The city will have on her best bib and tucker, and will give her visiting thousands a royal welcome and splendid time. Amid the hustle and bustle of preparation there's little time for thought. The next seven days are all that are left for preparation.

Tomorrow will be about the best time for leisure shopping. We are making it a strong object to trade tomorrow by offering hosts of special inducements on goods not to be bought a little later, for they'll all be gone.

Thursdays are always busy days at The Glass Block. Always favorable for frugal shoppers. But there never was a Thursday so full of good bargains as tomorrow will be—the last Thursday before the Fourth.

THE WEATHER.

United States Agricultural Department, weather bureau, Duluth. Synopsis of weather conditions for the twenty-four hours ending at 7 a. m. (Central time), June 26.—Very warm weather continues in all districts except over extreme western Lake Superior and sections west of the 100th meridian. Showers fell over the lake region, Ohio valley, Tennessee, South Carolina, Northwest Canada, Oregon, Montana and North Dakota; moderately heavy at Winnipeg, Qu Appelle and Williston. The barometer remains high over Eastern and North Pacific states, and low in the Northwest—the center of the low being near Bismarck. The winds in the lake region are generally fresh easterly and southerly, with fog areas on Superior.

Morgan's Great Railroad Syndicate.

The magnitude of the operations of the Morgan railroad syndicate is appreciated by few people. It has virtually secured control of eleven large systems, aggregating a length of 55,592 miles, or more than double the circuit of the globe. The total milegge of the United States is about 192,000. That of South America is about 26,000 miles of road. The total capitalization of United States railroads is about $11,000,000,000, which does not include the floating debt. This syndicate, then, represents more than one-fourth of the railroad mileage of the United States, a capital of more than $3,000,000,000, and an annual earning capacity of $300,000,000. Its magnitude as compared with the railroad system of any foreign country makes the foreign systems seem very small. Russia, with her enormous area, has but 27,000 miles of road. Germany has 29,000; France, 23,000, and Great Britain about 21,500. Recently The Herald published a Washington dispatch which said there was considerable talk in financial and political circles concerning the taking over of the railroad systems of the country by the government. It was stated that the concentration of railroad interests makes such a move an easy possibility and that the railroad magnates are willing to turn over the systems at a fair valuation. Probably this will be done eventually. When the process of concentration has finally placed three or four men in political control of the entire railroad system of the United States, these interests can be easily transferred to the government.

Disbanding the Volunteer Army.

On next Monday many men who have worn the shoulder straps during the past two years will don the clothes of civilians, while officers who have held advanced rank as volunteers will go back to their old grades in the regular army. On June 30 the volunteer army will be disbanded. Secretary Root will be able to redeem his promise to get the volunteers from Cuba in time to be mustered out on June 30, although this appeared to be impossible six months ago. Unless some unforseen obstacle shall prevent, the entire volunteer forces, with the exception of one company of infantry, will be mustered out on home territory by June 30. The single exception is a company of the Forty-second infantry. While returning to the United States in the transport Kintuk, this company encountered the plague at Nagasaki and was detained there for several weeks. The Kintuk is now en route for San Francisco, but cannot arrive there in time to permit the soldiers to be mustered out by June 30. There are also about 10,000 volunteers on the Pacific, bound for San Francisco, and all of them are expected to reach port some time this week. They are the troops of the Forty-seventh regiment, on the Thomas; the Forty-third, on the Kilpatrick; the Forty-fourth, on the Logan, and the Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth, on the grant. The Ohio, carrying the Forty-second, has arrived and her men will be discharged at once. The Thomas is due now, the Kilpatrick will get in on June 28 or 29, the Logan is expected on June 25 and the Grant will arrive on June 27.

Rapid progress is being made in organizing the regular army under the new law. Under the new order of things the regular army will consist of the following forces: Cavalry, 15,840; artillery, 18,862; infantry, 38,520. The total strength of the army will embrace 77,287 men, and in addition to those of infantry, artillery and cavalry, will include detachments at West Point, bands, signal corps men, ordnance department, quartermaster sergeants, recruiting parties, etc. This number will be sufficient for the demands of the United States, in all probability, for a long time to come.

THE FIGHT ON EVANS.

The enemies of Commissioner of Pensions H. C. Evans are getting very restless again. The president does not mope fast enough to suit them. They insist that Evans shall be removed, and removed at once. On Saturday three of the most bitter opponents of the pension commissioner called on the president and demanded the official scalp of Mr. Evans. These men were Corporal Tanner, who was commissioner at one time, and who ran the office wide open, and Representatives Brownlow and Gibson of Tennessee. The impression has gone abroad of late that the president does not intend to remove Evans, and this report undoubtedly spurred the enemy into activity. In speaking of the matter, Corporal Tanner said:

"The old soldiers have by no means ceased their fight on Mr. Evans, and will not until he retires from the office. I do not know whether it is a fact that is known to the public or not, but it is true, nevertheless, that the national Republican committee, prior to the last election, promised faithfully that Mr. Evans would be retired from the office of pension commissioner upon the beginning of President McKinley's second term in case of his re-election.

"We have that promise in black and white. It is in the form of a letter written by the national committee to Gen. Sickles, and he still has that communication.

"That is why I believe that Mr. Evans' successor will soon be appointed. I do not, of course, know who the man will be, but we hope he will be more friendly to the old soldiers than the present commissioner has been. At any rate, the national committee made that definite promise and I believe it will be kept."

Mr. Tanner intimated, although he did not say so definitely, that it was because of this promise that many of the old soldiers were kept in line for the Republican ticket.

This of itself is a sufficient reason why Commissioner Evans should be kept in office, and with a marvelous record in his work there is double reason for his retention. It is believed, however, that pressure will be brought so hard on the president that he will remove Evans, but not before there is another position open equally as good to which he can appoint him. McKinley is a politician, and right cuts little figure when it comes in contact with his party duty.

The public should not permit itself to be deceived as to the reasons for a change in the pension commissionership, if President McKinley should yield to the pressure. The worst offense that Mr. Evans has committed is that he has enforced the pension laws without fear or favor—a rare public virtue that does not please those who desire to loot the treasury. He has merely insisted that claims be not honored unless they conformed to the conditions which congress has fixed. The result is that the pension agents and attorneys have denounced him and cunningly instilled into the minds of many G. A. R. veterans a spirit of hostility towards Commissioner Evans. The same scheme of persistently vilifying him has been pursued as was practiced in the case of Judge Lochren of this state, when he was pension commissioner under President Cleveland. No incumbent of that position ever discharged its duties more fairly and conscientiously than did Judge Lochren, yet he was foully abused and misrepresented. Similar tactics have been pursued towards Mr. Evans. He may be decapitated for doing his duty, but he will retire with honor and with the respect of every man who admires an honest and faithful public official.

THE ALEUTIAN ISLANDS.

A new and extremely rich gold territory may soon be the scene of a rush of prospectors and miners. It is stated that mining experts, sent out by capitalists, report that there are rich gold deposits in the Aleutian islands. Some rumors are to the effect that deposits found there are richer than any yet discovered on our continent—though such reports must always be discounted to an indefinite extent. Heretofore the gold discoveries in Alaska and the Northwest Territory have attracted immigrants and prospectors to the frigid interior regions of the Upper Yukon, or the scarcely less inhospitable district of storm-swept Cape Nome. But the Aleutian islands are not only somewhat freer from the wintry rigors of the Alaskan interior, but are, or may be made, more accessible for work, and are more inhabitable than the country back of Cape Nome.

These islands extend from the southern point of the Alaskan peninsula, southwest and west by south, for a distance of over 3000 miles, to a point in the Pacific nearly opposite the northern boundary of Washington. The more important of them form a territory some 1500 miles in length, inhabited, when the Russians possessed Alaska and the Aleutian islands, by a native population of 25,000. While the islands are mountainous, grain, grasses and vegetables are grown, and cattle grazing is profitable. These islands lie on the main ocean route from San Francisco, Portland and Tacoma, to Japan and China, forming a sort of halfway station between these Pacific coast ports and the Orient, as the Hawaiian islands do from San Francisco, Los Angeles or the coast of Mexico.

It is remarkable that these islands have not been explored and exploited more, for they extend in a nearly straight line almost two-thirds of the way across the Pacific ocean from Alaska to Asia—a great, wide, broken reef. They are capable of sustaining a considerable population. Unalaska is 125 miles long by from thirty to fifty miles wide, and has several good harbors. The winters are said not to be so severe as in the Dakotas and Manitoba, and stock can be raised there more easily than in Montana. Thus these islands, of considerable importance in themselves, are on the very highway of commerce between our Pacific coast ports and the Orient. The Pacific cable should have been laid by this route—or, rather, another one should be laid via Alaska and the southern coast of these islands from some Puget sound port to Japan. The Hawaiian islands are important, and steamers from San Francisco, or most of them, will continue to take that route, but the Northern steamers will continue to skirt Unalaska and its neighboring islands, which promise to develop into a territory of importance almost equal, possibly, to the Alaska mainland itself.

If the rumors of gold discoveries in the great Aleutian reef should prove true, attention would be drawn to these islands as never before, and their rapid development would be the result.

DULUTH'S RETAIL TRADE.

The retail trade of Duluth has expanded during the past few years in a most encouraging way. If the figures showing the volume of business done in this line a decade ago and those representing transactions during the past twelve months were contrasted the increase indicated thereby would appear almost incredible. Yet the wonderful charge that has taken place is evident to those who have resided here during that time and closely watched the march of events.

The local retail trade has kept abreast with the marvelous growth of the population of the city and of the vast and rapidly settling surrounding territory, and there are those who believe that it will show as high a ratio of sales per capita as any city in the United States having the same proportion of customers. The character and size of the leading retail establishments in all lines will compare favorably with those of cities of much larger population. In fact, in point of appearance, in elaborateness of decorations and the attractive arrangement of their wares, there are retail stores in Duluth that are equal to the handsomest in the country.

With a constantly growing urban population, with towns and villages springing up all round and brought into easy and rapid communication by rail, and with the accession to the army of customers that will come from the steady settlement of the northern part of the state, the retail merchants of Duluth are destined to increase their business at a more rapid rate of development within the next few years than even the marvelous growth their trade has exhibited in the past. Their success proves that Duluth is a good place to buy and sell in, as well as to live in.

The use of fireproof wood on warships is likely to receive a setback if the recommendations of the board of construction, which has been making a series of experiments on the use of the wood, are accepted by the navy department. It has been found that, in addition to deteriorating somewhat with age, fireproof wood has a bad effect on certain metals coming in contact with it. The great advances that have been made in adapting metal for various uses on shipboard have also tended to displace fireproof wood. Steel and iron are now used for purposes formerly served by wood treated with the fireproofing process. Chairs, desks, chests, tables and other furniture on shipboard are now made of metal, while the floors, walls and ceilings are of the same material. The board recommends that with the exception of torpedo boats and torpedo boat destroyers, fireproof wood be not used below the protective decks of our warships. According to the report it was found that fireproof wood is not altogether satisfactory for weather decks, the material losing its fireproof qualities when exposed to the weather and when subject to constant wetting.

The residents of Summit avenue, St. Paul, are much excited over the statement that the owner of a lot on that beautiful residence street intends to erect upon it an eight-story apartment house, and that it is to be located close to the street, which would completely ruin the finest part of Summit avenue, the chief beauty of which consists in the broad lawns in front of the houses. Most of the residences are fifty-to sixty feet back from the street line. The owner of the lot in question lives in Buffalo and cares nothing about this feature. The residents, however, are threatening vengeance if he should carry out his plans and even the staid old Pioneer Press talks like an anarchist about using dynamite to blow up the apartment house. There should be some way to prevent this proposed destruction of Summit avenue's beauty.

For a representative who has the reputation of being the plainest looking man in congress, Frank Eddy of this state thinks he is doing pretty well. "I just had a letter from a friend out home telling me he had named a brand of cigars after me," said Mr. Eddy in his slow, solemn way to the Washington correspondent of the Boston Transcript. "Wanted my photo to be reproduced on the box. And in the very same mail was solicited for my picture and a recommendation for a patent medicine. I told them I would do anything to accommodate except take the medicine. Now I think I am eligible for the New York hall of fame."

The subject of crowded schools is under discussion in Chicago. The trouble with a crowded school is that there is little chance for the individuality of a scholar to assert itself. Under the public school system at its best there is a tendency toward uniformity. But when the classes are large and the teacher cannot get into touch with the individual pupils this tendency is increased. Originality is crushed, and ultimately the child gets a cast of the machine-made article.

A Long Island boy is in an insane asylum from smoking 100 cigarettes a day and the opponents to cigarettes are holding him up as another illustration of the work of the deadly paper pipe. The chances are that if the boy had not smoked cigarettes he would have done something else that would have landed him in the asylum. It is hard work to restrain a fool as long as he is bound to be a fool.

The Los Angeles police commission has adopted a rule prohibiting policemen from visiting saloons or smoking while on duty, and the Portland Telegram expresses a fear that after a while the liberty of policemen may be so restricted that they will not be permitted to spend most of their time loafing and talking politics.

Mr. Bryan has formally stated that he is not a candidate for any office. Possibly this statement may stop the publication of a few of the many falsehoods circulated about his motives and plans, but it is doubtful. There are some editors that could not sleep if they failed to publish a daily attack on Bryan.

In Russia the politicians anticipated amnesties, decorations, reforms and society fetes, and the taxpayers were looking forward to the remission of important state taxes had a boy been born to the czar instead of a girl. But there are some things that even emperors of all the Russias cannot control.

The humors of protection are incomparable. Nearly 1200 imported canaries have been "held up" by New York custom officials because they are classified in the schedules as "chickens."

Yonkers Statesman: Bill—When a man is in debt I think he ought to try and get out.

Jill—Do you mean out of debt or out of town?

Detroit Free Press: "You ought to think more of others."

"But I do. When the first of the month comes around I am as blue as can be, wondering what my creditors will do."

Philadelphia Press: Rivers—You will do well to be careful, old fellow. A young man in Indiana was sentenced to the penitentiary the other day for stealing an umbrella.

Brooks—He deserved to be. He confessed.

Judge: Rye—I hear you have secured a tip-top engagement for the summer.

Alto—Yes; that is, I'm engaged to play in a roof garden company.

Puck: Bobby—Pa, when does a man get too old to learn?

Father—When he gets too old to marry, my son.

Brooklyn Life: Laura—Her father cast her off without a penny when she married without his consent.

Claire—How did they manage?

"Oh, they published two volumes of their love letters."

Detroit Journal: "His manners are exceedingly boorish, even if he does inherit a fortune."

"Yes, it must have been a silver knife that was in his mouth when he was born."

Chicago Tribune: "Did your husband hold any public office?" asked the reporter.

"Yes, sir," said the inconsolable widow. "He was the Righthand Supporter of the Vice Patriarch of the Ancient and Illustrious Order of Ballyboos."

Washington Star: "It is my opinion," said one sage, "that a man who has a college degree is very likely to be successful in life."

"Yes," answered the other, "and it is a rule that works both ways. A man who is successful in life is very likely to get a college degree."

Harper's Bazar: The Father—How many detectives do you think will be enough to guard the wedding presents?

Chief—About how many guests will there be?

Chicago Post: "It's getting so a man can't keep a dog around the house any more," commented the dog owner bitterly after reading the rules and regulations for dog days.

"Oh, yes, he can—if he keeps him around the house," was the reply. "The trouble is dogs are too often kept on the streets or in the neighbors' yards."

In the Palace of the Czar.

The Czar was lounging on the throne,
The doctor paced the hallski,
When through the palace came a faint
And feeble sort of squallski.
The doctor hurried to the Czar,
And cried: "I wish you joyski,
You are once more a papavitch,
But—it is not a boyski."

The Czar laid down his sceptervitch,
And said: "It makes me sickski
To think that it is not for me
To play with little Nickski.
'Tis bad enough to walk the floor
When teethoutch annoyski,
But it would not affect me so
If it had been a boyski."

The Czar walked to the palace gate,
Unheeding bomb or mineski,
And nailed thereon a very big
And boldly lettered signski,
The subjects cried the Russian for
The French "Vive le Roiski."
Then read the signski, which announced
This:

WANTED HERE—
ONE BOYSKI.

—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

ALL AMERICAN.

London Mail: In the domestic life we have got to this: The average man rises in the mornin— from his New England folding bed, shaves with American soap and a Yankee safety razor, puts on his Boston boots over his socks from North Carolina, fastens his Connecticut braces slips his Waltham or Waterbury watch in his pocket, and sits down to breakfast. There he congratulates his wife on the way her Illinois straight front corset sets off her Massachusetts blouse, and he tackles his breakfast, where he eats bread made from prairie flour, tinned oysters from the Pacific coast, and a slice of Kansas City bacon, while his wife plays with a slice of Chicago ox tongue. The children are given American oats. At the same time he reads his morning paper printed by American machines and possibly on American paper.

He rushes out, catches the electric tram (New York) to Shepherd's Bush, where he gets in a Yankee elevator to take him on to the American-fitted electric railway to the city. At lunch time he hastily swallows some colt roast beef that comes from a cow in Iowa, and flavors it with the latest New England pickles, follows with a few Florida tinned peaches, and then soothes his mind with a couple of Virginia peaches.

To follow his course all day would be wearisome. But when evening comes he seeks relaxation at the latest American musical comedy, and finishes up with a couple of "little liver pills" "made in America."

Might Go Further.

Washington Times: As was expected, Mr. Bryan has very promptly disclaimed all connection with the third party movement now under way at Kansas City. This is all right as far as it goes, but it will be still better if Mr. Bryan will clearly and emphatically express his disapproval of the entire project.

Rhymed With It.

Boston Advertiser: What Roosevelt said when he learned of Platt's prediction regarding the next presidency of the United States was not "Odell!" though it may have sounded somewhat that way.

DAILY STORY.

Serpent of The Treasure.

BY DAVID ABBOTT PRATT.

(Copyright, 1901, William R. Miller.)

A man lay concealed beside the trail in the Calaveras foothills. Insects crawled undisturbed over his ragged raiment. Apparently, he was asleep, but in the crown of the sombero that covered his face were numerous openings, through one of which he peered intently, his eyes glistening evilly as they rested upon a far-away eminence, where a growing dust cloud marked the approach of a solitary horseman.

Heavily armed, the man's mission was obvious, and discovered by certain law-enforcing individuals would have resulted disastrously for him, a fact quite patent to the skulker himself. But his shrewdness and good luck having so frequently saved him from their vengeful hands, he had come to have scant regard for all sheriffs and vigilantes.

Jim Dunaway had a sanguinary record. Never inactive, he had terrorized the border settlements for years, perpetrating outrage after outrage upon law and order that sent posses of indignant men to scouring the hills sin fruitless quest of his lair. Time and again he was reported to have met death at the short end of a rope, but in each instance the victim proved to have been some innocent stranger, Jim always reappearing, more audacious than ever.

With the desperado attempts usually meant success, and when he succeeded, somebody suffered, for nothing was too reckless or lawless for him to undertake. And now he was waiting to consummate a most characteristic piece of villainy.

The cloud of dust that Dunaway watched with such feverish eagerness rapidly enlarged as the minutes passed. Both horse and rider were obscured by it, but the miscreant there in hiding would have wagered his life that the express rider, for whom he had waited so patiently, was concealed therein.

When the newcomer was at last discernible the outlaw saw a gentleman of middle age, arrayed in a worn tourist suit, and wearing hideous green glasses.

He was armed with a rifle and led a well-laden pack mule, jaded and worn.

An oath of chagrin rose to the outlaw's lips.

It was not the express rider after all. However, the stranger seemed promising plunder.

Resolutely Dunaway leveled his rifle and fired.

Another instant and he was leaning over his victim, rapidly rifling the dead man's pockets.

"Furies," he muttered in wrathful disappointment, "Nothing but a few worthless trinkets. But the pack—it may be filled with treasure."

Unsaddling the frightened burro, the scoundrel began overhauling the contents of the pack.

As he proceeded his face darkened.

What sort of a man was this?

His pack contained the oddest assortment of oddities imaginable—stones, bits of wood, stuffed birds, animals and reptiles, carefully pressed plants and flowers.

"Eureka."

He at length came to two iron-bound boxes of unequal size and weight.

With trembling fingers he grasped the smaller, subjecting it to a close examination.

It was securely fastened, not the slightest crack revealing itself under his careful scrutiny, and was very heavy.

Unhesitatingly he placed the chest upon the ground and sent a ponderous boulder crashing through its side.

A wealth of golden coins emptied themselves into the trail with a mellow jingle that was music to his villainous soul.

"Yellow birds! yellow birds!" he frantically screamed, grasping the precious bits of metal in his blood-stained fingers.

Minute after minute passed.

At length the wretch bethought himself of his danger and the resulting box.

Never doubting that it contained more treasure, he raised the box high above his head and sent it spinning against a rock.

Crash!—it splintered to fragments.

Whiz-z-z-z, br-r-r-r!—six feet of enraged Rocky Mountain rattlesnake launched itself at the road agent, burying its fangs in his quivering flesh.

A mad oath crashed from between the set teeth of the doomed wretch.

Snatching up the slimy coils of the angry reptile, he tore them in twain, madly trampling the writhing parts into a pulpy mass.

The deadly poison so copiously injected, soon began to take effect.

Dunaway staggered about like a drunken man, vainly searching the pack for liquor to allay his suffering.

His blood seemed on fire, his muscles paralyzed. As a strange, numbing sensation stole over him, heart and brain, he realized that the sum of his villainous career was rapidly sinking, and shriek after shriek pealed from his pallid lips.

Finall he sank to the earth, and, after a brief, contortionate struggle, lay still, his face buried in the dust of the trail.

Five minutes later, when the golden bars of sunset dimmed and purpled in the waning light, the belated express rider, passing with his treasure safe, discovered the man, the havoc he had wrought and the retribution he had found.

A DOLLAR BILL.

I.

Dear friend of mine—found when I deemed you lost,
By Fate's stern iron will,
The skies are clear; no more my barque is tossed—
I have you still!

Now do I sight the heaven—safe from sea;
And near the shore-lights shine;
And to that world which frowned so black on me
I cry: "Bring bread and wine!"

III.

'Fore heaven, a feast! • • • It was but yesternight
I starved along the street;
And now God's bread and blessing, and the light,
And comfort kind and sweet!

The Little Joker Idle.

Philadelphia Ledger: China seems to have comprehended the fact that the interest on her indemnity will not begin until the final papers have been signed.

Works on Both Sides.

Washington Post: The Republicans point their finger of scorn at New York and the Democrats utilize a similar digit in calling attention to Philadelphians. The theory of two wrongs constituting a right continues to do business in the political organizations.

Great Opportunities.

New York Tribune: What a wonderful era of generosity and good will to institutions of learning is that of the present! The ambitious boy or girl who desires a college training in these days in any part of this country experiences far less difficulty in obtaining it than did the generation of thirty years ago. If there are any Abraham Lincolns at humble firesides at the dawn of this century they need not confine their studies to borrowed books painfully conned by the flickering and uncertain light of pineknots. May there not be some little danger that to some extent here and there the higher education may be made too luxurious and too facile?

Observe the Proprieties.

New York Sun: There is something almost grewsome in the sight of the lawyer for the prosecution in a murder trial congratulating the lawyer for the defense over his efforts to get his man off. And the impression is only strengthened when the lawyer for the defense congratulates the lawyer for the prosecution over his brilliant efforts to send the accused to the electric chair. It is improper that these demonstrations should take place in the presence of the judge, jury and above all, of the prisoner. Do these men of law imagine that the most important thing about a capital trial is the opportunity it affords them to display their talents? Technically lawyers are educated gentlemen. As such ought they not observe the proprieties and reserve such demonstrations of reciprocal esteem for their private meetings? They are quite out of place in a court room. Let them be decent and if they can't be that, let them be as decent as they can.

TARIFF WAR WITH RUSSIA.

Philadelphia Ledger: Russia is determined to teach this country that one nation can sacrifice its nasal protuberance for the sake of displeasing his countenance quite as well as another.

New York Herald: Russia's action is a reminder that the high tariff advocates of the country have no monopoly of the protective policy. The exact value of Russian sugars imported last year was $340,000, whereas the Illinois Manufacturers' association, in its appeal for a reversal of the administration's ruling, estimates exports from the United States to Russia at $20,000,000 and the fact that they were largely increasing is not questioned.

Milwaukee Sentinel: The time has come when some person who has influence with Mr. Gage should gently but firmly urge him to take advice from the department of justice with a view of extracting himself from his present dilleuty. If he should continue on the course he has adopted he will inevitably destroy our Russian commerce, and he will not increase the friendship of that nation for the United States, a friendship that has stood the test of time and trial, a friendship that interposed the grim presence of the imperial navy between the republic and is enemies in an hour of great national peril. In this particular instance sentiment and practical common sense are in perfect alignment.

Baltimore American: This is getting to be a very serious matter. If the secretary wants to conduct tests in the higher mathematics concerning Russia's or any other country's sugar he should try his hand on mathematicians, and not on American commerce. Russia is willing, in spite of what has occurred, to forget and forgive. She will reduce the duties on all American goods tomorrow if this government will withdraw its uncalled for decision with regard to Russian sugar. She attaches no importance to the sugar, for very ... of it finds its way to the United States; but when the czar says he does not give a bounty to sugar, and everyone else except the secretary says so, too, it it not looked upon as a particularly high compliment for the government to say that he does. That the secretary will be forced to recede from his position goes without saying, and he can do so as gracefully now as later.

Fighting With a Handicap.

St. Paul Globe: Will Roosevelt, fighting from the poor vantage ground of the vice presidency, be courageous enough to fight against the annihilation which threatens him? Thereby hangs the issue of his fate.

A Rival of "the Peach."

New York World: Chauncey M. Depew's laurels are in danger now that John D. Rockefeller has blossomed into a humorist. Mr. Rockefeller's conversational millions will assure him considerable applause.

Claims to Consider.

Washington Post: Justice Harlan chews tobacco, plays golf and hails from Kentucky. Political parties in search of all-round presidential timber will do well to take the justice into consideration.

His Season to Make Trouble.

Washington Post: It appears that this is young Mr. McKisson's year for being a Republican, and he is making trouble for Mr. Hanna.

Sounds Like a Joke.

Baltimore American: Mr. Schwab asserts that he objected to being paid a million a year. Mr. Schwab is reaching his funny stage.

Will He Fling It Away?

Salt Lake Herald: It should be remembered that Mark Hanna has said nothing to indicate that he would refuse a third term.

His Reputation Safe.

Baltimore American: It was a good thing for Noah that he executed his naval maneuvers before Bob Evans' time.

Shall Precedent Be Ignored?

Springfield Republican: The Republican party has never nominated a New Yorker for president in its history, so what is the use of talking about New Yorkers? The vice presidency is as high as New York gets.

MAKING REPAIRS

Effect of Monday's Storm Is Being Rapidly Obliterated.

City Maintenance Fund Will Be Drawn Upon Considerably.

The thunderstorm that visited this city last Monday morning with such violence, left things rather demoralized. Although the cloudburst of July 1897, was about as fierce a visitation of the elements as anything could be, the one of June 1901 will go down in history as a close second and the old resident will date all of his stories from that time. The street car lines were rather badly damaged in some places, but the inconvenience to travelers was only temporary and the service is in good running condition again. The streets that were washed out are being fixed up temporarily and will stand travel, although they are not exactly the thing for bicycles without spring seats. The avenues have not fared so well and a number of them will need a good deal of work upon them to put them in good condition again.

Of course the damage where the storm sewers broke out was slight to the sewerage system, but the amount of money lost in delayed grading and ruined goods can hardly be computed. Where the break occurred at the foot of First avenue west, flooding the railway yards and carrying heavy timbers and rock onto the tracks, traffic was delayed several hours and the men did not finish opening the tracks until yesterday afternoon. At the Union depot, when the storm sewer broke and covered the cement floor with a foot or so of water, very little damage was done, but all of the water was not taken off until last night.

Some of the avenues in the East End of the city had just been fixed up with a covering of gravel and had been nicely smoothed off and put in condition for driving. The flood of water that swept down carried of nearly all of the new dressing and left the rocks and stones. Fifteenth avenue east, which is the thoroughfare to the boulevard, was left in bad shape from Third to Fifth, and a little above that. Between Fourth and Fifth a great gully from 6 inches to 2 feet deep yawns for the distance of the entire block near the gutter. The brick gutter has been partially undermined and in other places is heaved up.

The expense of making the repairs will take a pretty good sum out of the maintenance fund.

PROVOKED.

Anderson's Crime Prompted By His Wife's Apparent Misconducts.

Andrew Anderson, the Superior man who murdered his wife yesterday, was given a preliminary hearing in the municipal court this morning and waived examination. He was taken to the county jail to await trial on the charge of murder in the first degree. In the afternoon yesterday the coroner's jury returned a verdict charging him with the crime.

Not many additional facts in regard to the homicide were brought out yesterday. Anderson, undoubtedly, killed his wife while in a sudden frenzy of rage. He was preparing to build a fire when she entered the house in the morning and the first weapon he used was a stick of wood. He did did not kill his wife instantly, as she died an hour afterward at the Leslie hospital.

Anton Olson, who lives thirty feet in the rear of the Anderson home, was attracted by the woman's cries and ran over to the house. She was not badly hurt at that time, but Olson was ordered out of the house by the enraged murderer, and going to his own home donned his clothes and started out to seek an officer. While on the street he saw Anderson and pointed him out to a policeman. This was at least half an hour later than when Olsson was first attracted by the row. Anderson is a man of medium height and not heavily built and it is probable that if Olson had not been badly frightened he could have prevented the tragedy.

After Olson left the house Anderson dragged the screaming woman into the woodshed, where he seized a hammer and ferociously beat her over the head and face. Her nose was broken, the face battered beyond recognition and her skull beaten into a pulp. The murderer when taken was bespattered with blood from head to foot.

At the jail yesterday Anderson refused to discuss the crime with anybody. When shown the bloody weapons with which he killed his wife he showed no emotion—nor did he at any time.

It is alleged that Mrs. Anderson's life has not been above reproach for at least the past three years. In the evening before the murder she was seen leaving a hotel on Third street in company with a strange man. The next heard of her she was seen entering the home at about 5 o'clock. While the people express horror at Anderson's crime, there is apparently much sympathy for him, as it is thought he had great provocation. He is known as an industrious and sober citizen among his acquaintances.

A morbid crowd satisfied their curiosity at the morgue yesterday, which was crowded all day by people viewing the remains of the murdered woman. There were some women, who were attracted by the ghastly spectacle and small children clamored for admission. Some people made two visits during the day and evening, as late in the afternoon a floater could be viewed at the same place. It is to the credit of the officials that no children were admitted. Women came out of the morgue trembling with excitement and horror, but their curiosity was satisfied. Some of the male spectators were made faint by the gruesome spectacle.

FOUND AT SUPERIOR.

Life Saving Crew Raises a Body.

A floater was taken out of the harbor near the Eastern Minnesota flour sheds in West Superior yesterday. The Duluth life saving crew was searching for a missing man, said to be from Duluth, and found the body. The remains were taken to the Douglas county coroner's morgue, where John Benson viewed the body. Benson thinks the remains are those of Julius Olson, who is said to have been an employe of the shipbuilding company. Olson has been absent from his last known boarding place since about April 15, since which time he has not been seen by acquaintances. The body is greatly swollen and much decomposed, and the coroner is of the opinion that it has been in the water about six weeks. The man was dressed in ordinary workingman's clothes and there was nothing found on his person to make identification positive.

LEAVES THE NAVY.

William A. Harbour Takes a Wife.

Miss Eva Edwards and William A. Harbour were quietly married this morning by Dr. S. P. Long at the First Methodist church. The bride lives at Spirit Lake. The groom has just served his time in the United States navy, having enlisted here at the time of the breaking out of the Spanish-American war. He has had an interesting career during his service. He was master-at-arms on the Gloucester, the valiant boat that was commanded by Lieut. Wainright at the battle of Santiago and performed such daring and valiant service. He was also in the Chinese trouble and has returned from there. Having served his time he has forsaken the sea, taken unto himself a wife and will make Duluth his home.

FAMILY FOOD.

Crisp, Toothsome and Requires No Cooking.

A little boy down in N. C. asked his mother to write an account of how Grape-Nuts Food had helped their family.

She says Grape-Nuts was first brought to her attention on a visit to Charlotte, where she visited the mayor of that city, who was using the Food by the advice of his physician. She says: "They derive so much good from it that they never pass a day without using it. While I was there I used the Food regularly. I gained about 15 pounds, and felt so well that when I returned home I began using Grape-Nuts in the family regularly.

My little 18-months-old baby, shortly after being weaned, was very ill with dyspepsia and teething. She was sick nine weeks and we tried everything. She became so emaciated that it was painful to handle her, and we thought we were going to lose her. One day a happy thought urged me to try Grape-Nuts soaked in a little warm milk.

Well it worked like a charm, and she began taking it regularly and improvement set in at once. She is now getting well and round and fat as fast as possible and on Grape-Nuts.

Sometime ago a number of the family were stricken with La Grippe at the same time, and during the worst stages we could not relish anything in the shape of food but Grape-Nuts and oranges, everything else nauseated us.

We all appreciate what your famous food has done for our family."

CURIOSITY.

The Morbid Variety Freely Exhibited at Stable Fires.

A student of human nature could have had a good opportunity to exercise his brain, at the two barns where the fires occurred yesterday morning. The morbid curiosity shown by some people, especially women, were simply appalling. Twenty-seven horses were burned or suffocated and made a sight that was most pleasant to even the most hardened men. Almost all of the horses were disemboweled and in attitudes that suggested the intense pain that they must have suffered during the fire, and it is beyond comprehension how anyone could take pleasure in the sight. An incident that happened behind the Stewart barn this morning shows that animals are not built like men, as horses could hardly be made to pass in the alley where a dead one was lying.

On the other hand, yesterday afternoon, as the men who were taking the bodies away were cutting them up, the Stewart barn was filled with a curious throng. Women seemed to be especially anxious to see the dead horses, and insisted upon being admitted. Some, however, found that their courage failed them and two nearly fainted. After this, Mr. Stewart gave orders that women should not be allowed in the barn.

One of the two black horses that Stewart used in his horse was rescued, although it was thought for a while that it would have to be shot. This morning the prospects are that it will live, as it was not burned, but rather badly overcome by smoke. The horse that was saved from the Barrett barn is not dead yet, although the veterinary surgeons have advised shooting to put it out of pain.

Barrett's son, a lad of 14 years had a couple of rabbits in the loft of his father's stable, and after the fire one was found still alive, the other being suffocated.

Charlie Willis, the night watchman at Stewart's stable, who came so near losing his life in attempting to rescue his favorite team, is not seriously injured as was first supposed and was able to be out for a short time last evening.

Hundreds of lives saved every year by having Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil in the house just when it is needed. Cures croup, heals burns, cuts, wounds of every sort.

THE FUNERAL SERVICE.

Requiem Mass Over Remains of Sister Ignatius.

The funeral of Sister M. Ignatius, who died Monday morning was held this morning at the Cathedral at 8:30 o'clock. A solemn requiem was sung and a large number of friends were present. The interment was in Calvary cemetery. The Sisters of St. Benedict are sorely grieved over her loss although death had been expected for some weeks past, she having had a lingering illness. She had been confined to her bed during the past two weeks, and although suffering much, was never heard to complain, so that when the final end came, well fortified by the consolation of religion, she quietly slept away.

Before her entrance into religion she was known as Josephine Polrier, daugater of Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Polrier. They had preceded her by an early death. Her mother died in December, 1897, and her father in November, 1900.

Her school life began at St. Thomas' Cathedral school. She received her first holy communion at the Cathedral and was a respected member of the parish and the sodality of the blessed Virgin Mary. She took a course at the High school and the Sacred Heart Academy, which she attended previous to her entrance into religion in 1898, when she received the veil from the hands of Rt. Rev. James McGolrick, who had given her her first holy communion some years before. She pronounced her simple vows on July 11, 1900, in the Cathedral. Sister Ignatius was in her twenty-first year at the time of her decease.

MUST NOT BLOCK ENTRY.

Capt. Gaillard Wants Smaller Rafts of Logs.

Capt. Gaillard has notified the lumbermen that he expects the rules and regulations governing the size of rafts that may be brought into the harbor through the entries will be adhered to. Some days ago in one of the heavy winds a couple of rafts that were very large were brought through the Superior entry, the wind being too heavy to allow them to be made over outside. This was reported to Capt. Gaillard who notified the companies and result was a meeting yesterday at which all of the companies were represented.

Capt. Gaillard gave the lumbermen to understand that he expects the rules to be lived up to. He wants string booms brought through the entry and not the big bag booms that are used on the lake.

Police Say No Forger Has Operated Around Here.

A special to the Pioneer Press at St. Paul, from New Richmond, Wis., last evening, said that warrants issued for one Harry L. Wagner in several adjoining counties disclosed one of the shrewdest and most extensive system of forgeries over worked in the Northwest; that Wagner had been operating for about a year and had victimized the cities and villages of West Superior, Ashland, Washburn, Duluth, Lake Nebagamon, Hawthorne, Spooner, Hudson and numerous other Northern Wisconsin points. Inquiry at the police headquarters in this city and in West Superior shows clearly that the head of the lakes was not included within the operations of the alleged forger, who is said to have had printed and filled out checks on various leading lumber companies ranging from $10 to $20, signatures of secretaries or other authorized persons being cleverly forged.

Detective Troyer says that there has not been a forgery committed in this section of the Northwest for a long time, that the only thing approaching crooked work of the nature was the action of a foreigner about a month ago who signed a personal check to obtain money, the same not being worth the paper it was written on. It would be necessary to go a long way back in police annals to find instances where any forgers have been able to work this part of the country for a period of nearly a year before the authorities have gathered them in and they have been put in a place not calculated to improve a man's handwriting.

WANTED THE LUMBER.

Fruit Vender Frightens Sidewalk Builders.

Whitefaced and gasping for breath after a hard run, one of the contractors building sidewalk for the city on Second street, dashed into police headquarters early this morning with the startling announcement that "Long John," the Italian fruit vendor at the corner of Second street and Second avenue east was on the war path with a double bladed ax and had practically treed the whole force of city workmen putting down a new sidewalk in front of the little store.

The contractor was urged to collect himself and explain more calmly the details of the terrible slaughter pending, and it was learned that "Long John" had viewed the tearing up of the old sidewalk without a wink but when the contractor gave the old worn out planking to a drayman if he would haul it out of the way, hostilities began and the thoroughly aroused son of sunny Italy with the ugly weapon swinging about his head and cleaving huge chunks of foggy atmosphere into shreds threatened to carve the thinker out of the first man that touched a board, while out of the fogs floated invectives of an unknown language to the workmen, coupled with, "You no toucha plank. I pay fifteen dolla rent. I wanta boards for stove."

No Games This Week.

Duluth will not have any baseball games Saturday or Sunday, as Manager Hansell does not like to take any risk on the uncertain weather. The Gluck brewers were coming down to try to put it over the Duluth men, and the game would have been worth seeing. Duluth fans are beginning to wake up to the fact that Hansell has a really good team for the support that he has been receiving. Ashland has a team with a reputation and has been given gilt-edged support at home and has been playing good ball all through the season, so that by defeating them Duluth's team has demonstrated its ability to play ball.

SALT TRUST.

About Ready For Launching and Will Be International.

New York, June 26.—To control the salt of the earth will be the mission of a combination that, an officer of the National Salt company stated, is about ready for launching. It will be an international "trust"—the first of the sort. The National Salt company has its office in the building of the Standard Oil company at 26 Broadway, and Wall street believes that the Standard Oil company interests are connected with it. It has capital stock of $7,000,000 of common and $5,000,000 of 7 per cent non-cumulative preferred shares, and it practically controls all the salt deposits and trade of the United States, with the exception of the salt in the seas that leave this country's shores. The officer of the company who told about the plans for the International Salt combination said: "A combination to include the National Salt company of this country, the Canadian Salt company and the Salt union of England has been under advisement for some months and has been gradually coming to a head. The matter is now practically ready for closing. The International Salt company is the name proposed for the new corporation which will take over the combined corporations. When formed it will have a total production of 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 tons of salt annually, of which the National company's output will be about one-third. Outside of the savage countries and Russia, it will supply the entire world with salt—both for table and for curing. Not only will the company's markets include the countries of the Western hemisphere, but they will also include Continental Europe, Africa and Japan, China and other Asiatic countries."

WAGE SCALE CONFERENCE.

Cleveland, June 26.—The wage scale conference between the American Tinplate company and the Tinplate Workers' association, which began here several days ago, is still in progress. Although little has been accomplished toward reaching an agreement, both sides are hopeful that an amicable wage scale eventually will be reached.

HEN'S MIXED BLOOD.

Winona County Fowl Hatches Covey of Quail.

Winona, Minn., June 26.—Rev. C. F. Dykeman, of Ashton, reports a curious incident in bird life that has come under his observation. A common barnyard fowl made her nest in some high weeds adjoining a public highway not far from Ashton. A quail passing that way found the nest and added to the collection of eggs. When the mother hen returned and commenced sitting she did not notice the difference in eggs and hatched out a mixed brood, in which quails predominated. She does not appear to notice the difference, however, and the feathered family is getting along very nicely.

SMITH DEFEATED EAVES.

Assessment Returns Show Heavy Decrease In Menominee County.

Menominee—The value of property in Menominee county, according to the assessment rolls this year, is $9,671,971, of which $5,779,759 is for the city and $3,892,212 for the remainder of the county. The total value of real estate is $5,993,303 and personal property $3,678,568. The valuation of property in the city has decreased $320,889, and in the county $602,423, total - $923,321 from 1900.

Menominee continues to sustain her reputation as a Gretna Green, and is a popular objective point for eloping couples, being just across the Wisconsin line. In Justice Van Den Berg's court chambers occurred the marriage of Frank Dubois and Miss Mary Duggan, both of Oshkosh. The young couple had surmounted parental objections and possible interferences and eloped. They are said to be popular young people of Oshkosh.

Ironwood—Ironwood is to have a monster celebration on July 4. A committee has been appointed to look after the details and a meeting was held Monday of last week to get the work under way. One of the attractions will be a race between horses owned by Alderman Frank Leselyong and John W. Mullen. Both horses are from fast stock and although the owners each believe in the superior speed of their own horse as against the utter lack of that quality in the other, there is no doubt but what both will develop enough ground-covering proclivities to make the affair very interesting to the public.

Sault Ste. Marie—The total enrollment of the Sault Ste. Marie public schools for the year just closed was 2185, an increase over the preceding year of nearly 14 per cent. The figures do not represent the average increase in the population, which would be considerably greater owing to the large number of single men who have been attracted to the Soo by the water power and other improvements now going on. It is estimated by conservative residents who have closely watched the growth of the Soo that its population is now between 11,000 and 12,000. The city is growing at a rapid rate and the improvements being made are permanent and substantial.

KEEP OUT CANTEEN.

Methodist Ministers to Continue An Active Campaign.

Chicago, June 26.—"The flood of beer received by Shafter's army was worse than the scanty rations. The canteen was the cause of the sickness that broke out in the army before Santiago."

These words were part of an attack by the Rev. William P. F. Ferguson on the army canteen, made in an address to the Methodist ministers at their meeting Monday. Dr. D. M. Parkhurst took part in the discussion, and told of the effect of the canteen as he had seen it at Fort Sheridan.

"The canteen is like all other saloons in its results," said Dr. Ferguson. "Murder, suicide and riot have followed in its wake. It has been condemned by army officers and privates alike. The liquor dealers, however, favor its presence. They say the soldiers begin their spree inside and finish them outside. Chaplains in the army are afraid to talk against the evil. They have been ordered from Washington to cease reporting about the government saloons. The men who have repeatedly said that, in the absence of the canteen, drunkenness has increased and riots have been incited, have grossly slandered the soldiers."

Dr. Prakhurst told the ministers that, unless they used all their influence, the canteen would get back into the army. He told of seeign a dozen soldiers at the veterans' home in Milwaukee lying on the floor so intoxicated that they could not get up stairs to their rooms. He said the great trouble with the canteen is that it puts the seal of approval by the government on the liquor habit and makes it respectable.

LAND FOR SETTLERS

The Seminole Country Can Accommodate Ten Thousand People.

Only Orderly and Sober Persons Will Be Allowed There.

Growing Popularity of American Cotton Goods In China.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Kiowa, Comanche and Apache and the Wichita reservations in Oklahoma are not the only Indian lands on which homeseekers may acquire a claim. The Seminoles, in the Indian Territory, have taken their allotment lands, and from all accounts their country is among the best quality of land now obtainable in the United States. The Creek lands, when they come in, will be equally as good, but they are not now open for settlement.

A prominent citizen of Guthrie, O. T., writes your correspondent: "There ought to be 10,000 people to go into the Seminole country and establish a first-class county government, and if they are all men who know how to farm, they can have a competence after the first year.

The Seminoles are determined to have only first-class people settle in that country. I have seen the form of deed which is to be used in deeding town lots, and that deed expressly forbids the use of any lot for keeping or disposing of intoxicants of any kind, or for gambling or dance hall, or any other disorderly place, and in case it is so used, the title shall be forfeited, and pass to the common schools of the town.

John F. Brown, the governor of the Seminoles, you have probably met in Washington, and if so, you know that he is a man who would be considered a first-class man in every way, in any community."

In 1897 the Seminole Indians were required by treaty, to allot their lands. Their rolls are now complete; the lands are surveyed in townships, sections and quarter sections, and appraised; the allotment of the lands began the first day of June, and the lands are now ready for leasing. The Choctaw railroad runs through the reserve on the north side, and the Frisco railroad on the east side.

The Seminole lands contain 365,000 acres, which—less small reserves for schools, churches, etc.,—are to be divided between 2757 Seminoles, at the rate of 60 acres per capita of first-class land, or 120 acres of second-class land, or 240 acres of third-class land.

Two-thirds of the land is excellent agricultural land, one-third of it is as fine as any in the world. The land yields heavy crops of corn, wheat and cotton. Potatoes, melons, berries, peaches, apples and hay less cultivated, have for many years produced abundantly.

The intention is to lease for terms of six years to persons who are farmers by profession, of good education and character, who believe in and support schools and churches, with means to farm successfully, having not less than one good team, one good cow, a good wagon, plows and other farm tools, and means to live until the next crop is harvested.

The lands must be fenced by the tenant, and a good house and barn built and orchard planted, plans for which, with specifications and prices, will be attached to each lease.

The leases will provide for the payment of the cash or crop rental each year, and at the end of the lease the then value of the improvements will be applied on the remainder of the rental. Bond will be required for the faithful observance of the terms of the lease. In case any lessee wishes to throw up his lease he can do so upon giving six months' written notice to the principal chief: and in that case the value of the improvements will be deducted from the rental due at the time possession is surrendered.

The agreement with the United States is such that each Seminole may sell all but forty acres of his allotment at any time after the Seminole government ceases to exist.

Wewoka, the principal business town of the Seminole country, has been platted, proved up and the lots are just put on sale with warranty deeds to persons who will make thrifty, orderly residents. Favorable terms will be made to persons who will be desirable settlers. Persons not desirable will not be allowed to lease lands or buy lots. Leases will not be transferable except with the consent of the lessor and the principal chief. Deeds to lots will covenant against the lots being used as places where liquors will be kept or disposed of, or any other disorders permitted.

The Seminoles are a quiet people, orderly and sober, and will not admit into their lands a different class of people. They have retained Capt. A. S. McKennon, recently a congressman and a member of the Dawes commission, as their legal advisor in this matter. His office is at Wewoka, I. T.

* * *

The growing popularity of American cotton goods in China is evidenced by some figures contained in the report on the foreign trade of China for the year 1900, a copy of which has recently been received at the treasury department. The report opens with a discussion of the wonderful expansion of China's foreign trade, and after commenting upon the interruption of this growth, due to the unsettled conditions during the latter half of 1900, summarizes the principal features of the trade as follows:

"The close of the decade offers a convenient opportunity for a general review of the progress of trade. With some exceptions, the trade in cotton piece goods has remained practically stationary, and in some items has even fallen off. The exceptions are American drills, jeans and sheetings, which show a strong advance and cotton flannel, principally American, and cotton lastings, which are evidently increasing in favor. English cotton yarn has not progressed, while Indian and Japanese yarns have advanced rapidly. Among sundries, candles, clocks and watches, aniline dyes, window glass, aints and perfumery have gradually increased in demand, while flour, kerosene oil, matches and soap have been imported in much larger quantities every year.

"As regards heavy cotton goods, the expansion in American manufactures at the expense of British is natural and must be expected to continue. Proximity to China, cheaper freights and the evident advantage of using indigenous cotton are all factors which will contribute to the future expansion of the American trade."

The imports into China have increased steadily and rapidly during the decade, increasing from 12,093,418 Haikwan taels in 1890, to 264,748,456 taels in 1899, and continuing this rate of increase up to the middle of 1900, following which date there was a marked contraction in the volume of trade consequent upon the unsettled condition of the country. Even with this set back, the imports in 1900 amounted to 211,070,422 Haikwan taels, a sum in excess of any previous year, save 1899. The share of the United States in this growing trade is gratifying. In 1895 we supplied less than 3 per cent of the imports into China. In 1900 we supplied nearly 8 per cent. This growth is the more remarkable when it is remembered that American goods for the most part reach China at the port of Shanghai and are thence redistributed through the ports of Newchwang, Tien Tsin and Chefoo, located in the section most largely affected by the recent troubles. These three ports sustained a loss of over 50 per cent in their 1900 import trade, as against a loss of only about 20 per cent for China as a whole.

Some idea as to the future of American cotton goods in the markets of China, with the restoration of normal conditions, may be obtained by the citation of a few representative items in this line of manufactures. In 1895 the importation of American drills into China amounted to 518,402 pieces; in 1899, to 1,626,107 pieces. Of American sheetings the imports into China in 1895 amounted to 762,095 pieces; in 1899, to 3,975,903 pieces. Of American jeans, the imports in 1895 were 21,798 pieces; in 1899, 126,303 pieces, and in 1900, 137,366 pieces. Of the cotton drills imported into China in 1900, amounting to 1,204,634 pieces, 505,892 pieces were American, and of the cotton sheetings imported in 1900, aggregating 2,962,876 pieces, 2,312,494 pieces were American—the proportion of American in each case being in 1900 about 80 per cent, as against 70 per cent of the drills and 55 per cent of the sheetings imported in 1895.

China has somewhat decreased her importations of kerosene oil since 1898; thise of the American being 50,084,015 gallons in 1898, 40,724,989 gallons in 1899, and 34,447,112 gallons in 1900; of Russian, 19,926,246 gallons in 1898, 35,695,116 gallons in 1899, and 32,708,757 gallons in 1900, and of the Sumatran, 26,871,865 gallons in 1898, 11,993,202 gallons in 1899, and 16,424,155 gallons in 1900.

WHITEWASHED STREETS.

How Milwaukee Will Receive the Elks.

Milwaukee, June 26.—To demonstrate that this city has the cleanest streets of any city in the Union it has been proposed by Mayor Rose, and the plan has been adopted, to whitewash the asphalt pavements for the mammoth parade of the Elks, which is to be given here next month. Most of the streets in the center of the city and all of them over which the parade will march are of asphalt. It is expected that 20,000 Elks from other cities will be here July 24, when the fun commences, and the mayor thinks that a march over white streets will be the best advertisement the city can have. The whitewash is to be mixed by an expert colored brother and sprinkled from the city watering carts.

THOMAS IN CHARGE.

New President of Bank Assumes Duties.

New York, June 26.—Edward R. Thomas, the newly elected president of the Seventh National bank, took charge of the institution today. Early in the day he was in consultation with Edwin Gould, who, as president of the Bowling Green Trust company, is indirectly interested in the Seventh National. William Kimball, who retired from the presidency of the bank, was at his desk today winding up some private affairs. He said:

"The morning mail has brought the bank many offers of assistance. These offers will not be accepted for the reason that they are not needed."

Mr. Kimball will remain on the bank's directorate and will continue to take an active interest in its affairs.

At 11:30 it was announced that all of the banks having debit balances at the clearing house paid them today.

REFUSED EMPLOYMENT.

Reading Men Wanted to Return to Work.

Reading, Pa., June 26.—Thirty additional Reading railroad shopmen struck today, while six endeavored to return to work but were refused employment.

During the day at the various meetings of the unions representing the company's system, the men were counseled to remain away from company property and observe temperate habits.

A. H. Beschor, chairman of the joint committee of the Union of Railway Employes, expressed his gratification at the stand taken by the men.

It is said the company, in anticipation of trouble with the trainmen, has placed extra men on many of the trains.

VALUE REFUNDED.

Washington, June 26.—The commissioner of internal revenue, Yerkes, has decided that the value of proprietary stamps properly affixed and cancelled on proprietary articles not removed from factory for sale or use before July 1, 1901, may be refunded on proper application to the collector from whom the stamps were purchased.

THE PLOW COMBINE.

Trenton, N. J., June 26.—The American Plow company, capital $100,000, was incorporated here today. The principal object of the company will be to absorb most of the plow companies of the United States. It is understood that the capital of the company will be largely increased.

VICTIM IS VERY ILL

Boy Stolen By Kidnapers Is In a Serious Condition.

Eddie Cudahy of Omaha Is Suffering From Typhoid Fever.

Breakdown Traced to His Confinement In Bandits' Cell.

Omaha, Neb., June 26.—Edward Cudahy, Jr., the fifteen-year-old son of E. A. Cudahy, the millionarire packer, and the boy who was held captive by prisoners for 30 hours last December, is seriously ill with typhoid fever. He has never recovered from the effects of the shock and fright of that experience, but has instead suffered a reaction which has told on his constitution. The physicians find as a result that he is so weakened physically that his condition is critical.

Mr. Cudahy has been planning for the family's yearly summer stay at Mackmac and arrangements were made for the trip within a few days. This season's visit to the lake region was looked forward to with more than usual interest, almost with anxiety for the family hoped that the change of scene would benefit the boy.

They have known for months that his mind was still dwelling upon the events of those three trying days of last year, and that this was slowly wearing out his vitality. All this they confidently expected to counteract by finding opportunities to lead the boy naturally into outdoor exercise and refreshing excitement with new environments.

But yesterday definite symptoms of typhoid developed and today the case is very pronounced. All plans for the summer vacation have been canceled and the trip has been indefinitely postponed. If the boy recovers it will be weeks before he will be strong enough to be moved, and the members of the family will not go without him. The best of nursing and medical attendance has been provided, and the physicians hope still to save the lad's life "Under ordinary circumstances," one of the doctors said today, "I would not consider the case as alarming, but in the patient's debilitated and nervous condition there is danger, though we are hoping for ultimate recovery."

To those in Omaha who are so familiar with the kidnapping of Edward Cudahy this news is not surprising. While he has been out on the streets more or less since the first of the year, it has been observed that he was growing gradually more nervous, and for two months past he has not been so active and vigorous even as formerly.

Immediately after his release by the kidnappers he appeared to rally. He seemed cheerful and composed, and repeated time and again his story of the hours he spent chained to a chair in the vacant house on the outskirts of the city. But after awhile a reaction apparently set in, and its effects have grown more marked as the weeks went by. It is generally feared outside of the Cudahy home that the attack of typhoid will prove fatal.

It will be recalled that the lad disappeared some time during Tuesday, Dec. 18 last. The first the public heard of it was shortly after midnight on Thursday morning, when word was given out that the boy had been kidnapped, but had been returned upon payment of a $25,000 ransom. The police, private detectives, employes of the Cudahys and persons eager to earn a reward were called in from the hunt for the boy and urged to look for the kidnappers themselves.

While they began their search Edward Cudahy recalled the events of the thirty nerve-racking hours he spent in captivity. He had gone from his home to carry some magazines to the house of a friend of the family, when, upon returning, he approached his own home he was confronted by two men, who thrust revolvers into his face and commanded him, under threats, to follow them. They placed him in a carriage and drove away at a fast trot.

"When we got beyond the packing-house district," he related, and he has since told the story over and over again, "they lifted me out of the buggy, tied my hands behind me and led me up a flight of rickety stairs into a room that had a damp, musty smell. One of the men found an old chair and pushed me down into it. Then he removed the cords from my wrists and put on a pair of handcuffs with chains attached, which he made fast to the rungs of the chair. A pair of leg irons were clapped on my ankles and the chains of these were also locked on the chair.

"In this position I spent most of the twenty-four hours they kept me in prison. Once for about five hours the chains on my wrists were released, and I was permitted to lie down on the floor. During all this time I ate but once, and then only a little."

This is what the boy has been living over in his mind ever since he found his way back to his father's door.

The kidnappers have never been hunted down. "Pat" Crowe was persistently mentioned as the head of the gang, but he has not been found. Rewards are still offered, however, and the search is not ended.

THE DAKOTAS.

Heavy Rain Follows Great Hail Storm at Jamestown.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Jamestown—Following the great hail storm of Monday this county was visited Tuesday morning by such a downpour of rain as has not occurred in many years. The James river quickly filled and fears were entertained that the river would overflow its banks. In the storm of Monday there was damage to buildings by the wind in all parts of the county. At Wilmot, and south of that place small buildings were blown down. No lives are reported lost.

Mary Steinbach of New Rockford has begun a contest against the will of her father, Anton Lorenz, who died in January and left an estate valued at about $15,000. Lorenz left his property to two of his sons and a daughter, ignoring Mrs. Steinbach. She contests on the grounds that he was unduly influenced by the legatees and that the will was improperly executed and witnessed. A hearing will be had July 28.

The largest consignment of wolf scalps ever received by the county auditor of Stutsman were brought in Monday by H. F. Chaddock. There were thirty-five pup scalps and three old ones.

Fargo—This glorious climate of North Dakota is all right. E. H. Palmer, a youth of 80 years or more, reports the arrival of a boy at his home. The happy father is the grandfather of Lieut. Palmer of Company B, and is as active as the ordinary man of 50.

There is a rush of the fraternal organizations to establish themselves in this state before the new law goes into effect July 1 After that date they will have to submit to an examination to secure a permit from the state commissioner of insurance. One of the latest is the Loyal Americans, which will organize here this week.

Valley City—Dan Marsh, an old and respected resident, died recently, and left a fine lot to the public library fund. The ladies of the Tuesday club have had the fund in charge, and with a city tax of one mill for its support, prospects are brightening for a fine library.

Professor G. A. McFarland, president of the normal school, leaves in a few days for an extensive lecture tour before the state institutes. He will then go to the N. E. A. at Detroit, where he is state manager for North Dakota.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mitchell—The water problem which has always been a vexatious one, has been solved by the experiment of pumping water from the artesian wells. The city has two wells that are lacking in force to get the water into the reservoir, but by the aid of a large steam pump it can be successfully raised in sufficient quantity to supply the entire city for years to come. The new system will be put in right away. Another well is now being put down.

For several years cattle rustling has been a profitable undertaking on the reservation west of Chamberlain. Of late the cattle have disappeared so fast that a determined effort is being made to get rid of the gang. The cattle inspector of the Black Hills district was sent for and arrived in Chamberlain a few days ago and later made a trip to the rendezvous of the thieves. They have selected an island of the Missouri river in Charles Mix county, about forty miles from Chamberlain. The inspector went to the island and decided that it would be impossible for him to do anything alone. He therefore returned and laid the matter before the owners and officers of the law, and they decided that the gang must be broken up. A posse of fifteen men was organized, and they started for the island Friday morning, but up to this time no report has been received.

Spearfish—There have been rumors for several days to the effect that a man had been shot and killed in the Bear Gulch mining district, being taken for a deer. As near as can be learned two men went into the gulch on a hunt. It is believed their names are Cook and Dougal, the latter being the one killed. It is stated they were residents of Selm, S. D. The accident is said to have taken place near Crow Peak, June 23.

Sioux Falls—A. H. Gipson, a well-known resident of Sioux Falls, died at his home of Bright's disease. For several years he had been a deputy United States marshal with headquarters in the office of United States Marshal Kennedy in this city. He had a wide acquaintance throughout the state, and leaves a widow and four children.

Canton—Emil Holter, proprietor of the Gate City meat market, was found dead in the barn where he kept his horses. A revolver was by his side and suicide seems the only explanation. Death must have been instantaneous, as he was in a sitting posture. He was a single man and had many relatives.

Huron—Some interesting facts are related by people who have visited the scene of the tornado that passed over the extreme southeast corner of this (Beadle) and a portion of Kinsbury counties, a few days since. The D. C. Murphy family occupied a house on a farm not far from Esmond. When the storm came they took refuge in the cellar. The house was carried away, and every member of the family was injured, Mrs. Murphy, it is reported, having since died. One of Mr. Murphy's sons had his hip broken. At the L. Owen place an iron pump and several feet of pipe were drawn partly from the well and bent to the ground. A large granary was picked up bodily on the Caulfield farm and carried several rods without being injured in the least. At the Lattin farm the storm twisted the shingles from the roof, lifted two barrels of water from beside the house and carried them upright for nearly a mile, but a buggy standing near by was not disturbed.

FINE CONDITION.

Yale's Oarsmen Are In Best of Spirits.

Gales Ferry, Conn., June 26.—Yale's oarsmen, who will figure in tomorrow's races, were in the best of spirits today. The coaches declare all the men physically fit, the staleness which followed the strenuous effort of the four-mile race against time last week, having passed away. All the 'varsity men look well and their action in the big boat has steadily improved during the week. The practice of the morning was mainly a limbering process, consisting of a few racing starts only for each of the crews. The freshmen pulled their usual strong stroke with Miller at bow, where he will undoubtedly row in the race.

FAR FROM OVER.

Agoncillo's View of War In the Philippines.

Paris, June 26.—A correspondent of La Presse, of this city, who interviewed Agoncillo, Aguinaldo's European agent at Marseilles previous to his departure for Hong Kong, qoutes the Filipino as saying that the struggle in the Philippines is far from being over. He admitted that the capture of Aguinaldo diminished the chances of success, but he asserted that the Americans, like the British in the Transvaal, will find they are purchasing their conquest too dearly.

MACHINISTS STRIKE.

Pittston, Pa., June 26.—Two hundred machinists struck today at the Coxton yard shops of the Lehigh Valley Railroad company. Pickets from the strikers' ranks patrol the shops.

New York, June 26.—The American Sugar Refining company today advanced all grades of refined sugar five points, or 1-20 cents a pound.

Baggage By Special Delivery.

As a further accommodation to its patrons, arrangements have been made by the passenger department of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad company, whereby, at the nominal charge of 50 cents per piece, to pay for transfer, baggage may now be checked through from the principal stations on its lines, to any hotel, residence or steamship dock in New York, or Brooklyn. Instead of checking to Grand Central station, New York only, and arranging after arrival there to have your baggage properly delivered, save yourself trouble by asking local baggage masters to forward your baggage by special delivery. A particular style of check is used for this purpose, and as soon as your baggage reaches Grand Central station it will be promptly delivered at the address desired without further attention on your part.—From the New York Mail and Express.

PLANS OF THE TRUST

Presidents of the Underlying Steel Companies to Retire.

Carnegie Officials Are Getting All of the Big Offices.

Determination to Squeeze the Steel Works For Earnings.

Pittsburg, Junte 26.—An official of the Carnegie company is authority for the statement that the change made in the presidencies of the different underlying companies is to get men who have been tried as workers and not found wanting. It was a fact, he contended, that in all the old companies financial men were at the head, men who were entirely unable to take charge of the concerns under the new conditions, when the requirements that are so severe that the merit that is in him must come out. This matter has been decided by the directors of the United States company, and each of the presidents was notified a month ago, and in all but one instance recognized the truth of the situation and agreed to get out. To be a president of one of the different companies now the candidate must come up from the ranks, and be not only a man of judgment, but one who is thoroughly familiar with the plants under him as well as a chemist, draughtsman and metalurgist. The presidents are driven at a fearful pace with work, and the days of comfortable presidencies are at an end, so far as the United States Steel corporation is concerned. It is now proposed to place the National Steel company under the domain of President W. E. Corey of the Carnegie company, and to amalgamate the two concerns. It is denied in Pittsburg that there is any factional fight that is resulting in the replacing of "Moore men" by "Schwab men." It is true that Carnegie officials are getting all of the big offices in the corporation, but it is pointed out here that the training system instituted by Andrew Carnegie turned out better technical men so far as the operating end is concerned.

Orders have just been issued by the president of the United States Steel corporation, C. M. Schwab, to the presidents of the subsidiary companies that none of the latter shall make any expenditure exceeding $10,000 without authority from the directory of the United States company. Sums under this amount can be put out at the discretion of the directors of the company so acting, but a report must be made to the United States directory, and if it is there thought that the outlay was ill-advised, the men responsible will hear about it within a short time. This action in relation to small sums, or amounts comparatively so, has been taken to instil into the men in control of the constituent concerns that the old days when any expense that would improve the plants or bring business at once have passed away, and that the plants are to be operated to get all they can out of them, instead of putting back into works any larger amount than is necessary to maintain them.

This policy will be noticed particularly at the Carnegie company. It is conceded that the wonderful success of this concern has been the vast amounts that have, annually since the beginning, been put back into mines, mills and workshops, so that the growth was compounded. The action last year in setting aside $12,000,000 for improvements, exclusive of the $12,000,000 that was to have been placed in the tube mill proposed at Conneaut, will not be replaced this year.

It is said here that it is the determination of the big trust to squeeze the works for earnings. Orders were issued a few weeks ago to the presidents to get out as much output from their various concerns as possible, and the result is that all are now being pushed to the utmost, as was shown at the Homestead Steel works, when the May record of structural steel production was unequalled before. The labor cost is to be kept down, and, as the big company fears no competition, orders have also been given to cut out much of the improvement work. The Carnegie company contemplated a host of improvements, and all except those actually under way have been given up. This includes the proposed sheet mill that was to have been erected at Duquesne. Plans were prepared for a 30-mill plant, which would have made it the largest sheet plant in the world.

To the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo.

The most popular railway from the Northwest to the great show at Buffalo will be the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul.

It runs, every day, five beautiful trains from St. Paul and Minneapolis to Chicago, connecting directly with all Eastern lines.

Its celebrated Pioneer Limited (the famous train of the world) leaves Minneapolis 7:30 p. m. and St. Paul 8:10 p. m. daily, arriving Chicago 9:30 next morning.

Special features of the "Milwaukee's" service are the observation, buffet parlor cars on day trains, private compartment and standard sleepers on night trains, as well as buffet smoking cars and the best dining service in the world.

Tickets at cheap rates will be on sale every day at all points on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway to Buffalo and return, and the maximum comfort can be obtained by using this line.

Write to J. T. Conley, Ass't Gen'l Passgr. Agent, St. Paul, for the "Milwaukee's" Pan-American folder (one of the completest and most comprehensive guides yet published of the exposition) and all information concerning rates, etc.

ARE VERY UNCERTAIN

Democrats In Congress at Sea Regarding the Issues.

What Shall Be Made Prominent at Coming Session.

More Rumors of Changes In President McKinley's Cabinet.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 25.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Democrats of the Eastern states are considerably at sea regarding the issues to be brought prominently forward in the next national congressional campaign, and are also distributed over the proper course to pursue during the Fifty-seventh session of the national congress.

Senator Jones of Arkansas, present chairman of the Democratic national committee, is of the opinion that it will be the best policy for the Democrats in the next congress to endeavor to make an issue out of the recent decision of the supreme court regarding the taxation of the residents of our new colonial possessions, namely, Porto Rico, Hawaii and the Philippines. There are other Democrats equally as prominent as Senator Jones, and in many directions better qualified to represent the party than he, who think that this matter was fully discussed at the last session of congress, and, therefore, there will be little chance of making campaign thunder out of this question at the coming congressional session. It is a question in the minds of both Democrats and Republicans whether or not the tariff will become an issue of importance at the next session. A good many Republicans, namely, those from protection states, do not favor any changes in the Dingley bill. In other sections of the country notably in the west and some portions of the south, the sentiment is in favor of some changes in the Dingley bill, but it may be stated that at the present time no program has been mapped out regarding what the people from these sections are to ask for if the Dingley bill is amended. So far as the Republicans are concerned, it is more than probable that the wishes of President McKinley, as will be outlined in his message to the next Congress, will be followed by the Republicans—the majority of them, at least—and therefore, unless there is a combination between the Republicans who desire changes in the bill and the Democrats, the opinion generally prevails at the present time that the Dingley law will not be amended, except in minor clauses, which will not cut much of a figure regarding the present income to the treasury.

The proposition advanced by Representative Babcock, of Wisconsin is regarded in many quarters as a "feeler," and if it is discovered that his proposed plan will have any great value either in or out congress, it may come up for discussion during the Fifty-seventh session. It will be recalled that Mr. Babcock is the present chairman of the national Republican congressional campaign committee, and the opinion prevails in some quarters that his so-called new scheme is to agitate the question involved, believing that it will make a issue by which the Republicans can elect a majority of the house for the Fifty-eighth session. The election for this congress will, as is well-known, occur a year from next November. If, however, Mr. Babcock discovers that his idea will not meet with popular favor, it will most certainly be withdrawn.

The Democrats maintain that the lower house of the fifty-fifth session congress will be Democratic by a large majority. They claim that next year will be their year to win. They are already laying plans to work up sentiment for their party and against the Republican organization, so that next year they will be fully prepared for an exciting contest, whether or not they win or lose. The Democratic leaders, however, expect to win. The Republicans are confident of victory in the next congressional election, so that which ever party wins the house, the contest at the polls is certain to be exciting, and the outcome. It is conceded by leaders of both parties, is apt to be very close.

The rumor that there will be several changes in President McKinley's cabinet within the next few months is again being revived here. The opinion still seems to prevail that Secretary Hay, Secretary Long, and Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock will be three members of the cabinet who will retire before the assembling of the fifty-seventh session of congress next December. It is a well-known fact that Secretary Hay is anxious to retire to private life, and this is true also of Secretary Long and Secretary Hitchcock. There is a bare possibility, too, that Secretary Gage may resign as soon as President McKinley is able to select a competent man to succeed him. It is understood that the present secretary of the treasury, since the death of Mrs. Gage, is anxious to get out of the treasury department and to leave Washington for good. Just how much truth there is in the latter report cannot be learned at the present time.

Those who believe that the above named members of the present cabinet will retire within the next few months, are not able to fill all the vacancies they think will be made. There are two, however, that they seem satisfied they have selected the right man for. These cabinet smashers and makers feel assured that when Secretary Hay relinquishes the state department portfolio, Charles Emery Smith, postmaster General, will be transferred from the postoffice department to the state department. Mr. Smith, in turn, will be succeeded in the postoffice department by George B. Cortelyou, secretary to the president. These gossips got little further, and assert that if these two transfers are made, Col. Perry S. Heath, former assistant postmaster-general, will become secretary to the president, at the the latter's earnest request. They believe, too, that Governor Allen, of Porto Rico, will be made secretary of the navy, vice Mr. Long. They have only two men in view for Mr. Hitchcock's place at the head of the interior department. These are former Senator Carter, of Montana, and former Senator Wolcott, of Colorado.

It is a fact pretty generally noticed among public men that in most cases were Maj. McKinley has been forced to make changes in his cabinet, he strengthened in nearly every instance its makeup. When James A. Gary, the first postmaster general under McKinley's first regime, retired from that position, the president's choice for his successor was a happy one. Charles Emory Smith has made a very competent postmaster general, one of the best, in fact, this country has had in many years. The so-called forced retirement of the late John Sherman, of the state department, was an excellent thing, at least it has so turned out, for John Hay, then ambassador to the court of St. James, who succeeded Sherman, is much better qualified than was Sherman because of the latter's infirmities and old age. John Hay, were it not for the fact that he does not enjoy the best of health, would probably remain at the head of the state department until the end of Maj. McKinley's second term as president. In view of the fact that his health is not of the best, the rumor is believed to be absolutely true that he will retire from the state department at an early date.

When John William Griggs resigned the office of attorney general last spring it was thought that the president would have a very hard time to secure a man as well qualified as Mr. Griggs for this position. The present head of the department of justice, P. C. Knox, is just as brilliant a lawyer as was Mr. Griggs, so it is maintained here, and just as competent a man for the attorney-generalship as was the New Jersey statesman. It is conceded that President McKinley made a very excellent choice when he appointed James M. Beck, of Philadelphia, assistant attorney general under Mr. Knox. Mr. Beck is not only regarded as an able man, but he is very popular with all who have any dealings with him.

DIRECT TO MANILA.

Gen. Corbin May Not Stop at Honolulu.

Washington, June 26.—In view of a dispatch received at the war department, from Gen. Shafter, at San Francisco, reporting four deaths from the bubonic plague at Honolulu, between May 29 and June 9, Assistant Secretary Sanger has telegraphed Gen. Shafter to confer with Gen. Corbin, and if it is deemed desirable, to coal the Hancock so as to sail direct through to Manila. It was the intention of Gen. Corbin, who is to sail for Manila on the Hancock, to stop at Honolulu and make an examination of Camp McKinley at that point, but the bubonic plague report may change his plans.

According to Gen. Shafter's message, the president of the Honolulu board of health believes he has the plague situation well in hand.

QUARANTINE

Against Cuba Will Be Continued All Summer.

Washington, June 26.—While no official announcement is made to that effect, it is understood on good authority that the marine hospital service had decided not to accept the recommendation of Dr. Glennon, who has charge of the service in Cuba, to suspend a portion of the usual summer season quarantine against Cuba because of the absence of yellow fever from the island at present. There were many protests from all parts of the United States against the proposed suspension.

MANY FORGED NOTES

SUFFERING FOR THE Sins of Another

Blood Poison is an universal disease. The enlightened nations of the world, as well as the savage, have been contending with this monster scourge for centuries past. Civilization has not checked its progress. Scientists have discovered little concerning the character of this peculiar poison; they admit it to be a blood disease, for which they know no antidote or cure. Their Mercury and Potash preparations hide the symptoms, but cannot destroy the virus. This disease is so highly contagious that persons handling the clothing, using the same brush or towel, drinking from the same vessel, are inoculated. The deepest misery and humiliation have followed the kiss of affection. Though guilty of no wrong, the person who contracts the disease in this way endures the same physical suffering that the guilty one does. How often is the proud parent horrified when he finds the disease he so confidently believed had been forever driven from his own blood has been transmitted to his innocent child; its little body tortured with sores, the glands of the neck swollen and knotted and the skin a-fire with some burning, itching eruption. The symptoms of this hideous disease cannot be mistaken; eruptions upon the skin, sores or ulcers in the mouth and throat, copper-colored splotches on different parts of the body and the loss of hair and eyebrows, are infallible signs of Contagious Blood Poison. Other and more destructive symptoms follow, of course, as the disease progresses; the whole skin surface is often covered with a mass of sores, and even bone and tissue are destroyed. This is not a simple disease; do not trifle with it; terrible as are the immediate effects, it is horrible to think that through your carelessness or neglect others may have to suffer for your sin. You may have taken the usual remedies, but the aching bones and slight rheumatic pains, the annoying little ulcers and pimples that periodically break out, remind you that you are not cured; that the poison is still in your system.

AN INNOCENT VICTIM.

Some eight years ago I was inoculated with poison by a nurse who infected my babe with blood taint. The little child lingered along until it was about two years old, when its little life was yielded up to the fearful poison. For six long years I have suffered untold misery. I was covered with sores and ulcers from head to foot, and in my great extremity I prayed to die. No language can express my feelings of woe during these long years. I had the best medical treatment. Several physicians treated me, but all to no purpose. The mercury and potash seemed to add fuel to the awful flame which was devouring me. I was advised by friends who had seen wonderful cures made by it to try S. S. S. We got two bottles, and felt hope again revive in my breast—hope for health and happiness again. I improved from the start, and a complete and perfect cure was the result. S. S. S. is the only blood remedy which reaches desperate cases.

MRS. T. W. LEE, Montgomery, Ala.

S. S. S. is a specific for this disease. That it does antidote this peculiar virus, an experience of many years has proven beyond doubt. It is no experiment to take S. S. S. It has demonstrated in thousands of cases its curative powers. Being strictly a vegetable remedy makes it safe; there can be no bad after effect, as is the case where Mercury and Potash treatment has been taken. It eradicates Contagious Blood Poison completely and permanently from the system and removes all possible danger of contaminating others or transmitting it to posterity. It not only destroys the disease in the early stages, but even the worst cases give way when the system comes under the influence of S. S. S. Get this poison out of your blood; it is a barrier to domestic happiness; it wrecks both body and mind. Many a bright intellect has been clouded and happy life blighted by this terrible plague. If, unfortunately, you have contracted Contagious Blood Poison, send for our book and learn all about this disease. Every symptom and stage is described so clearly and minutely that after reading it you can treat your own case successfully. Should you at any time need any special advice, you have only to write our physicians; we make no charge for this.

AT CLOQUET.

Cloquet, Minn., June 26.—(Special to The Herald.)—The body found in the bay at West Superior Saturday last was identified as the brother of Angus Cameron, of this place. It was only recently that the deceased, whose name was Thomas Cameron, paid a visit to his brother, staying some three weeks. How he came to his death by drowning is an unexplained mystery.

An apology is due the Duluth brewers. The score in Sunday's game was 10 to 3, in favor of the Cloquet club, instead of 13 to 5, as wrongly stated yesterday.

The Northwest Paper company's upper boom went out yesterday morning, letting the logs down into the company's mill pond.

William Lane, the drayman, went to Duluth yesterday.

Another circus in town, one horse, a pony, a jackass and a monkey comprise the list of attractions, as far as can be seen from the outside.

The Cloquet dam was opened Monday night, fears being entertained of its going out. The water has not yet reached here, but the river being very high we are preparing for a flood when it does.

Richard Cochrane, the cigar manufacturer, left town a few days ago and hied him to Wisconsin. He returned Monday night a married man. The bride was Miss Ethel Martell, who formerly resided here. The happy couple are receiving the hearty congratulations of their numerous friends.

Mr. and Mrs. John Murray are contemplating a trip to the East. They will be absent some weeks.

Subscribers to The Herald, who did not get their papers until yesterday morning are reminded that the train did not arrive on Monday night until 8:30 p. m.

Yells and screams gathered a great crowd to the river Monday night. Nothing worse, however, had happened than a drunken man fallen into the water. He was fished out considerably sobered by his experience.

Matt Newman made a business trip to Duluth yesterday.

In police court, one Mitchell was charged with using abusive and obscene language and breaking the peace. The defendant pleaded not guilty, but the court after hearing the evidence decided otherwise and ordered Mitchell to enter into a surety to keep the peace for three months toward the complaining witness.

The ball given by the Duluth K. of P. orchestra Monday night was not as well attended as it might have been. Hot weather and too many other attractions recently undoubtedly caused the small attendance.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Miss Carrie Drown, a girl 22 years old, died in Caledonia, Wis., Tuesday of heart trouble. She was considered the fattest girl in the world. She weighed 650 pounds, was 5 feet 7 inches in height and her bust measure was fifty-two inches.

A big business consolidation has been effected, by which the Sioux City Gas company and the Sioux City Electric company have been consolidated under the title of the Sioux City Gas and Electric company with a capital stock of $1,500,000. The incorporators are Sioux City men.

A telegram received by President Haskins of the Ohio Mine workers, announced that the strike of 400 miners at Old Orchard mine in Guernsey county, had been settled and the men returned to work. The men had been out two weeks on account of a dispute over the scale.

Eugene Wall, whose case was one of the most sensational in Texas, has been acquitted of murder. Wall and others engaged in a feudal shooting affray at Nacogdoches a year ago. Three men were killed and several wounded. The excitement was high for a month and state raiders had to keep the peace.

H. W. Sundler, a prominent citizen of Wood Lake, near Grantsburg, Wis., was found dead Tuesday with a bullet hole through his heart. Conflicting stories are told as to the cause of his death. The coroner is making an investigation.

Stephen Clark, a gambler, while in a jealous rage at Poplar Bluff, Mo., killed his wife 26 years old, and then stabbed himself inflicting a fatal wound. Clark stabbed the woman in the back with a butcher knife, after which he beat out her brains with a hatchet.

CLOUDBURST.

Heavy Rain Does Much Damage at Ashland and Vicinity.

Ashland, Wis., June 26.—A heavy cloudburst swept over Ashland yesterday morning causing at least $10,000 damage. The Western Union wire to Chicago is down and the Wisconsin Telephone company suffered several hundred dollars loss. A washout on the Northwestern near Odenah delayed traffic several hours and seriously delayed the movement of ore trains. Official reports from the weather bureau give the amount of rain fall in this city during the last thirty-six hours at 4.38 inches. Preceding the cloudburst a tidal wave swept the bay, the water dropping two feet and rising again four feet above the minimum.

Mackinaw City, Mich., June 26.—In a sudden and heavy squall yesterday a fishing boat containing two brothers of the name of Bassett was capsized near Waugoshance. The men were drowned.

SPEED IS FAST.

But the Englishmen Do Not Like Form.

Henley, Eng., June 26.—The fast practice spins of the Pennsylvania university crew puzzle the English experts, who say the Americans' form is faulty, but that their speed is undeniable. Ellis Ward, the coach, and Manager Hart and Fuller have been warned against the danger of overdoing the Americans, who are doing much more work than the Leander oarsmen. It is said that Cornell made a similar mistake.

WHY? IS ELECTRIC LIGHT BEST?

Because it is healthy, clean, pure and brilliant.

HEALTHY— It has no odor. Prof. Thompson states that one cubic foot of gas consumes as much oxygen as four adults.

CLEAN— It causes no discolorations of furnishings and decorations in homes.

SAFE— As electric bell work, no danger of suffocation.

CHEAP— By using a little care in turning off lights when not in use it is cheaper than any other illuminant.

FIRMER FEELING

Wheat Feels the Effect of Bullish Influence.

Higher Cables Due to Reported Damage In Russia.

Trading Was Light and Effect of Rains Feared.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 26.—The wheat market opened steady today and continued fairly so throughout the morning. The opening strength was due to the higher cables. Liverpool scoring an advance of 1½d. The foreign strength was attributed to reports of damage to the Russian crop. This started the foreigners to buying in New York. There was some demand for wheat from Europe, too, the seaboard reporting forty loads of wheat worked for export. St. Louis reported 300,000 bushels worked to go to the continent. The heavy rains in the spring wheat country are beginning to raise fears of damage to the crop and this gave a firmer tone to the feeling. Primary receipts were 405,000 bushels, last year 425,000. Shipments 340,000, last year 402,000. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 548,211 bushels.

Receipts at Duluth and Minneapolis, 153 cars, against 262 last week and 244 last year. Chicago receipts, 29 cars, 1 of contract grade.

Trading in futures was fairly active on the Duluth board. September wheat opened ¼c higher at 66c, sold down to 65¾c at 10:08, reacted to 66c at 11, rallied to 66⅝c at 1:10 and closed at 66¼c, an advance of ⅝c. Chicago advanced ⅜-½c and Minneapolis ⅛c.

Cash sales were 25,000 bushels at July price.

September flax was buoyant again, scoring a nadvance of 3c. October advanced only ½c and has advanced only 1½c to 5c for the other option. Rye was up ¼c and oats off the same amount.

Following are the closing prices:

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Steady Feeling In Wheat With Light Trade.

Chicago, June 26.—Higher cables and hot weather caused a steady feeling today in wheat. Trade was extremely light, however. September opened ¼@½c higher at 66¾c, declined to 66⅛c and rallied to 66⅝@⅔c. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 153 cars against 262 a week ago and 244 last year. Local receipts were 29 cars, one of contract grade.

On good export demand the market rallied and closed strong ⅜@½c higher at 66⅞c.

Corn opened steady on higher cables, but eased off despite reports of hot winds in the southwest. Local liquidation was quite heavy. September opened a shade higher at 44⅞c and declined to 44⅜c. Local receipts were 155 cars, 13 of contract.

The close was strong ⅛c higher at 44⅞@45c.

Oats were active. An upward tendency at the opening was checked by heavy liquidation. Sept. opened ¼c higher at 28¾c, touched 27c and declined to 26½@⅝c. Receipts were 88 cars.

Provisions were dull and easier on heavy receipts of hogs and lower prices at the yards. Sept. pork opened 7½@10c lower at $14.82½ to $14.85. Lard opened 2½c lower at $8.77½ and ribs 5c lower at $8.15.

MARKET GOSSIP.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 207 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.:

Chicago, June 26.—Weather continues generally favorable everywhere. There was moderate acceptances of wheat on the other side. The Northwest contin■ to get an abundance of rain and the weather Southwest is hot, both of which tend at the moment to lessen the selling pressure. There are, however, no complaints from either section. Broomhall cables that Liverpool firmness was partially on reports of Russian damage. The complaints, however, seem confined to a small section. Wheat has had a severe break and a reaction is natural and in order. We see nothing yet in the situation to change our recent advices that wheat should be sold on the rallies.

The corn market is steady and continues without any marked tendency. The weather on the whole is favorable for the growing crop but the bad start it had and the somewhat spotted condition prevents any great selling pressure. Receipts continue small and demand poor. The tendency in the Southwest of weather is dry and this also causes some apprehension. It seems to be a waiting market.

The oats market is steady. There has been good local buying past two days of September oats but the liquidation of July continues. Cash demand is not very encouraging. Country is pretty good buyer of September oats on the crop prospects.

Provisions easier. Hogs 5@10c lower. Receipts at primary markets 68,000 against 72,000 last year. We would not be surprised to see the stocks on the first of July show up larger than the estimates have been. We are informed that stocks at interior points are in excess of last year. We advise taking profits on long provisions on hard spots.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS

Supporting Orders at Start Caused Many Good Gains.

Trading Spiritless and Profit-Taking Stopped Any Rise.

Closing Was Firm and the Net Changes Were Small.

New York, June 26.—The stock market was only slightly unsettled at the opening dealings as the after effect of yesterday's banking disturbances. Supporting orders were in the market and there were many good gains mixed with fractional losses. Trading was on only moderate scale. Union Pacific advanced early a point, but lost nearly all of it, Metropolitan and Chicago & St. Louis rose about a point. St. Paul fell 1⅛, but rallied a sharp fraction and Tennessee Coal was off a point.

The opening rise brought out moderate offerings which soon lowered Union Pacific, Amalgamated Copper, People's Gas, Erie, Metropolitan, Illinois Central and Louisville from about a point to 1¾ and carried the market generally a fraction below yesterday's close. There was some improvement of prices before 11 o'clock, but the inquiry was principally from the shorts and the tone was hesitating. Manhattan and Sugar rallied a point each.

Trading was spiritless and as the market showed but little inclination to better, profits were sought in Sugar and Manhattan and their rise was wiped out. The ease with which these stocks were forced below yesterday's close stimulated selling of the Pacifics, grangers and others and the low prices of the morning were made all around before noon. St. Paul got 2⅜ under last night and other leading stocks, including the United States Steel stocks 1 to 2 points. Business increased largely on the selling movement. Bonds were steady.

The market continued to harden and effected a pretty general cancellation of earlier losses. A number of trunk lines, Pacifics and specialties rose above last night. Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis established a gain of 1½. International Silver preferred rallied 3¾. General Electric fell 3¾ and Northwest 6. The closing was very dull but firm and net changes were small.

POOR SHOWING

Made by Americans In Pigeon Match.

London, June 26.—In the international pigeon shooting at Hurlingham today, for a cup valued at £200, in conjunction with a sweepstakes of £5 each, there was seventy-three competitors. Count d'Avencourt of France won with ten kills. E. L. Smith, of Saratoga, tied for third prize, with eight kills. C. F. Robinson, of San Francisco, and A. B. Gates, of New York, shot poorly.

LARGE CLASS

Graduated at the Wesleyan University.

Middleton, Conn., June 26.—The annual commencement exercises of Wesleyan university were held today. There were sixty members in the graduating class, the largest in the history of the university.

The degree of LL.D. was conferred upon David J. Brewer, associate justice of the supreme court of the United States, and Hon. Charles Emory Smith, postmaster general.

Building Permits.

The board of public works has granted building permits to A. W. Johnson for the construction of a frame dwelling on the north side of Third street between Eighth and Ninth avenues west, to cost about $650; J. A. Johnson, for a $650 frame cottage on Third street between Eighth and Ninth avenues west; H. F. Robbins, for a $2000 brick dwelling on the north side of Fifth street between Third and Fourth avenues east; M. Sundgren, for a frame dwelling valued at $650 on the north side of Fifth street, between Third and Fourth avenues west.

Origin Unknown.

William Allen, of Tower, arrived in the city this morning. Mr. Allen is identified with the Tower Logging and Railroad company. He says that the loss from the recent fire at Bear Head Lake is as yet unknown and cannot be accurately estimated until full reports of the cut are made. In any event, it is certain that the loss will be considerably more than the insurance covers. The Peipke-Licht Lumber company, of Chicago, is the heaviest loser. The origin of the fire remains a mystery. It may have started from a spark from the mill or the tug in the lake, or some employe may have violated the rules and smoked unknown to the overseers. Mr. Allen will leave on the Omaha tonight for Chicago, where he will remain a few days.

Immediately after the call room longs dumped large lines on reports that rain is falling in Texas and over much territory west of the Mississippi, August fell to 7.30, October to 7.53 and January to 7.56. All the morning the market was nervous with trading spasmodic in the extreme. July bobbed up and down excitedly on rumors concerning the probable outcome of the "deal." At the close of the first hour the market had a particularly bad turn under renewed heavy selling for local accounts. Local crop positions suffered most.

PRETTY THINGS IN READY MADE FROCKS

Greater Variety and More Elaborate Than Ever--- Pretty Linen Crash One of the Most Effective Dresses Seen.

Never before has it been possible to buy so many pretty ready-made waists and frocks in Duluth as it is this season. Of course separate waists have been in stock for a great many years, but it is only during the past year or two that entire ready-made gowns have been shown at all, but this season one may buy almost any kind that her fancy dictates, and pay whatever her purse will allow.

If one has to depend on the dressmakers for her gowns, she would readily save money by buying them ready-made. To be sure, many women are prejudiced against ready-made clothes on the score that they all look alike, and lack the little individual touches that are almost a necessity. It is possible though to buy the ready-made gowns and add the individual touches oneself.

For seven dollars one may purchase very pretty costumes of silk ginghams, simply but stylishly made. The linens, crashes and swisses are much more expensive, but little more than the materials and the cost of making would be.

One of the prettiest and simplest gowns shown is of linen crash; the skirt is plain with the exception of a group of tucks which extended down each seam a short distance below the knee, where they break into a scant frill. The waist is tucked and blouses slightly; a sailor Empire gown of cream point d'esprit, fitting the figure in front and falling loosely at the back. It has long upright lines of lace insertion and deep flounces. The sleeves are caught in a puff at the elbow, with undersleeves of net to the wrist. The fichu has wide scarf ends falling to the hem of the skirt.

Like the dainty gown for summer, the dressy sunshade is adorned with chiffon, applique lace, cretonne and embroideries of various kinds. Often the decoration is that of trails of flowers in gauze, sometimes falling from the top to the point and sometimes passing round the sunshade. Or it suggests one huge flower with layer upon layer of chiffon cut out in petal shapes, and posed one above another till the effect is that of one big rose in the pink or tea rose yellow chiffon, or of a poppy in the white or scarlet crinkled crepe that is similarly used. The newest sunshades are encrusted with lace, embroidered with ribbon work, overlaid with cretonne embroidery or painted with particolored blossoms. These decorations sometimes appear on the silk, but far more frequently on the chiffon that drapes the foundation.

Laces, like diamonds, are always a safe investment, and every woman with a moderately good allowance is easily persuading herself this season that it is truest economy to follow the fashion and buy lace whenever she sees a "bargain." There never was a time in all

THE SUMMER MAIDS' FOULARD GOWN.

Smart Effects Produced By Contrasting Cream Liberty Satin and Black Velvet Appliques.

The smartest foulard gowns of 1901, even for the summer girl, are in black and white effects. This beautiful model has white spots on a gray ground, and is trimmed with cream Liberty satin and black velvet appliques in large and small circular spots. The skirt with its stylish lily cut flare, has a row of these velvet spots near the hem. The bodice is a blouse in front and appears to be worn over an under-bodice of the cream satin, the yoke portion of which is covered with a cream guipure. The lower part stops about five inches above the waist line and has straps extending to and disappearing in the waist-band. Both the yoke and this lower portion, as well as the pouf of cream satin at the elbows are decorated with the black velvet spots. The lower portion of the sleeves are shirred black Liberty satin.

collar with square ends in front is finished with lace medallions. The tiny rounding yoke, collar and undersleeves are of fine white tucked lawn.

A pretty white swiss is a mass of ruffles, tucks, valenciennes lace and insertion, and the maging is so intricate that it almost baffles description.

Another idea for trimming boleros is to edge the lower hem with long pendant loops of ribbon or gold braid. Through these loops the waistband is passed, a waistband of a color different from that of the ribbon trimming is preferable.

Gold effects on white are much fancied now for either day or evening wear. Ceintures of gilt are always pleasing, but a decidedly new idea is a boa of gold tissue, edged with finger width mousseline de soie or with tiny ostrich plumes.

Something extremely practical to keep erect the dainty muslin and pique stocks now so much worn is a perforated neckband of celluloid. It is easily fastened inside the stock, and may be purchased at almost any notion or neckwear counter.

Among the fancy hose of the season a variation from the usual lace patterns has been seen in some pairs of black silk, embroidered with jet paillettes. One pretty design consists of three bowknots of closely set paillettes on the instep. Another has lines of paillettes running up and down the instep. Some of the latest patterns also contain gold thread, in stripes, alternating with openwork.

The most appropriate trimming for gaiter hats this season is a puffing of silk, which hides nearly the entire brim as well as the crown. The silk may be set off to best advantage by a buckle or a long, sweeping plume, laid on flat.

Some of the best milliners now prefer for outing hats polka dot ribbon on which the dots are of several sizes, interminglied in a somewhat heterogeneous mass. This design has the advantage of not being duplicated in the very cheap qualities of silk.

A charming bridesmaid's dress is an

the history of "La Mode" when lace was so universally worn. Evening gowns are wholly made of it. Silken gowns revel in it for decoration. Wash dresses are lavishly adorned with it, and even cloth costumes are decorated modestly but definitely with it. Even coats are now constructed of lace with a daring that would have seemed impossible a few years ago. The lace coat is lined with crepe, either white or colored, or with chiffon, and is a bewitching adjunct to a delicate summer toilet or evening gown. Lace empire robes and teagowns, too, have appeared, and nothing more charming could be imagined worn over a foundation of soft silk.

Pleated skirts are everywhere in evidence, and many of the satin, taffeta and peau de sole boleros are pleated to correspond, the stitching added, giving them the effect of fine cords. The sweeping, clinging gowns of soft, delicious creped satin and crepe de chine in cream color, chartreuse green, Persian mauve, citron and ciel blue are greatly enhanced in their svelte, graceful effect by their trimmings of costly netted fringes, which finish the edges of the long overdresses and Marie Antoinette fichus, shaped with scarf ends of extra length, which add not a little to the artistic grace of the empire gown.

One of the pretty modes of making a pleated skirt is to stitch down the pleats at the top in the shape of a pointed yoke, the stitching reaching its greatest lengths on the front and below the hips. The hem of the skirt is finished either with lines of horizontal tucking or with rows of velvet or satin ribbon laid on flat and about half an inch apart.

In the bewildering exhibit of fancy waists for the summer are those of all-over silk net or embroidery, through the meshes or open designs of which are run satin or velvet ribbons. These are put in to form many different effects, one of the most intricate being the deep corselet made by starting the ribbons at the side seams and carrying them to the center of the front, where they meet and form rosettes with many ends. Sleeves, boleros, guimpes, vest fronts and revers are likewise made of these expensive allovers threaded with ribbon of various widths and colors.

This spring the lady of the links will wear black calfskin shoes, which are laced, and are not quite so low as the colonial low shoes for street wear. The soles are very heavy, and are slightly extended beyond the foot. Like monsieur's shoes they are studded with low knobs of rubber, which give the dainty foot a good purchase on the ground.

Glimpses of black stockings, with heavily embroidered silk clocks and Yale blue or cardinal red open work are caught when mademoiselle swings around after her "drive."

The hands will be protected with the regulation golf gloves. These are made of heavy white chamois or unpressed kid, with four small holes over the knuckles. They button on the back of the wrist with one button. The palm and four fingers of the left glove are covered with heavy dressed kid, as the greatest strain and wear are felt there, says the Philadelphia Times.

The waist par excellence for the links is of heavy white butcher's linen, made rather plainly. White mercerized duck and brilliantine also make pretty golf waists.

The golf belts are especially attractive. They are made of black, mode and French gray unpressed kid and they are slightly wider in the back than they are in the front, sloping down gradually to a highly polished silver buckle in front. These buckles are very heavy and quaint looking, being made in the early colonial style, except they are slightly sloped and shaped to give the long waist effect which is so desired now. With these attractive belts come alluring leather chatelaines which match, having a score-book, a loop for the tasseled tee, a small purse, a watch-case and a mirror.

After so much pastel coloring, turquoise blue, currant pink, cinnamon brown and forest green are refreshing tints, and they are pleasantly conspicuous in the trousseaux of many of the June brides.

A gray called nickel is striking. It is a shade more decided than pearl hues, and looks especially well with touches of silver or traceries of gold. The good dressmakers use gold only in delicately unobtrusive designs. Wide bands and big, aggressive medallions and splashes of the glittering stuff are in very bad form, according to the artistic falseurs.

In one of these June trousseaux is a costume of nickel gray cloth of a supple, light weight quality. There is nothing startling new in the deep flounce that finishes the skirt, with its arabesque strappings to head it, nor in the cut of the pouched bodice. But the fastening of the gown is as striking and effective as it is simple. Highly ornamental eyelet holes are punched through the cloth and surrounded with gold and black embolidery, and black velvet is then threaded through to form a lacing. On the collar and sleeves the same effect is repeated.

Great quantities of lace are being bought for summer frocks, for, though embroideries are beautiful, they are very expensive, and the best of the lace is that in good imitation forms it is lovely and not costly. The passementerie trimmings, too, are dear, and often the mere outlay necessary to compose a vest and undersleeves of mousseline de soi is greater than if lace be used.

Much may be said, however, for the purchase of real lace bolero or coat, either of which will certainly please, and also last a long time.

Practical Suggestions About What to Eat and How to Prepare Food.

This matter will be found to be entirely different from and superior to the usual run of food articles, in that every item is a nugget of culinary wisdom and eminently practical.

BILLS OF FARE FOR THE WARM WEATHER.

Much of the discomfort of the excessive heat of summer might be avoided, or at least greatly lessened, if one would study more carefully the component parts of our foods, and know that food substances belonging to the same class may vary in effect according to the climate and season. While we must preserve a relative proportion of the carbonates and nitrates we should know that it is necessary to lessen the amount of heat and force into the body in hot weather. Through disuse or abuse we lack the animal instinct that, in the lower order of beings, enables them to choose that which is good for them. Nature makes a valiant effort to teach us how to live by surrounding us with the suitable and seasonable foods that contain the necessary elements for perfect nutrition and health—lean meats, green, fresh vegetables and fruits—which should form the greater part of the family bills of fare at this season.

SAVE ENERGY AND STRENGTH.

Much of the housewife's energy and strength is wasted in the preparation of rich and heavy foods which are utterly unsuited for hot weather and are not relished as are the lighter foods, which are tempting and healthful and require less labor and time. The simpler dishes require but a few minutes to prepare and do not tax the patience or strength and leave the housewife time to "cool off and look pleasant" before she must present herself at the head of the table. She should have time to forget the fatigue occasioned by the slight exercise of preparing the meal so as to be able to enjoy the fruits of her labors with the rest of her family.

CARBONACEOUS FOODS IN SUMMER.

In cold climates nature provides fat and starch in great abundance to furnish the carbonates, the heat producers; while in the warm climates bodily heat and force is supplied by starch and sugar.

Grain, especially corn that is grown in the Northern states and Canada, has a very much greater percentage of oil than corn grown in the South, and it will be noticed that animals fed on Northern corn have much more adipose covering than the same species in warm climates.

Ripe fruits and green vegetables have mostly sugar for their cabonates, while they furnish as well gluten and albumen for muscular power.

We find in climates where the temperature is mild throughout the year a much greater abundance of succulent fruit and vegetables whose carbonates consist almost entirely of sugar. There foods may be grown through the greater part of the year, though they vary somewhat according to the season.

In the northern climate we will notice that the most succulent vegetables and fruits come in the warmest part of the season with fish and leaner meats in abundance, thus very clearly demonstrating that vegetables, fruits and grains, which with the exception of northern corn are equal to lean meat, are best adapted to a warm weather diet. The amount of starchy foods should be reduced in hot weather, as it is clear that much of the blood-cooling acids and a light oil used only with green salad herbs is quite sufficient to keep up the amount of bodily fire required in hot weather. Avoid fat meats, an excess of butter or cream and much rich pastry and you will not only find the hottest days quite endurable but escape many of the diseases peculiar to summer and injudicious selection of foods.

DANGER FROM EATING FRUITS AND VEGETABLES IN EXCESS.

Sickness may be produced by irregular and excessive use of fruits and vegetables, but there is no danger when they are eaten in proper amount and regularly.

Children are, as a rule, exceedingly fond of fresh fruits and green vegetables.

SOMERSETSHIRE FURMENTY.

To a pint of ready-boiled wheat put by degrees one quart of milk, breaking up the jelly; then add two ounces of picked currants; stir and cook in a double boiler until currants are tender. Beat the yolks of two eggs with a little grated nutmeg and two tablespoonfuls of milk; add to the wheat; stir together a few minutes over the fire; sweeten to taste and serve cold with whipped cream or fruit.

ALBANY PUDDING.

Thickly butter a rather shallow pudding dish, line sides and bottom with slices of bread; make a custard of milk, eggs and sugar and pour into the dish; place thin slices of buttered bread on top of custard; sprinkle with sugar, a few chopped almonds and currants. Bake until custard is set. Serve with fresh fruit sauce.

SPAGHETTI, MEXICAN STYLE.

Put two tablespoonfuls of oil or butter in a porcelain-lined saucepan; when hot add quarter of a pound of spaghetti broken in three-inch lengths, half a sliced onion, one large tomato cut into cubes, a green, sweet pepper sliced, and salt and pepper to taste. Stir and cook until slightly brown. Then add one and a half cups of good stock or hot water and cook slowly until all the water is absorbed and the spaghetti is tender. Serve hot.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

(No attention paid to inquiries not giving name and address of writer, plainly written).

Mrs. R. R. C. writes: Can a jelly be made from cherries without adding gelatine, that will keep for any length of time if stiffened with gelatine?

CHERRY JELLY.

Almost delicious jelly can be made of murillo cherries. Do not add gelatine, as the fruit juice will "jell" beautifully if you use the fruit before it is fully ripe. Murillo and pie cherries mixed make a nice, tart jelly. Merely cover the fruit with cold water and let heat slowly on back of range; as soon as cherries are soft enough, mash with a wooden spoon and turn into jelly bags and let drain. Do not squeeze if you want a very fine, clear jelly. Measure your juice and proceed same as with other kinds of jelly.

TEMPERATURE FOR BREAD SPONGE

Mrs. C. P. B. writes: I am a young and inexperienced housekeeper. Have been very successful in following your bread recipe until this weather has become warm. Should I put the sponge to rise over hot water, or in a warm temperature in summer?

No, unless the day is very raw and chilly. At the usual summer temperature the sponge will rise if allowed to stand, covered closely, of course, on the kitchen table. Keep it away from artificial heat in warm weather.

RUSSIAN TEA.

Mrs. J. D. B. requests a recipe for Russian tea, served with Jamaica rum.

For Russian tea make the following mixture: Half a pound of Formosa Oolong, six ounces of Ceylon and two ounces of best English breakfast tea; add to this the dried peel of an orange cut into small pieces. Take four good sized teaspoonsfuls of this mixture and pour over it a quart of freshly boiled water. Let stand closely covered for five minutes. Put half a teaspoonful of crushed sugar or sugar crystals in each cup with half a teaspoonful of Jamaica rum, half a thin slice of lemon, a preserved cherry or strawberry and pour the tea over these and serve.

TAMMANY

Hopes to Have Charles M. Schwab Join Its Organization.

New York, June 26.—Tammany politicians are flirting with the United States Steel corporation, or at least with its president, Charles M. Schwab. Even since Mr. Schwab came to live in New York, leading Tammany men have been indefatigable in their attentions to him. While he was living at the Waldorf-Astoria they frequently called and invited him out. He was not inclined to accept, pleading the pressure of business.

When he removed from the Waldorf last week to the Loraine at Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, he began to mingle with the Tammany men, who make their headquarters at Delmonico's, a block away. A night or two ago he was the guest of a well-known lawyer, who makes a specialty of looking out for the interests of corporations like that over which Mr. Schwab presides.

One of the guests said afterward: "He is the most beautiful sparrer I ever met. He is not a dyed-in-the-wool Republican like most big corporation men. I should say he had a good deal of Democratic blood. Maybe we can make a Tammany Hall man out of him." Mr. Schwab has not indicated any desire to mix in local politics, but Tammany men have an idea that he may become a member of the Tammany organization. He lives in the Twenty-ninth assembly district.

FRANCHISES.

Court Petitioned to Protect Street Road Syndicate In Chicago.

Chicago, June 26.—W. L. Elkins, of Philadelphia, representing the Widener-Elkins-Whitney syndicate, has filed a petition in the United States circuit court asking that the city of Chicago be restrained from interfering with the operation of the West Chicago and North Chicago street railways. The plaintiff asks the court to declare that the companies were invested, by the state, with franchises good until 1960, and that the city be further restrained from forfeiting the charters on July 30, 1903.

As the plaintiff in the case represents those in control of the former Yerkes system of surface lines, the suit is looked upon as the first step in the franchise war here.

According to city officials, the present franchise expires in 1903, and recently city officials have been attempting to formulate plans for the disposition of the franchises when they shall have been forfeited. Various plans have been discussed, including propositions that the city shall retain the franchises and lease the rights on a sliding scale of revenue to the municipality.

RHEA-LEE.

Daughter of Gen. Lee Wedded at New York.

New York, June 26.—The wedding of Miss Ellen Lee, daughter of Brig. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, to First Lieut. James Cooper Rhea of the Seventh cavalry, U. S. A., took place yesterday in the Church of the Transfiguration in this city.

Miss Anne Fitzhugh Lee, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. First Lieut. Evan Harris Humphrey of the Seventh cavalry was the best man. The ushers were Lieuts. Clinton C. Carter, Artillery corps; Leon B. Kromer, Tenth U. S. cavalry; Pierce H. Murphy, Seventh U. S. cavalry, and John Dudley Long, Twelfth U. S. cavalry.

A few days will be spent by the young couple in travel before they start for Cuba, where the bridegroom is now stationed.

Beware of Ointments For Catarrh That Contain Mercury

as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damages they will do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally, and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

DEGREES BESTOWED

High Honors Conferred at Harvard Commencement Exercises.

German Ambassador Is Made a Doctor of Laws.

Dedication of Gates of New Fence of the College.

Cambridge, Mass., June 26.—Commencement exercises at Harvard university today followed the usual order. The president and fellows of the university, the overseer and the various faculties met the recipients of the honorary degrees. Governor Crane and his staff and other guests, and all the alumni, marched to Sanders' theater, escorted by all the seniors and candidates for degrees in the caps and gowns. The commencement speakers were: Lawrence Hayward, Marlborough, Mass.; Sanford H. E. Freund, New York; Samuel Smith Drury, Bristol, R. I., and Herbert C. Kahn, Indianapolis. Following the exercises at Sanders', the various classes held reunions. Polls for the election of five overseers were opened from 10 a. m. until 5 p. m.

One of the most interesting of today's events was the dedication of the gates of the new fence surrounding the college grounds, by the classes which presented the memorials to the university.

Today's commencement was noteworthy for the conferring of degrees in course upon the largest number of men who have ever presented themselves in the history of the college. The honorary degrees were conferred as follows:

Masters of Art—Edward Livermore Burlingame, author and editor; John Bellows, authority on Roman antiquities in Britain, essayist, lexicographer; Hugo Munsterberg, phychologist; Theobald Smith, pathologist; Charles Gross, historian. The three latter are Harvard professors.

Doctors of divinity—David Gordon Lyon, Assyrian scholar; Alexander McKenzie, pastor for thirty-four years of the evangelical branch of the first church of Cambridge, and secretary of the Harvard board of overseers since 1875.

Doctors of laws—Dr. Caleb Loring, judge supreme judicial court of Massachusetts; Henry Smith Pritchett, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Jacobus Henrieus Van Hoff, great physical chemist; James Ford Rhodes, historian; James Tyndale Mitchell, of the supreme court of Pennsylvania; Charles Sprague Sergeant, first director of the Arnold Arboretum, Boston; Wayne MacVeagh, former attorney general of the United States and minister to Italy; Theodore Von Hollenben, ambassador of the German empire.

Conspicuous and unusual honors were conferred upon the German ambassador, in addition to the formal degree. In the procession to Sanders theater his official rank was determined as next that of the governor and he sat next that of official on the stage. When President Eliot announced the conferring of the degree, the audience cheered, a compliment which was not paid any other person.

DIVORCE SUIT RESULTED.

Charles H. Harris Dropped a Receipted Hotel Bill.

New York, June 26.—A receipted hotel bill which accidentally dropped out of Charles Taylor Harris' pocket led to divorce proceedings against him, so said his wife, Mrs. Blanche Hutchinson Harris, in Justice Gaynor's part of the supreme court in Brooklyn.

Mr. Harris is president of the Caledon Terra Cotta company.

"In July, 1899," his wife says, "he went South, telling me he had business in Richmond, Va.

"When he returned home a paper dropped from his coat pocket. It was a bill, and read like this:

"'Charles Harris and wife, to Hygeia hotel, Old Point Comfort, Va.: For room and board, $16.75.'

"I also discovered letters afterward which convinced me that I had good grounds for divorce."

Mrs. Harris names Neva Gould, who, she says, is a Chicago typewriter, as corespondent.

Justice Gaynor allowed Mrs. Harris $2500 a year alimony and $250 counsel fee.

Mrs. Harris says her husband has accused her of being a bridge whist gambler for high stakes. She denies that she indulges in this game to any greater extent than most ladies in society, and says she plays for prizes only.

Diversified Fishing at Minong

The Peaceful Valley resort at Minong, Wis., on the "Omaha Line," is proving to be a very interesting spot for a few days' or weeks' outing. The conveniences of getting back and forth excel those of other localities, and the clean, comfortable home, with its beautiful spread, attracts the hungry sportsman. The trout streams, the numerous lakes, with most excellent bass and muskallonge fishing, provide a diversity of sport. Boats, canoes, guides and all conveniences at Minong. See ticket agent, "The North-Western" Line for particulars.

THE BIG RACE

Brilliant Assemblage at New London.

Bright Prospects For Exciting Contest.

New London, Conn., June 27.—An intensely hot sun shone this morning on New London harbor, in which was as pretty a fleet of boats as has ever been seen here. It was a varied assemblage of craft, from government boats to naphtha launches in the steaming class, and from cat boats to the great single stick racing boats in the sailing class. Above and below the bridge during the early hours of the morning there were enough handsome private boats to have lined the four-mile course in close column, three or four vessels deep on each side.

The boats comprising this fleet were brightly decorated with the favorite college colors of the owners prominently displayed amidst the usual abundance of national emblems, club pennants and burgees.

By 11 o'clock most of the vessels of the fleet down the harbor were on the move to take advantageous positions above the bridge and along the course, and shortly after that hour the majority of the boats had dropped anchor outside of the flags that mark the line in which the crews row, directed in this operation by the officers of the United States steamer Dallas, which acted as course boat.

Interest of the early morning was centered on appearance in the fleet of the big 90-footer Constitution, and as she lay in the lower harbor she received continuous attention from the occupants of scores of yacht tenders.

In the fleet the United States government was represented by the Dolphin, having aboard Secretary Long and party; the Gresham, with a number of the lighthouse and revenue service officials aboard; the Dallas, the Dexter and the Algonquin, of the revenue service, acting as course boats, and the Onondaga with a party of engineers.

While the breeze, gentle at first, grew in force in the early part of the day, the weatherwise expressed confidence that the conditions for the race would be right when the time came for the start of the freshmen's crews at 2 p. m. The hotels and other places of resort were filled with visitors. The betting, which was not heavy, was at odds of 5 to 2 on the Yale freshmen early in the day, while the Yale 'varsity crew was the favorite at 5 to 4.

At Red Top, where Harvard's headquarters are located, Coach Storrow gave his final instructions to the crimson crews and then the 'varsity and freshmen went out on the river for a limbering up. After rowing up the river 200 yards they started on a race for an equal distance. The freshmen splashed some at the start, but the 'varsity pulled like a unit, the blades touching the water with deftness and precision. On this trial as well as of the other two which were held, the 'varsity eight finished perceptibly ahead of the youngsters. The four-oared crew next went out and indulged in a number of short spurts. While they were out a launch containing Secretary of the Navy Long arrived at Red Top pier and was greeted with much enthusiasm by the Harvard men. The visitors remained about a quarter of an hour and then passed down the river. None of the crews was out over fifteen minutes. The remainder of the day was spent in quiet. Coach Storrow said the men all were in good condition.

At the Yale quarters the men spent the morning hours in restful quiet. It is probable that they will not put their foot in a boat until the hour of racing arrives.

The first race of the day, the freshmen eights, starts at the drawbridge about 4 o'clock and will be rowed up stream, finishing at the navy; distance two miles. Harvard has the east course, Yale is on the west side of the river.

The 'varsity fours will be called immediately after the finish of the freshman race. This also will be up river two miles, starting at the navy yard and finishing at Gales ferry. Harvard will again be on the east side and Yale on the west.

The chief event of the regatta, the 'varsity eights, is scheduled for 6:30 o'clock, distance four miles, down the river, the start being at Gales ferry and the finish at the drawbridge. In this race Yale has the east course and Harvard the west.

PRIZE CASES DECIDED

Equity Court Makes Ruling on What Property Captured at Manila Bay and Santiago Bay Constitutes Prizes.

Washington, June 27.—Justice Bradley, in the equity court today, decided the Manila bay and Santiago bay prize cases. The decision is in favor of the claimants as to vessels captured and as to property taken from vessels captured. The decision holds that vessels sunk and afterward raised were captured and not destroyed; that property captured ashore is not subject to prize; that the property taken from vessels sunk and not claimed as prize and for which bounty was given is prize; that the cascoes or cargo boats and all floating derelicts that were captured at Manila are not prize.

The Santiago case hinges upon the same decision. According to counsel the claimants in the Manila case receive a total of $288,000, divided among about 2000 persons, and the claimants in the Santiago case will get in the neighborhood of $500,000, distributed among about 3000 persons. These figures, however, are not final. These amounts are in addition to the bounties already allowed by the court of claims.

MINISTERS NOT AGREED

Foreign Envoys Fail to Come to an Understanding on Several Minor Conditions of Chinese Indemnity.

Pekin, June 27.—The foreign ministers at today's meeting only discussed minor points of the indemnity question. The British minister, Sir Ernest Satow, refuses to agree to a 10 per cent increase in the tariff in the event that China finds herself unable to meet her payments. The Russian minister, M. de Giers, has not yet agreed that the interest on the indemnity is to be 4 per cent. The United States special representative, Mr. Rockhill, thinks there should be little further delay.

When these points are settled the work of the ministers will be practically completed. The Rev. Arthur Smith, the missionary and author, preaching at Tien Tsin on the anniversary of the relief of that city (June 24), said he thoroughly agreed with Sir Robert Hart in the statement that unless there was a complete regeneration of China in a few years the country would be menaced by 20,000,000 Boxers. The Chinese would never forget that the Boxer movement was fully approved by the court.

CLOUDBURST

Works Further Damage In Coal Fields of West Virginia.

Bluefield, W. Va., June 27.—A cloudburst over Coaldale, Simmons Creek and Pocahontas wrought considerable damage last night. Houses were flooded, yards covered with mud and several hundred feet of track was washed out. There is no doubt that much of the temporary repairs were so damaged as to greatly delay traffic between Ennis and Vivian. Information is meager.

NO LIVES LOST.

Keyser, W. Va., June 27.—Later advices from the new creek valley, which was inundated by a cloudburst night before last indicated that no lives were lost and that the damage was confined to livestock and growing crops.

PENSIONS GRANTED.

Washington, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following pensions have been granted: Original—Maitland S. Robbins, Park Rapids, $6. Increase—Earl Hoisington, Delano, $10; Milton D. Buell, West Duluth, $12.

FATALITIES

Which Have Occurred In Philippines Recently.

Manila, June 27.—Lieut. Edward Downs of the First infantry and one private of that regiment have been killed in the Southern part of the island of Samar.

Capt. Woodburn of the Nineteenth infantry has captured Samson's camp in the island of Bohol. Private M. Kraus of that regiment was killed and four men were wounded.

Lieut. Mina McNair has captured five insurgents in the northwestern part of the province of Tayabas, island of Luzon.

The army register gives the name of Maj. Thomas C. Woodbury of the Nineteenth infantry, but does not mention a Capt. Woodburn.

KILLED BY EXPLOSION.

Lock Haven, Pa., June 27.—Three persons are reported to have been killed and two seriously injured by an explosion of dynamite near Karthaus. The men were blasting for a new railroad.

WENT DRIVING AGAIN.

Washington, June 27.—The president and Mrs. McKinley, accompanied by Dr. Rixey went driving again this forenoon. Mrs. McKinley continues to improve.

RACE OF THE AUTOS

The Great French Event Was Started at an Early Hour.

Hundreds of Steel Steeds Participate In the Contest.

Foxhall Keene Starts In His New Heavy Racing Machine.

Paris, June 27, 9 a. m.—From midnight on during the early morning hours a stream of bicyclists and automobiles marked the road from Paris to Ft. Champigny, a dozen miles east of the city, the beginning of the automobile race between Paris and Berlin, which started at 3:30 this morning, attracting unusual interest. It was indeed a most picturesque sight. The cross roads of Champigny, where hundreds of bicycles and automobiles were assembled, were illuminated with Chinese lanterns, while every few minutes a racing car would dash up and take the position allotted, being soon lost to view. Later, when the bright sunshine put in an appearance, the auto cars departed with even greater speed and were soon enveloped in dust.

At the starting place at the cross roads of the village of Champigny by 3:30 a. m., the hour when the first automobile was started, at least 2000 enthusiasts had gathered, many being scattered along the road toward Berlin. The first few racers left before break of day, losing little time in covering the first 2000 yards. The cloud of dust which alone could be seen whirling across the plateau of Champigny resembled nothing so much as the smoke of an express engine. The racing cars were mere machines of iron and steel, and no pretense was made to secure comfort for the drivers or engineers. They carried little or nothing except spare tires and cans of petroleum. The arrangements were carried out like clock work. There were about thirty persons who had entered who did not start, among them the American artist Dannatt. Many cheers were given as the automobiles made their departure. There was only one lady competitor, a handsome French woman named Gast, who was attired in a smartly-made waterproof costume.

Foxhall Keene got away at 7 o'clock. He wore a blue serge suit, covered with a rubber jacket, and a gray cap. "I don't expect to win," said Mr. Keene to the correspondent of the Associated Press, as he went to the starting line, "but I am going for the sport of the thing. I never participated in a race of this kind before. My auto car is quite new. I drove it for the first time Tuesday and I find the tension is terrible. My car ought to go 35 kilometers an hour, so apparently I stand a fair chance in the race, but I shall not get the best speed out of it, as I have not had sufficient experience with it. These French crack chaffeurs will probably beat me two hours during the first day's run. Nevertheless I mean to do my best and win if possible."

M. Fournier arrived at Aix La Chapelle at 2:30 p. m. ahead of all competitors. This place was the end of the first day's run, 283 miles.

FIVE YEARS.

Barker Who Shot Keller Sentenced By the Court.

New York, June 27.—Thomas G. Barker, convicted in the Hudson county court at Jersey City last week of felonious assault upon the Rev. John Keller, of Arlington, was today sentenced to five years imprisonment in the state penitentiary.

BOER ATTACK

Fought at Richmond Retiring on Approach of Reinforcements.

Richmond, Cape Colony, June 27.—A large force of Boers, commanded by Maland and Smit, attacked Richmond at daybreak, June 25. The fighting lasted till dusk, when the Boers retired on the approach of British reinforcements.

NAVAL ARCHITECTS

Receive Messages From Emperor William.

Glasgow, June 27.—The members of the institute of naval architects who attended today's session of that organization here were gratified by the receipt of messages from Emperor William and King Edward. The former telegraphed that the promotion of the shipbuilding and international commerce was calculated to "knit closer kindred nations, moved by the same spirit of enterprise and has all my sympathy. I wish every success to the useful and noble work in which you are engaged."

EPECTED AUGUST 15.

Glasgow, June 27.—The Shamrock II is expected to arrive at New York about Aug. 15.

HOT WEATHER PREVAILS.

Henley, June 27.—The hot weather prevailing here is curtailing the severe work of the crews which are to take part in the regatta. The Pennsylvania university crew went over the full course today, but they little more than paddled, taking seven minutes and forty second to cover the distance, one mile and 550 yards.

CLOSES BANK

Financial Sensation In New York City.

Seventh National In Hands of Comptroller.

New York, June 27.—The Seventh National bank was closed at 10:45 today, when the following notice was posted on its doors:

"This bank is in the hands of the comptroller of the currency.

"FOREST RAYNOR,
"National Bank Examiner."

At the same time William N. Cromwell, the bank's attorney, gave out the following statement:

"In justice to the depositors and stockholders of the Seventh National bank, William Nelson Cromwell, the bank's attorney, has advised the bank to suspend payment."

This action was taken after a protracted conference in the directors' room of the bank, which was participated in by the new president, Edward R. Thomas, ex-President William H. Kimball, Edwin Gould, Lorenzo Semple, who is one of the directors, and several other members of the board.

After the suspension of the bank, the following statement was made at the clearing house:

"At the clearing house this morning the Seventh National bank came in debtor $644,108.95. The clearing house committee has been in session since 9:30 awaiting the results of the clearing. When it was found out the debit balance was so heavy the committee communicated with the officers of the bank, and was informed that the board of directors was in session and that a decision would be arrived at within fifteen or twenty minues as to the action of the bank. In consequence of this statement, the clearings were held back thirty minutes. At 10:45 a. m. William Nelson Cromwell, Edwin Gould and Mr. Thomas, president of the bank, came into the clearing house and informed the committee, that in view of their heavy debit balance and for other reasons, it was considered wise that the bank should temporarily suspend. The clearing house committee thereupon directed the manager of that institution to elminate from the clearings all operations of the Seventh National bank."

A member of the clearing house committee says that at this morning's meeting the name of no institution other than the Seventh National bank was referred to.

The Seventh National bank was the custodian of the funds of the New York postoffice. Assistant Postmaster Morgan said when he heard the news of the bank's suspension:

"The postoffice is amply protected. When the account was opened the bank put up $250,000 in government bonds as security. The present state of the postoffice's account with the bank I do not know, but I am investigating it."

At 11:20 o'clock the officials of the embarrassed bank posted the following notice:

"Checks drawn by the Manhattan State hospital will be paid at the Chase National bank. Drafts drawn by the St. Lawrence County bank, Canton, N. Y., will be paid at the Chase National bank."

Among the institutions having close business relations with the Seventh National bank was the stock brokerage firm of Marquand & Co. Frank B. Poor, of the firm, made the following statement after the bank's suspension:

"From the outlook just now I think we're going on. At the same time I cannot tell. Just now everything is uncertain in the business world, but I believe we will get through."

Later it was learned from an authoritative source that the bank has on deposit $207,000 of postal funds, all of which is amply secured by bonds.

The statement of the Seventh National bank for the week ending June 22, 1901, to the clearing house was as follows: Capital, $376,600; net profits, $234,400; loans, $4,407,100; specie, $557,700; legal tenders, $777,700; deposits, $5,712,400. Percentage of reserves, 23 4-10. A statement of the bank's condition probably will be made public later in the day. All the banks made the exchange at the clearing house as usual.

The bank opened for business as usual today, but at 10:45 the doors were closed by Cashier Adams, who said this action was resolved on at a meeting of the board of directors, depositors and the attorney for the bank, held this morning.

The Seventh National bank was originally the old Seventh Ward bank, and was established in 1833. For a long time control was held by John McAnerney, a Southerner, who was president of the bank. In May, 1899, First Assistant Postmaster General Perry S. Heath practically acquired a controlling interest in the stock of the bank, and on July 4 William H. Kimball resigned as national bank examiner to become vice president of the bank, several changes in the directorate being made at the same time. Josiah Quincy, of Boston, was one of the directors elected then. On Aug. 2, 1899, Mr. McAnerney resigned the presidency and Vice President Kimball was chosen in his stead. Fletcher S. Heath was elected vice president.

The officers and directors are as follows: E. R. Thomas, president; Fletcher S. Heath, vice president; George W. Adams, cashier; directors, George W. Adams, Eugene Bissell, Thomas M. Boyd, Fletcher S. Heath, Perry S. Heath, Erskine Hewitt, William H. Kimball, Alex McDonald, Guy G. Major, William P. Orr, Josiah Quincy, Frank H. Ray, John A. Sullivan, W. H. Taylor and Samuel Thomas.

Washington, June 27.—Comptroller Dawes today ordered the closing of the Seventh National bank of New York and appointed Forest Raynor, national bank examiner, temporary receiver. Later the comptroller made the following statement:

"Comptroller Dawes stated that on Tuesday he received word from the national bank examiner that Henry Marquand & Co. had recently become indebted in a sum approximating $1,600,000 to the Seventh National bank of New York which was secured by collateral of a doubtful nature. Upon receipt on Wednesday of further information regarding the nature of the collaterals securing this loan, he sent a telegram to E. R. Thomas, president of the Seventh National bank as follows:

"'I have just received information from the bank examiner that Henry Marquand & Co. have loans of large amount in your bank approximating $1,600,000. Unless promptly and satisfactorily assured that this loan will be taken up and cash therefor put into the bank by Saturday night, June 29, I will appoint a receiver for the bank. Please convene your board of directors and announce this to them.'

"In explanation of the conditions imposed, the comptroller states that while advances had been made by the directors to the bank, they had been made up on the credit of good securities owned by the bank, but that no such advances affected the bank's solvency while the Henry Marquand paper remained. It was necessary, therefore, for him in the performance of his duty to promptly impose the conditions before further withdrawals of deposits were made. The comptroller stated that the Marquand loan is partially secured and it is hoped that the loss to depositors will not be large."

Salt Lake, Utah, June 27.—Former first assistant postmaster general, Perry S. Heath when shown the dispatches announcing the suspension today of the Seventh National bank of New York, said the action of the officials was a surprise to him.

"I received two telegrams this morning," said Mr. Heath. "Both stated that the bank was in good condition and had plenty of funds on hand. I cannot imagine what kind of a snarl they have got into. Of course there are outstanding loans, but so far as I know they are of gilt-edged kind and the bank has had no entanglements.

"Now the bank has no stock accounts that I know of. The men in charge there are among the best and shrewdest in the financial world, and I am confident the affairs of the institution will be straightened out quickly. I have not the slightest idea what has brought about the suspension. It is a great surprise to me."

BANK IS A TOTAL WRECK

Everything Lost In the Failure of the Leipsiger Institution---One of the Directors Has Been Arrested.

Berlin, June 27.—Herr Exner, director of the Leipsiger bank, which suspended payment Tuesday, June 25, has been arrested. The public prosecutor is investigating the affairs of the bank.

It turns out that the report of the Leipsig bank, published yesterday was misleading. Reliable information shows that the sum of 111,000,000 marks, which forms the bulk of the assets, includes 87,000,000 loaned to the Cassel Treber-Trocknung company, of which only a small part can be realized upon.

The Tageblatt today says the Leipsiger bank quite recently advanced another 15,000,000 marks to the Cassel, Treber-Trocknung company after it was known that the latter was insolvent.

Representatives of the leading banks of Berlin say there is no doubt all the stock of the Leipsiger bank, and its reserve, amounting to 63,000,000 marks, are lost. The policy of the Leipsiger bank's board of directors has for years been such as to lead to the belief that other arrests on the charge of culpable negligence, will follow the taking into custody of Herr Exner. The members of the board of directors include some of Leipsig's wealthiest citizens.

The Berlin, Leipsig and Dresden morning papers express the highest indignation at the conduct of the Leipsiger bank directors, and demand a searching investigation. The Vossische Zeitung, editorially, says:

"In view of the whole series of recent failures, it is evident that the present German system of Aufsichtsrath, (namely, board of directors or trustees) urgently requires reforming or abolishing, the latter preferred."

HEAVY STORMS.

Do Great Damage In German Districts.

Berlin, June 27.—News received here today from Rominten, Prussia, shows that the whole of the Rominten district has been devastated, since June 24, by hail storms and cloudbursts. Emperor William's estate at Rominten has been greatly damaged. His majesty, today, upon receipt of the news, ordered that speedy relief be sent, and himself forwarded a large sum of money to be distributed among the sufferers.

LANDMARK DESTROYED.

Malden, Mass., June 27.—One of the landmarks of this city was destroyed by fire early today, when George P. Cox' last factory was burned and a loss of $35,000 resulted. The property was partially insured.

ALL WILL RECOVER.

Peru, Ind., June 27.—An official report of Hospital Surgeon Griswold, of the Wabash railway shows twenty-nine patients who were victims of yesterday's wreck. All will recover.

AFTER THE FOURTH

Paving Work Will Then Begin on Superior Street.

Contractors Are Ready to Begin Work at Once.

Street Railway Company Will Start Track Laying First.

The paving of Superior street will probably not be commenced until after the Fourth of July, as the city does not want to tear up the street until the celebration is over. The street railway company has received some of its new rails and now has enough to commence laying its tracks. The contractors say that they are ready to begin paving now, and will keep about one block behind the street car company. They can complete the paving in six weeks, so Superior stret will probably be done by the latter part of August.

The Michigan street paving is going along rapidly, and will be completed in about two weeks, with the exception of 100 feet on the lower side of the street between Second and Third avenues west where buildings are being erected. The street, however, will be open for traffic at the expiration of that time. As much as has been completed is in excellent condition, and the rains of last Monday affected only two places on the whole street. These were where water pipes had been recently laid, and the ground was rather soft. In regard to the durability of the paving there can be very little doubt, as a 15-ton boiler for the Spalding hotel was hauled over the street without the least perceptible damage. The contractors say that this is one of the best tests known. Work is going on at the rate of a block each week, and there are only two blocks to be finished.

It is said that the avenues from Superior street to Michigan street ought to be paved with sandstone, as a good deal of the heavy hauling will fall on them. If the avenues are ordinary roadbeds, Michigan street will be full of mud after each rain. If they were of sandstone they would be much more serviceable and the streets could be kept clean with greater ease.

The general consensus of opinion seems to be that the paving is eminently satisfactory to all concerned, and although there are some who think that other material would have been better, they are few and far between. Several contractors, when seen, expressed themselves much pleased with the result, and the paving bids fair to give general satisfaction.

IS FOUND GUILTY

Joseph Beauchamp of Duluth Is Convicted At Crookston.

He Shot His Wife There a Few Weeks Ago.

The Jury Recommended Mercy---Reformatory Sentence Given.

Joseph Beauchamp, of this city, who shot his young wife at Crookston, some weeks ago, the shot not, however, killing her, has been found guilty of assault in the first degree at Crookston and was sentenced to the reformatory, the jury having recomended him to the mercy of the court.

The case will be remembered here as a rather singular one. The first information of the affair here was a telegram from Crookston to arrest the man. He at first claimed that he was not there at the time, but later admitted that he had been out there, but claimed that he did not intend to shoot her and that it was accidental.

The story he told was a singular one and rather inconsistent with the facts as shown on the trial. Beauchamp and his wife had separated temporarily, but not on account of any trouble. Beauchamp had been sick for a long time at the hospital in Duluth and this necessitated so much expense that his wife went to live with friends. Bauchamp after getting out of the hospital went to Crookston, where his wife was to see him about coming back to live with him. They discussed the matter and the woman said that as soon as he was able to support her she would return to him, but that he was not able to do so. The afternoon of the day on which he was to return to Duluth, they started from South Crookston, where Mrs. Beauchamp had been living with her sister, and as they passed a box car, Beauchamp stepped back and shot her in the back. Strange to say, she did not immediately realize that she was injured and walked some distance before the pain became severe enough to warn her that she was in a dangerous condition. They then called a carriage and the woman returned to her home. Bauchamp came to Duluth at once.

SUIT OVER LAUNDRY.

Small Sum Causes Heap of Trouble.

A suit over one package of laundry, including three shirts and six cuffs, has been through a trial in the justice court at Ely, and now it has been appealed to the district court, which august tribunal will be asked to pass upon the merits of a dispute that will pile up costs far beyond the value of the property before it is finished. In fact the costs in the justice court were $23, while the amount sought was only $6.

The Herald published the story of the dispute at the time it occurred. John Donovan, of Ely, was in Duluth and he sent his laundry from the St. James hotel to the Acme laundry. Instead of coming back to the hotel it went to Ely, and Donovan waited for it in vain for several days, and when it came he refused to take it. Then he brought suit against J. T. Armstead, proprietor of the laundry, for $6, which was alleged to be the value of the property. He won his suit before Justice Van Blarcom, at Ely, who gave him judgment for $6 and costs, which made $29 altogether. Mr. Armstead defended his own case up there, but for the district court case he has discharged his justice court attorney and retained John Jenswold, Jr.

Building Permits.

Building permits were today granted A. D. McRae for a frame dwelling on the southside of Superior street, between Twenty-sixth and Twenty-seventh avenues west, to cost $800; to Jonas Anderson, for a fruit stand on the north side of Fifth street, between Twenty-fifth and Twenty-sixth avenues west, to cost $200; to Byron Woodward for alterations on a building on the north side of Michigan street, between Fifteenth and Sixteenth avenues west, to cost $1350, and to J. G. Code, to finish a basement under a building on the north side of Fourth street, between Eighth and Ninth avenues east, to cost $200.

THREE OLD MAIDS.

There are, doubtless, hundreds of Union soldiers living who hold as precious legacies their experiences in the civil war, but it is questionable if there can be found one whose escape from captivity and probable death was attended by circumstances in which real humor and genuine fun were present, says the Baltimore American. Such, however, was the experience of Capt. Nathaniel David Porter, one of the most highly respected residents of East Baltimore, and whose home is on the corner of Eastern and Patterson Park avenues. Capt. Porter is now 83 years old, but is still in the enjoyment of fairly good health. He is a daily visitor to the shipping circles of Canton, and one of his delights is to tell of some of the happenings of the great strife in which he took part.

A few days ago, while entertaining a number of friends, he said he owed his life to Providence, a horse and three old maids.

"I assisted," he said, "in raising the Third Maryland infantry, and held the rank of captain, when I was assigned to provost duty in Charlestown, W. Va. I was a boarder at a house kept by three old maids, when suddenly one night the Confederates swooped down on the place. They surrounded the house where I was and cut off every avenue of escape. Things were beginning to look very blue for me, and I was looking forward to a cheerful prospect of spending a large portion of my life in a Southern prison. Those three old maids, however, took charge of me, and before I could remonstrate with them they had me tucked safely away in bed. I don't know how they did it, but when the 'Johnnies' entered the house they found the sickliest looking man they ever saw in their lives lying in that bed. The commanding officer of the visitors sent off for an ambulance with which to remove me to a prison and then left me unguarded. The moment those Confederates left that house I was out of that bed in a jiffy and creeping downstairs. I saw a horse belonging to Capt. Imboden, the Confederate officer, standing near the house. Without hesitation I jumped into the saddle and took out as fast as the horse could carry me toward Harper's Ferry. As I sped away the Confederate soldiers caught sight of me, and the way they shouted and fired shot after shot, whizzing uncomfortably close to my head, fairly made my hair stand. Fortunately their aim was bad, and I reached Harper's Ferry, where the Union soldiers were encamped, with a whole skin. The horse, which I had ridden off so unceremoniously, I sold for $180. A week later I returned to Charlestown and thanked the old maids for having saved my life."

"PHTHOLOGNYRRH."

He walked to the hotel register and signed his name with a flourish, "E. K. Phthologngyrrh, says the Cincinnati Enquirer.

"Look here, Turner," exclaimed the clerk, who knew him well, "are they hunting for you or what? Where do you get that outlandish name?"

"Get back, my boy, get back! You're slow," replied Turner, airly, as he lit a cigar; "that's my same old name written in plain English and pronounced as usual just 'Turner.' Look at it. Of course I do it just to get them all guessing. They wonder what nation I am from; what my name is. I can now hear people talk about me all round. It is, as I said before, English spelling. 'Phth,' there is the sound of 't' in 'phthisis'; 'olo,' there is the 'ur' in 'Colonel'; 'gn,' there is the 'n' in 'gnat'; 'yrrh' is the sound of 'er' in 'myrrh.' Now, if that doesn't spell 'Turner' what does it spell?"

STORM DAMAGE.

Amount Larger Than at First Supposed.

Commissioner Butchart, of the board of public works, says that from the number of complaints that are coming into the office daily of damage done by the storm of last Monday, the aggregato amount of damage as the result of the storm will run up to a much higher figure than has been estimated. The two days following the storm a number of complaints came to the board of public works and it was thought a conservative estimate to put the figures at from $5000 to $6000, but Mr. Butchart says that from reports already in of cellars flooded, sewers and gutters washed out, sidewalks gone, $10,000 will hardly cover the damage. The city was visited by a terrific wind and rain storm shortly after daylight this morning, but it was of short duration and not enough water fell to do material damage.

MATTER ARGUED.

Hill Habeas Corpus Taken Under Advisement.

Judge Dibell this morning took under advisement the application of William Hill for his release from the county jail on a writ of habeus corpus. Alexander Marshall appeared for Hill and County Attorney McClintock appeared to defend the commitment on the peculiarities of which the application for the writ was based.

The commitment is fearfully and wonderfully made, as some of the commitments put out by country justices are. County Attorney McClintock himself had to admit that it was not precisely the way he should have made it out if he had been going to do it, though he thought it was a sufficient commitment to hold the prisoner until his term of ninety days expires. Mr. Marshall showed that the commitment, in expressing the offense, made no mention of the value of the property claimed to have been "unlawfully obtained," did not state who owned it, and did not state any offense whatever. For all the commitment stated the property might have belonged to the defendant himself.

After the argument Judge Dibell took the matter under advisement, and the decision will be announced later.

Hill is charged with having stolen a silver watch and a shoemaker's "tang," whatever that may be. He got ninety days for it in a Sparta justice court.

Increases Its Capital.

The Mesaba Iron Mining company of this city has increased its capital stock from $50,000 to $500,000. This company has been confused with the Mesaba Iron company, the one in which Ex-Gov. Ramsey, W. W. Spalding and others are interested. It is an entirely different one and is one of the Roberts-Sellwood companies.

THE POLICE COURT.

Louis Whistler Falls a Second Time.

Louis Whistler and Frank Prickett, a half breed river driver from Bayfield, Wis., were lined up before Judge Edson this morning to answer to the charge of drunkenness. Whistler was arrested on a similar charge about six weeks ago and was released under suspended sentence on the promise that he would reform. His only excuse this morning was that he took a few drinks and his system not being used to it, he speedily succumbed to the effects. His fine was $5 and costs, in default of which he was committed to the county jail at hard labor for ten days. Prickett claimed to have a job out on the Cloquet river and agreed to go after it immediately if released.

Charles Tennfehock, a 13-year-old boy, was arraigned this morning on the charge of petit larceny, the complainant being the Northern Pacific Railway company. It is charged that the lad stole about forty pounds of scrap iron valued at 20 cents. A plea of not guilty was entered and the boy's trial was set for tomorrow afternoon.

Refused to Clean Up.

The case of the city against Stanislaus Yanak for violation of the health ordinance was tried in municipal court this morning and the defendant was found guilty, being assessed the costs of the case, amounting to $6.12. He was given until July 16 to make payment. The complaint was made by Health Inspector Wold, who says that when he took up the duties of his office in the district in which Yanack resides, the press of the city were making very caustic comments on the sanitary conditions of the premises, that through his efforts all of the property owners but Yanak cleaned up their yards, the latter refusing to do so. There were a large number of witnesses, mostly tenants of Yanak's property and neighbors, and some interesting testimony was given. The defendant owns property at 1021 West Michigan street.

BLOODLESS DUEL.

Frenchmen Shoot at Each Other Without Results.

Paris, June 27.—As an outcome of the altercation which they had in the high court (senate) yesterday during the secret deliberation after the close of the trial of the Marquis des Lur-Saluces, Senators Le Provost Delinnay and Aucoin fought a duel with pistols this morning. Two shots were exchanged without any result.

KNIGHTS OF ST. JOHN.

Rochester Chosen For the Next Meeting Place.

Cincinnati, June 27.—Rochester, N. Y., was today chosen for the next international convention of the Knights of St. John. Supreme officers were elected as follows: President, Henry J. Friese, Erie, Pa.; vice presidents, J. J. Nunoid, Rochester, and Thomas McFarland, Philadelphia; secretary, M. J. Kane, Buffalo (re-elected); treasurer, John B. Todenbier, Detroit (re-elected). Several amendments to the constitution and a new ritual were adopted.

TO ABOLISH SLAVERY.

Will Devise Scheme For German East Africa.

Berlin, June 27.—At a meeting of the colonial council today, at which Mr. Stuebal, the director of the council presided, a committee was appointed to devise a scheme for gradually abolishing slavery in German East Africa.

The council also agreed to restrict foreign trade in that colony to as few harbors as possible.

$15.10 Milwaukee and Return.

June 27 to 30 the Northern Pacific railway will sell tickets Duluth to Milwaukee and return for $15.10, account state turnfest, valid returning up to and including July 2. For tickets call at city office, 332 West Superior street, Union depot, or Fifty-ninth avenue, West Duluth.

AT WEST DULUTH

Frank Lynch, the Northern Pacific company's agent at West Duluth, was arrested and arraigned in municipal court this morning on the charge of assault in the third degree, the complaining witness being Anna Laveigna, of West Duluth. The latter claims that the defendant's cow was with others running at large and trespassed on her property, whereupon she shut the frisky bovine in the barn and sent for the poundmaster. Before the officer arrived the defendant is said to have appeared on the scene and took the cow by force, breaking down the barn door. The complainant says that she stood with her arms across the doorway and refused to let the cow be taken until damages were paid, but that the defendant seized her by the arms and put her to one side in a forcible manner, injuring her arm and shoulder to an extent that she had to call a surgeon.

The defendant says that after he secured his cow he went direct to Justice Stone, in West Duluth, and entered a complaint against himself and paid a small fine that was imposed. He holds that the disposal of his case in the justice court will prevent further prosecution. The case was put over until next Tuesday morning.

A LIVELY STORM.

Another terrific storm spent its fury in this section of the city this morning. Early risers noticed clouds of a cyclonic nature hovering over the city, and there was considerable alarm among the citizens who have had personal experience with tornados. However, the apprehensions of the timid were not realized, as another thorough drenching was the only result.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Miss Emily Wright and Edin Stewart were married yesterday at the home of the bride, on Fifty-second avenue. The wedding was very unostentatious, and a small party of relatives and friends were present. In the evening Mr. and Mrs. Stewart left for St. Paul and other points South. They will enjoy a short tour and then return to West Duluth to make their home.

Henry Clark, a workman in one of the mills, was found guilty, in Judge Stone's court last night, of assault and battery, Henry Pousha being the victim. Clark was fined.

James Hall was fined in municipal court at Duluth this morning for keeping his place of business open last Sunday afternoon. The "open door" cost Mr. Hall $20 fine and $2.50 costs.

Mrs. M. C. Murray, of 121 Fifty-sixth avenue, is very ill. It is feared that she will have to be taken to a hospital and submit to an operation.

West Duluth has its second circus of the week today.

W. S. Cochrane, of Cloquet, is calling on friends in the city.

The drama to be given by the ladies of Pocahontas lodge has been postponed owing to the illness of Miss Willmer.

Martin Madson returned from Eveleth this afternoon.

The ball team between the Redmen and the Board of Trade teams has been indefinitely postponed on account of wet grounds.

Oscar Halvorsen, of Two Harbors, is visiting friends in town.

Dr. McKinley, who has been ill for two months as the result of an accident, suffered a relapse this morning.

Miss Ada Burnside has gone to Cameron, Wis., where she will remain a month with relatives.

Linden Lynch had a lively experience yesterday. He drove into a washout in the road, and the horse became frightened and ran away. The vehicle was overturned and he had a leg painfully bruised.

TO BE LAID.

Ceremony of Laying Cornerstone of New Polish Church.

The cornerstone of the new Polish Catholic church, at Twenty-fourth avenue west and Fifth street, to be known at St. Peter and St. Paul's church, will be laid Sunday afternoon with a large parade and elaborate ceremonies. The church will be a handsome building of red sandstone, and the parish will be quite an important one, including about 150 families. The building will be 48 feet by 100 feet.

All the Catholic societies of the city will take part in the parade and exercises, the parade forming at the cathedral Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The first division of the parade, which will form on Fourth street, on the east side of Second avenue east, will include the trustees of the new church, the Ancient Order of Hibernians of the cathedral parish, the St. Jan Baptiste C. O. F., and the A. O. H. and C. O. F. of St. James' church.

The second division will form on the upper side of Fourth street, facing Second avenue, and it will include the following: West Superior band, Polish societies of West Superior, St. Anthony's society of St. Anthony's church, Duluth A. O. H. of St. Clement's church, and the Italian societies.

The entire third division will form on the lower side of Fourth street, facing Second avenue west, and fill consist of the Third Regiment band, all the Polish societies of the city and carriages, with Bishop McGolrick and the clergy.

The parade will march down Second avenue to Superior street, west on Superior street to Twenty-first avenue west, up to Third street, out to Twenty-fourth avenue, and then up to the new church, where the cornerstone services will be held.

Bishop McGolrick will perform the ceremony of laying the cornerstone.

LOOKS FINE.

Grain In North Dakota Is In Excellent Condition.

William J. McCabe, of the board of trade firm of McCabe Bros., has just returned from a tour of the Red River valley, and he reports that wheat conditions there have never looked better.

"I included most of the valley in my trip," said Mr. McCabe today, "and I think I saw all of the territory where there was any possibility of damage from too much rain. My judgment is that the damage from rains will amount to about 1 per cent of the crop, but that will be more than offset by the benefits to crops on upper lands, where the rains have run off without damage, but have helped the crops so that the yields will be extraordinary.

"I saw a good many fields and portions of fields where, under good conditions from now on the yield will be forty bushels to the acre. I was repeatedly shown grain that had straw enough to provide 40 to 50 bushels, but, of course, that would require ideal conditions. But the entire outlook is excellent and I have never seen it better.

"Flax is not looking as well as it ought to be, but a fair yield will make the output greater than ever before owing to the large acreage that has been sown."

DIRECTOR MERRIAM HERE.

Inspecting His Interests at West Superior.

Ex-Governor William R. Merriam, of St. Paul, director general of the census, is in the city on private business. He arrived in Duluth last evening and spent the evening at the Kitchi Gammi club. Today he is inspecting the plants of the Superior Water, Light and Power company at Superior, in which he has a large interest. Mr. and Mrs. Merriam and family left Washington some time ago for their summer home at Forest Lake, near St. Paul, and they will remain away from the nation's capital during the heated term. For some years Mr. Merriam has had property interests at the head of the lakes, but this is his first visit to the city in a long time.

PECULIAR STORM.

Cyclonic Conditions Prevailed Early This Morning.

The storm at Duluth this morning was violent while it lasted. If the city was in the cyclone belt the clouds overhanging the city would have created much alarm. Rain commenced falling in sheets about 7 o'clock and the wind blew forty-two miles an hour. The local weather bureau office records show that half an inch of water fell in just half an hour. At 1 o'clock this morning the temperature was 80½—remarkably high for that hour in this climate. Showers and thunderstorms are predicted for tonight.

In portions of Duluth the wind exhibited all the features of a cyclone. Trees in one location were blown in one direction and a short distance away other trees would be bent exactly opposite. If the overhanging cloud, which was of a funnel shape, had been much nearer the earth, it is probable that Duluth would have experienced a cyclone—something not known in its history. No damage is reported around the city as a result of the wind and rain.

Shannon-Black.

David G. Black and Justine Shannon, of Duluth, were married last evening in Minneapolis at the residence of Rev. Father Cleary. They will return to Duluth to make their home at 324 West Third street after spending a week at Minnetonka.

May Come to Duluth.

The following dispatch was sent out from St. Paul last night: "It is reported that J. S. Mattson, general superintendent of the Bessemer & Lake Erie, will become assistant to the presidents of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern and Duluth & Iron Range, with headquarters at Duluth, on July 1. The office is a new one, created for him, and it is understood he will practically become an advising operating expert."

President House of the Duluth & Iron Range railroad is out of the city, and no one else here can throw any light on the authenticity of the information conveyed in the item. It is known, however, that Mr. Mattson has severed his connection there, but for what purpose is unknown here.

Doak-Black Wedding.

Isaac Black, of Duluth, and Jane Chase Doak, of Merriam Park, were married last night at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Doak, at Merriam Park. The wedding was a quiet home ceremony, only a few intimate friends and relatives being present. John Graham, of Duluth, was best man, and Agnes Doak, the bride's sister, was bridesmaid. Mr. Black is a son of Chief Engineer Black of the fire department.

BEAUTY IS MARRED

W. E. Lewis Wants Damages Because Mustache Was Dyed.

Claims That Barber Did It Without His Knowledge.

Thus Was Given a Strange and Unnatural Appearance.

Because a barber in the barber shop of Harry Brown dyed W. E. Lewis' mustache and eyebrows while he was not looking, and without his knowledge, Lewis will sue the proprietor of the shop and the barber who did the fiendish deed, which greatly injured the appearance of the plaintiff, for the sum of $250. This peculiar case is to come up in police court Saturday or Monday, although the papers have not yet been filed.

Mr. Lewis, through his attorney, William J. Barnes, says that on or about June 2, he went into the barber shop of Professor H. Brown to get a shave and a shampoo, and that after the barber had finished shaving and shampooing him, he went ahead and, without his permission or knowledge, dyed his mustache and eyebrows a deep dark black, while the plaintiff thought he was getting his mustache and eyebrows combed and curled. Mr. Lewis further states that as he carries around a light complexion with him, he has had his personal beauty seriously disfigured and has been made an object of ridicule by his friends, that he has been given a strange and unnatural appearance, and that he has been compelled to have his mustache shaved off, thus depriving him of one of the beauties of his full blown manhood.

At the barber shop it was learned that Mr. Brown was out of town at present, but one of his assistants told a Herald reporter that they were going to enter a general denial of everything. He said that Mr. Lewis came into the shop and ordered a shave and shampoo. His mustache looked as if it had been dyed at some remote time, and as the ends had faded out to some extent, Joseph Davey ,the barber, asked him if he did not want his mustache dyed again. He replied in the affirmative, and as that was what they were there for, they went ahead and dyed it. They say that he did not have his light complexion on when he came into the shop, and this may probably resolve the case into one of identity. D. M. DeVore is the attorney for the defendants.

EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGED.

Panton & White Cause Arrest of an Employe.

George E. Lissner, who has charge of the wall paper department at the Glass Block store, was arrested this morning at the instance of John Panton, of the firm of Panton & White, who charges him with embezzlement in the sum of $31.38. Lissner came to Duluth from Chicago about two months ago. The charge against Lissner is that he made a sale of goods to Two Harbors people, amounting to $31.38, was given two $20 gold pieces, that he turned in no sale slip to the office and no money was received there. Lissner claims that he did turn it in and gave the people back their change. Mr. Panton went to County Attorney McClintock this afternoon to swear out a complaint. Lissner was still held at the police headquarters this afternoon awaiting the action of the county attorney.

For Another Reason.

C. W. Wilson, of the board of public works, who was quoted yesterday as giving testimony in the Lerch case to the effect that the board refused to grant the contractor a further extension of time in moving the barn because of the newspaper agitation of the matter, says that he was misquoted, that the board refused permission on the ground that the proper effort was not being made to move the barn in the prescribed time.

THE RAILROADS.

Talk of a New St. Louis Line.

Marshalltown, Iowa, June 27.—T. N. Tittemore, general traffic manager of the Iowa Central railroad, met traffic ojcials of the Minneapolis & St. Louis and Wabash today in reference to the formation of a St. Louis line by the M. & St. L., Iowa Central and Wabash, via Albert Lea and Albia. The opening of an Iowa Central line, via Albert Lea, will make an important change in the Chicago-St. Paul rate, and it is believed will result in a reduction of first-class freight of 3 cents per 100 from Chicago to all points on the Iowa Central, west of the Mississippi river.

BUFFALO CASUALTIES.

Several Men Killed at the Exposition City.

Buffalo, June 27.—Fire broke out this afternoon at the Lehigh Valley freight house on Buffalo creek and the building was soon destroyed. It is reported that several men were forced into the creek by the flames and drowned. At 3:30 the only person known to be injured is Lewis Gassin.

A scaffold at the eastern elevator on which a number of men were working, fell this afternoon. Two men were killed and four or five seriously hurt.

AMERICANS WIN.

London, June 27.—D. Davis and H. Ward, Americans, beat Hawes and Young by three sets to none today in the third round of the all comers doubles, in the all England lawn tennis championships at Wimbledon. In the fourth round of the singles A. W. Gore beat G. W. Hilyard.

PHILLIES WON.

Philadelphia, June 27.—In the first game, National league, Philadelphia defeated Chicago, 16 to 7.

CROKER'S HORSE WINS.

London, June 27.—Little Twin, filly (J. Reiff) won the Ditchling plate at the Brighton June meeting today. The Little Twin filly is owned by Richard Croker.

IS IT AN EPIDEMIC?

Vital Statistics Show an Alarming Increase in an Already Prevailing Disease—Are Any Exempt?

At no time in the history of disease has there been such an alarming increase in the number of cases of any particular malady as in that of kidney and bladder troubles now preying upon the people of this country.

Today we see a relative, a friend or an acquaintance apparently well, and in a few days we may be grieved to learn of their serious illness or sudden death, caused by that fatal type of kidney trouble—Bright's disease.

Kidney trouble often becomes advanced into acute stages before the afflicted is aware of its presence; that is why we read of so many sudden deaths of prominent business and professional men, physicians and others. They have neglected to stop the leak in time.

While scientists are puzzling their brains to find out the cause, each individual can, by a little preparation, avoid the chances of contracting dreaded and dangerous kidney trouble, or eradicate it completely from their system if already afflicted. Many precious lives might have been, and many more can yet be saved, by paying attention to the kidneys.

It is the mission of The Herald to benefit its readers at every opportunity, and therefore we advise all who have any symptoms of kidney or bladder trouble to write today to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a free sample bottle of Swamp-Root, the celebrated specific which is having such a great demand and remarkable success in the cure of the most distressing kidney and bladder troubles. With the same bottle of Swamp-Root will also be sent free a pamphlet and treatise of valuable information.

Another Is Fined.

Another of the Chisholm blind-pig cases that County Attorney McClintock has been prosecuting was disposed of in municipal court this afternoon, John Verni, against whom the charge was pending, appearing through his attorney, P. C. Smith, and entering a plea of guilty. Verni's penalty was fixed at $25 and costs, amounting in total to $37.50, which his attorney paid. Two other men were fined under the same circumstances several days ago, and County Attorney McClintock says that there are still two more that will have to answer to the charge.

Saloon Broken Into.

The Peerless saloon, at 103 West Superior street, Probeck & McLennan proprietors, was broken into some time last night and the till touched for $15 in change. The thieves entered by breaking out a window in the rear of the building. They also took a bottle of brandy. John McLennan, one of the proprietors, says that the usual custom of the firm is to conceal the change when closing up for the night, in a cigar box, and the robbery was evidently committed by somebody familiar with their custom. The perpetrators of the deed have not yet been apprehended.

PENCE DROPPED DEAD.

Marshalltown, Iowa, June 27.—Jacob B. Pence, ex-deputy internal revenue collector for the Northern Iowa district and former sheriff of Marshall county, dropped dead here today from heart disease.

ALL DREW HEAVILY

Large Drafts From Outside Banks Too Much For Seventh.

Not Believed That Any Other Failures Will Result.

Reported That the Depositors Will Not Lose Anything.

New York, June 27.—The announcement of the suspension of the Seventh National bank caused only a ripple in the stock market. The first selling of stocks which followed the announcement of the suspension interrupted a recovery in prices and caused a reaction of 1 to 2½ points in some of the principal stocks. The offering of large sums of money on the exchange at 6 per cent and large buying orders placed in the market rallied prices and left the stock market dull but somewhat feverish until noon. In banking circles it was said that the Seventh National heavy debit balance today was the result of the news of the bank's embarrassment on Tuesday, being telegraphed throughout the country. Interior institutions having moneys deposited with the Seventh drew on the bank and these drafts all coming in at the same time, were too much for the institution.

The suspended institution is now in the hands of the comptroller of the currency, who has appointed Forest Raynor, as temporary receiver.

Mr. Raynor's examination of the loans of the bank are known to have proved that the collateral of them was weak in some instances. The objections of the bank examiner to these collateral securities, is said to have decided Mr. Cromwell to advise the suspension.

President Oakley Thorn of the American Trust company which had some business relations with the Seventh National, said his corporation was not in any way affected by the suspension of the Seventh National. When asked as to the effect of the failure he said:

"I don't know anything about any concern except our own, and that, I can assure you, is all right. If anyone asks to see the books on the subject, I can refer him to the state bank examiner. His statement will, I am sure, be taken. I know there are rumors connecting us with the trouble of the Seventh National, but they are merely rumors, I am happy to say we are all right."

At noon President Tappen, of the Gallatin National bank and chairman of the clearing house committee, said he did not think that any firms or banks, even small ones, will fail as a result of the Seventh National's suspension.

President Alvah Trowbridge, of the Ninth National bank reiterated his denial of connection with any of the financial transactions which impaired the Seventh National. "I regret the closing of the Seventh National," he said. "I don't believe any other bank will be affected. In fact I am assured by the clearing house that none will be. The Ninth National is in excellent condition and there was absolutely no warrant for the use of his name in the discussion of the situation on Tuesday."

It was said this afternoon that the Seventh National bank had quick assets of about $1,500,000. It was further reported that the depositors would not lose anything. Mr. Cromwell said that the bank could have paid its debt balance in the clearing house today, but that on his advice the doors were closed, as it would not have been right to receive the money of depositors during the present unsettled condition of affairs.

Guy Major, formerly president of the American Linseed company, is one of the directors of the Seventh National bank. He said it would be a couple of days before it would be known whether the bank could ever resume business.

"Not a depositor will lose a dollar," said he. "Whatever the stockholders lost they are able to lose and will accept their losses with smiles. There was only one account that gave us any difficulty and that was Marquand & company. Aside from this the bank had not over $10,000 worth of questionable loans. The future of the bank depends largely upon the Marquand & company account being made good."

Advertisements were printed in the afternoon papers offering to buy Seventh National bank stock. The offer was made by a broker who said he was acting for Gen. Thomas.

State Superintendent of Banks Kilburn this afternoon held a consultation with Bank Examiner Raynor over the Seventh National. He said he had consulted with Mr. Raynor for the purpose of ascertaining whether any other bank was involved and also that he was satisfied this was not the case.

TEST CASE.

Live Stock Association to Test Legality of Colorado Law.

Denver, June 27.—Judge Hallett of the United States district court today granted a writ of habeas corpus in the case of Edward H. Reid, an Omaha cattle shipper, who was convicted in the district court of Arapahoe county yesterday of having violated the Colorado statutes by shipping cattle into this state from Texas without a signed bill of health from a state inspector, and was sentenced to six months' imprisonment in the county jail.

Reid refused to pay a state inspection fee after having received a clean bill of health from the federal inspector. This was done to enable the National Live Stock association to test the validity of the Colorado law regarding the inspection of cattle shipped through the state. The writ was made returnable on Saturday next. If the United States district court shall sustain the state court, the National Live Stock association will, according to President Springer, appeal the case to the United States supreme court.

STRETCHING SAILS.

Shamrock II Takes a Successful Spin.

Glasgow, June 27.—The cup challenger took a sail stretching spin today, while the former challenger, Shamrock I, and Kariad were sailing a match race of forty-three miles. It was an ideal day for the purpose. The sun was shining and a light wind was blowing. The challenger carried only her lower canvas and towed a small boat and seemed to avoid anything in the nature of a trial of speed, but during a couple of tacks the challenger found herself going in the same direction as Kariad and overhauled the latter in a remarkable manner. The new mainsail of Shamrock II set to perfection. Her immense pole mast, when clothed, has a most imposing appearance. Shamrock I beat Kariad by four minutes in the first round, fourteen and one-half miles. Shamrock I won by thirty minutes and eighteen seconds.

Mr. Herreshoff, Jr's., Nevada beat her rival, Tutty, by thirteen minutes and forty seconds.

KEPT WORD.

Blackmailers, Failing to Get Money, Burn Farmer's House.

Topeka, June 27.—Blackmailers who demanded $5000 from W. C. Carson, a wealthy Cowley county farmer, and were ignored, fired the Carson homestead while Carson was en route to Oxford for his mail. The house was destroyed and Mrs. Carson was fatally burned.

Carson received an anonymous letter several weeks ago, demanding that he deposit $5000 at a certain point. He ignored the missive. Later another letter was received stating that should he not comply with the demand, his house would be burned and his life taken. This also was ignored.

While he was absent Saturday evening flames suddenly broke out in the house. Mrs. Carson escaped, but returned to the house for a highly prized violin. While Mrs. Carson searched for the instrument the flames spread rapidly, and when she again reached the open air she was enveloped in flames. Neighbors rushed to her assistance, but she died after several hours' suffering.

No clew has been obtained to the incendiaries.

ITS GRAVES.

Some of the Inscriptions at Old St. James.

The oldest Catholic church building in this state stands in this city, but it is on the other side of the East river and in the borough of Brooklyn, says the New York Sun. St. Peter's, in Barclay street, was the first congregation organized in New York city, 1786, but the present church is a comparatively modern structure. It is the second building on the site, and was put up in 1836. St. Patrick's, in Mott street, built in 1810, was nearly all destroyed by fire on Oct. 6, 1866, and had to be rebuilt. St. John's in Utica, St. Mary's in Albany, and the Church at Carthage have all disappeared. St. James' church in Jay street, Brooklyn, built in 1823, is, therefore, the oldest original Catholic church structure in the whole state. It is used now as a pro-cathedral, and stands surrounded by a graveyard within whose narrow confines, eight city lots, it is said no less than 6000 persons are buried.

In the old times every church had a place of burial attached to it. There were a number of Protestant churches near St. James, but all these contemporaneous fanes, with their graveyards, have been sold for commercial uses. St. James' steeple alone stands guard over the last resting place of the pioneers of Catholicity in Brooklyn. A ramble among the tombstones gives many interesting mementos of old Brooklyn families, and of the poetic style of elegiac tribute in vogue in the early years of the last century.

In the corner of Jay and Chapel streets stands the bronze memorial buet to Peter Turner, the layman who organized the congregation that built the church in 1822. It was erected there on Oct. 22, 1895, by the Brooklyn Catholic Historical society. Mr. Turner, who died in 1862, is buried in Flatbush cemetery, but one of his children was buried in a grave in St. James' yard on July 6, 1825. His surviving son, William, a man 85 years of age, died on May 30, 1901. Near the Turner memorial is the grave of one of the first priests of the church, over which is a horizontal slab in a fair state of preservation. The inscription on it reads:

"Beneath this tomb, erected to his memory, lie interred the remains of the Rev. James McKenna, a native of the parish of Rathdowney, Queen's county, Ireland, who was called by Him that giveth to receive the reward of his labors as a minister of Christ, on the 3d of October, 1824, in the 60th year of his age. Also Michael McKenna, brother of the above named. This stone was placed by the widow of the latter.

Mind the memory of men that are sleeping;
Asleep, but in death, never earth to value more;
Removed by their God from a world of weeping,
Great joys to receive for the just there in store.

Another priest, the Rev. James Doherty, a native of the parish of Desernety, county Donegal, Ireland, who died on March 10, 1841, is buried in the grave adjoining. A short distance back from this, on the Chapel street side and about the middle of the church, is the oldest known Catholic grave in Brooklyn. It is that of John O'Connor, once a grocer in Cherry street, near James' slip, Manhattan. His epitaph says:

"Sacred to the memory of John O'Connor, a native of the parish of Kilding, county of Limeric, Ireland; died Aug. 19, 1822, age 36 years. Erected by his affectionate brother. May his soul rest in peace."

On the south side of the church the Jay street front of the yard, in a well-kept, circular plot, are the graves of the relatives of the well-known Brooklyn politician, Hugh McLaughlin. They are marked by four high marble slabs. Nearby is the resting place of the ancestors of the late Judge Alexander McCue, of the Lonstaffs, Colgans, Bennets, Murrays and other well-known Brooklyn families of today.

In the old parish records is to be found this entry: "Sept. 12, 1823, J. Mehaney was appointed schoolmaster and sexton, and to take care of the burial ground." The salary was $60 a year. He was the first Catholic schoolmaster in Brooklyn. His grave is to be found under the eaves of the vestry in the rear, on the south side of the church. The stone over it is in a good state of preservation, and has inscribed on it the following:

"I. H. S.

"Sacred to the memory of Jeremiah Mehaney, a native of Ireland, county of Cork, who departed this life, April 19, 1827, aged 36 years. Requiescant in Pace.

"In this dark tomb remains my partner dear,
So much esteemed and loved by me whilst here.
I hope and trust to see thee as thou art,
In heavenly glory never more to part,
Mourn not for me, my wife most dear,
I am not dead, but sleeping here.
My debt is paid, the grave you see;
Prepare yourself to follow me."

There is no indicaton that the bereaved widow heeded these admonitions, or that she had herself deposited beside the schoolmaster, though the plural form of the Latin prayer shows that she anticipated such an ending. Other quaint poetic efforts are scattered about. For instance, over the remains of Bridget Cunningham, who died Nov. 23, 1848, her husband had cut:

"A virtuous wife in prime of life,
By death was snatched away;
Her soul is blest and gone to rest,
Though her flesh is gone to clay.
She left behind, in a husband's care,
A beloved daughter and son;
May they prepare to meet her where
True love will ne'er be done."

Another tribute to conjugal devotion used to stand not far from this, but it is preserved now only by tradition. Before it was obliterated by the elements it said of the wife of Daniel McCarty, who kept a hotel at Tillary and Canton streets:

"Anne, wife of Daniel McCarty, a native of Killarney, Ireland. Killed—
"Twenty years I was a maiden,
Nine months I was a wife;
And then I was a mother,
And then I lost my life."

A curious feature to be noted in the inscriptions on the tombstones is the early age at which so many of those buried died.

WHISKY BY THE POUND.

In China liquids are sold by weight and grain measure. John buys soup by the pound and cloth by the foot. A Chinaman never puts his name outside his shop, but paints instead a motto, or a list of his goods, on his vertical signboard.

Some reassuring remark is frequently added, such as "One word hall;" "A child two feet high would not be cheated." Every single article has to be bargained for, and it is usual for a customer to take his own measure and scales with him.

A strong man has difficulty in carrying on his back two pounds' worth of the copper cash which is the common currency, so it is necessary to take a servant to carry one's purse. The sycee of silver is the only other form of money besides the copper tael. As it weighs about sixty-seven ounces, a hammer and cold chisel are indispensable for making change.

When you engage a servant or make a bargain, it is not considered binding until "the fastening penny" has been paid. Although his bad faith is notorious in some matters, yet, to do him justice, when once this coin has been paid by you, the Chinaman, coolie or shopman will generally stick to his bargain, even if the result to him be loss.

SEE "SAPHO."

Chief Crandall Decides It Good Enough For Duluth.

For the past two or three days there has been an air of expectation, combined with much seriousness and some uncertainty at police headquarters. Chief Crandall has worn a thoughtful and much preoccupied air and it was apparent to all that came in contact with him that a matter of much concern brooded upon his mind. Some thought that it might be the presence of fire bugs in the city that agitated the chief or that some criminal from abroad was known to be lodging here. It now developes, however, that it was a graver matter than either of those. It was a question affecting the moral welfare of the people of Duluth; not a mere matter of monetary or property loss or danger, but a matter of morals.

Was "Sapho" a proper play to be seen by Duluth people? That is the question which was weighing upon the mind of the chief.

He pondered it long and deeply. A course of action then suggested itself. "I will send for the manuscript of the play." Accordingly the management of the company was waited upon and asked for a copy of the lines. It was carried to the chief, and after barring the door he read the story. Occasional glances at the thermometer did not indicate the presence of anything unusually hot. The chief read it to the last page and thought it was pretty good stuff, but was not satisfied yet.

"The play's the thing; the play's the thing," he muttered. "I will see the play."

Last evening "Sapho" was put on at the Sixth Avenue theater and in the audience was the chief with a body guard of city officials to sustain him. Gravely they watched the play. There was a visible commotion among them when it reached the point where the stairway scene comes in and a sigh of relief when the Nethersole feature was omitted.

They sat it out and as they left one of the party remarked: "Oh, rats, that is tame enough for any prayer meeting."

"Even so," responded the chief sleepily. And "Sapho" will continue to be produced as long as the company chooses to give it.

Owners of Stocks and Bonds Questioned as to Holdings.

Proves to Be a New Thing to Many of Them.

Assessment of Grain Firms Is Proving a Puzzler.

The board of review had to resort to a sort of sweating process today and there were a number of the citizens who are reputed well off in this world's goods in the way of money in banks, stocks and bonds that had to sit before the board and, much against their will, give information as to the number of shares of United States Steel stock and other stocks held by them, also the market value of the same. It was a pretty stiff dose for some of the Duluth investors and one that they have not been accustomed to before, but most of them took it with good grace. In previous years investors have never been called upon to pay a tax on their collaterals in the shape of stocks and bonds, but the past six months has witnessed an exceptional activity in the stock markets and the state department has urged the necessity of the enforcement of the tax on collaterals.

The grain commission men are still appearing in answer to calls and explaining to the board of review why, in their judgment, they should not be compelled to pay a tax on the business that they are transacting through this city. The matter of arriving at a satisfactory understanding with the grain men is one that is a puzzler to the board. In previous years it has been the custom to put a personal property tax on the office fixtures of the companies oding business here, but the state auditor holds that corporations doing business in the state should be taxed even though their property may be outside of the state. This can be readily understood affects many of the grain commission companies, who state before the board of review that they have absolutely nothing in this city but an office, while they may be doing thousands of dollars' worth of business through here every year. Their capital may be in property in the Dakotas or Wisconsin. They may be doing business on borrowed money and at no time have a bank account. Some of the garin men claim that under these circumstances they may be paying a tax on their property in other states and should not be compelled to pay a double tax. One grain man asked this morning if it were possible to tax the credit of a company, explaining that the commission company may be able to borrow an amount at the bank for which they put up no collateral and the money thus obtained might be put in the business in some other state.

A large amount of wheat comes into this city, but it is practically impossible for the assessors to determine the ownership, for the grain may be owned by a farmer or farmers way out in the Dakotas. The warehouse certificate indicates nothing definite for that may be held by one person one day and another the next.

Some of the grain companies purporting to be doing business on a large scale claim that they have not a dollar in this city outside of the office. The office may be the headquarters of the company or it may be a branch of the main office at the Twin Cities. These same companies have a high rating, one running well up toward the hundred thousands of dollars.

The grain men have in the past been assessed at various sums above $2500, the effort apparently being to assess them in proportion to the comparative amount of business done by each, though this must necessarily be largely guess work. Certain it is that the amount of the assessed valuation has not been placed at a higher figure than that repreeesting the amount of business transacted by each. Some of the grain men accept the situation without a murmur, while others declare that if the assessment stands they will take it up with the county board.

OSTERGREN-GARDNER.

Two Young People Joined In Marriage.

A very pretty house-wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. K. A. Ostergren of 415 Fifteenth avenue east, last evening, their daughter Ida Henrietta Ostergren being joined in marriage to Harvey Roberts Gardner of St. Paul. The parlors were tastefully decorated with palms, ferns and daisies and the bridal party stood in the bay window under a canopy of smilax.

Precisely at 8 o'clock Flaaten's orchestra struck up with the "Lohengrin" bridal march and, preceded by her sister, Miss Agnes Ostergren, as maid of honor, the bride entered on her father's arm and was met by the groom, attended by his best man, K. A. Ostergren, Jr., brother of the bride. The bride was simply attired in white mouseline de soie over white taffeta and wore a veil and carried a shower boquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The maid carried yellow roses. The Rev. B. R. Patrick officiated and during the impressive ceremony the orchestra played Schubert's "Serenade" with united strings, and at the close burst out with the Mendelssohn wedding march. A number of relatives and friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner left on the night train for St. Paul, where they will be at home at 980 Duchess street, after August 1. Out of town guests who attended the wedding were: Mrs. H. R. Gardner of St. Paul, mother of the groom; Mrs. Earnest Hall, of Bald Eagle, Minn., sister of the groom; and Miss Mabel Ostergren, of St. Paul, cousin of the bride; Miss Bessie Tubbs and Miss Eva Paddock, of South Superior; Miss Ollie Yates and Miss Laura Yates, and John McKanna, of West Superior.

A WITCH BELIEVER

Young Farmer Wanted the Law on an Old Woman.

Positively Declared That She Had Bewitched His Cows.

Killed Her Sow and Hen and Then Was Arrested.

Auburn, Me., June 27.—A hard working and active young farmer, who lives a few miles out of the village of Limestone, in Aroostook county, is a firm believer in witches.

Ashort time ago the man came into the village of Fort Fairfield and consulted a lawyer in regard to a certain old woman in Limestone. The farmer declared that she had bewitched his cows. He said that the old woman was also doing other things to bother him. He told how a few days before he was driving a yoke of oxen, which drew a two-wheeled cart. He said that when they were passing along a piece of road that skirted a lake, the witch, making herself invisible, pulled the linchpin out of one of the axles, and away went the wheel. It rolled down through a pasture, so the farmer declared, the witch steering it and keeping it upright, until splash! into the lake it went.

He was greatly offended when the attorney informed him that witchcraft wasn't recognized in law in these days. The farmer went home declaring that he would take the law in his own hands. Out of his determination has come a rather singular case in court. It seems that this "Aunt" Collins, whom the farmer accused of witchcraft, owns some troublesome live stock. The farmer believes that each animal that the good wife owns is inspired by the devil.

One day "Goody" Collins' old sow and her family of little rooters slid under the division fence and began snouting in a potato field owned by the young farmer. The old porker had been there several times before, and this time the farmer was ready for her. He had moulded some bullets, into the center of which he had put a little square of sumach wood. For years this wood has been known as "witch wood," and it is said by those who believe in such things that it is a sure charm to overcome "black art." When the neighbor spied the mother pig and her family feasting on his potato seed he took down his gun, put in one of the sumach bullets and drew a bead on the sow. He dropped her at the first shot, and the motherless litter fled home squealing. "Aunt" Collins collected them and brought them up on warm milk as best she could.

A few days after the tragedy of the potato field another of "Goody" Collins' barnyard families, a bustling, clucking hen, with a brood of fluffy chicks, made her way through a hole in the old fence and got into a newly sown wheat field. When the young farmer spied her she was shuffling out a regular sand jig and the dirt and seeds were flying above her head. Behind her were the chicks, busily gobbling every grain that showed itself. Once more the farmer loaded his gun and he stalked the old hen, who was absorbed in her hustle for her family. Bang! and the hen was a draggled bunch of feathers and the brood was motherless.

When "Goody" Collins heard the sound of the gun she guessed what was going on and, despite her 80 years, she rushed out of her little house and climbed the fence, carrying a broom. The farmer saw her coming and fled incontinently. He had no mind to face that octogenarian wrath, and, moreover, he had heard of "witch bridles" and "witch brooms." He believed that if one of these bridles were once thrown over a man's head he would ever afterward belong to the witch that captured him.

"Aunt" Collins, however, did not pursue him. She collected in her calico apron the chickens that were scuttling about in the grass. She decided that the old hen was too badly shattered even for a fricassee, and so she left her on the field.

Now this was too much for the old woman to bear, and she brought suit against the farmer. The case came before a local justice at Fort Fairfield. It attracted much attention, for the farmer asserted that he would be perfectly justified in shooting even "Goody" Collins herself. He lay at her door all his long list of mishaps, petty and large.

Mrs. Collins went on the stand and explained that she was merely a poor old widow, with a little plot of ground and a few live creatures. She declared with much indignation that she knew no more about witchcraft than she did about astronomy. She said that any man who made such talk about her ought to be sent to a lunatic asylum. She asked that this man who had persecuted her be made to pay for the animals he had killed.

The farmer told his story, but the judge informed him that he must prove that Mrs. Collins had some direct connection with the alleged happenings. In conclusion, the court said that although it was evident the pigs and hens of "Aunt" Collins were committing trespass, yet he should hold that the farmer must pay damages because he shot before asking her to pen them up at home.

"I want to estimate the damage," said the judge. "Did any of these little pigs die?" he asked Mrs. Collins.

"No, sir," she replied.

"I'll tell you how it was, judge," broke in the farmer. "She jest burned medicine in th pen and said 'Wallybahoo' the right number of times, and everyone of them little pigs had teeth grow and went to eatin' corn right off."

A snicker of astonishment went around the court room. The judge checked the demonstration, rebuked the farmer, and asked:

"'Aunt' Collins, did any of the chickens die as a result of losing the old hen?"

"No, sir," said "Aunt" Collins.

"No wonder they didn't die," cried the irrepressible farmer. "Her old cat had a nest in the ash hole and a litter of young kittens. I tell you that old woman is a witch. She just dumped them chickens right in with the kittens, and she made a cluck and put it on the old cat, and them chickens never noticed the difference."

This original explanation provoked such a howl in the court room that the justice fined the farmer for contempt of court, and made him pay Mrs. Collins the value of the property he had killed. Now the farmer, more than ever, believes that the old woman is a witch. He even insists that she bewitched the judge.

THEY LIVED APART.

Occupied Separate Quarters For Twelve Years.

Columbus, Ohio, June 27.—Mrs. Antonia Jenkins Converse, daughter of the late Rear Admiral Jenkins, United States navy, was divorced from Capt. George L. Converse, United States army, by Judge Dewitt C. Badger, of the chancery court, Monday. The ground of the decree was made gross neglect of duty, but the court said that the real cause of the decree was incompatibility of temperament. Judge Badger said that the undisputed evidence showed that the parties were both good people, but that for twelve years there had been no communication, except occasionally, on any matters that concerned both of the parties. For twelve years the two had lived in separate parts of the house and seldom spoke, except when there were guests in the house. As soon as the guests were out of the house the husband and wife resumed their separate apartments and held no communication.

The marriage of the couple was romantic, and caused some comment at the time. The couple had met at the national capital during a visit of the West Point cadets. They fell in love and were engaged. Lieut. Converse was sent to the far West, and in an Indian fight was shot in the head. The ball lodged back of the right eye, and the lieutenant was near death's door. Mrs. Converse hastened to his side when he was brought to Columbus, and insisted on marrying him in order that she could nurse him back to health. The ceremony was performed, and the couple were supposed to be living happily until the stories of their estrangement began to leak out about five years ago.

Mrs. Converse will make her home in Washington in the future. Capt. Converse is the commandant at the Ohio state university, and will remain there until he is ordered to rejoin his regiment.

KILLED BY WOLVES.

Horrible Fate of Woodsman In Wisconsin.

Weyauwega, Wis., June 27.—John Hochstock, of Mellen, went hunting June 16 and failed to return. Parties were organized, and after a prolonged search one of them came upon the scene of a terrible struggle. Scattered around a large open space in the woods they found the carcass of seven wolves. The only trace found of Hochstock was a few bones, torn shreds of clothing, which were identified as his, a watch which belonged to him and $65 in a pocket of his trousers.

The sod was torn up and deep footprints of the man's boots were all about, showing that he had met the onslaught of the savage beasts with the phenomenal strength and fortitude of a man who sees death staring him in the face. Woodsmen are unable to account for the attack, as the wolves at this time of the year are generally not fierce.

FARMERS GET HELP

Harvesters Secured In Kansas By Force of Arms.

Desperate Farmers Hold Up a Train and Fight Fiercely.

Movement to Send New York Hobos to Kansas.

Burlingame, Kan., June 27.—Driven to desperation by sight of their rich fields being ruined for want of harvesters, a party of twenty Osage county farmers held up a west-bound Santa Fe train to obtain the help necessary for reaping their grain. No. 55 was pulling out of Peterson, a small town a few miles south of here, when four husky, heavily-armed farmers entered the engine cab and ordered the engineer to stop at a certain crossing a mile south of that place. At the same time others pointed revolvers at the conductor and brakeman, and when the train stopped compelled them to cut loose from the two emigrant cars containing harvest hands bound for the Western fields.

The engineer was compelled to move the fore part of the train on down the track, where it was held. Meantime there was a fierce conflict going on between the harvesters, who resented the vigorous measures taken by the would-be employers.

Clubs, ballast, shotguns and revolvers were brought into play, and for half an hour the battle raged fiercely. Finally, however, after several of each party had been severely injured, a compromise was effected by several persons not engaged in the conflict, and the 200 harvesters agreed to work in Osage county at $3.50 a day.

The two cars were soon emptied, the harvesters going across the prairie guided by the farmers. The train was recoupled and backed up to Burlingame.

New York, June 27.—Alderman Elias Goodman of the Thirty-first district spent most of Sunday reading the newspapers, all of which had something to say about the lack of farm hands in the great wheat-growing states of the West and the heroic methods to which the farmers are resorting to get help. Mr. Goodman got through with the papers in the late afternoon and went out for a walk. He met half a dozen strong, husky men, who told him that they wanted to work and could get nothing to do. All of them said that they needed money and all of them wanted to have the alderman give it to them. The alderman thought of the stories he had read of the Western farmers and decided that he ought to do something about the matter.

The result was that when the board board of aldermen met he introduced a resolution calling on the committee on charities to hold a public hearing and see if there was not some way in which the city could provide for the transportation of all of the hobos within its limits to the wheat fields and for their maintenance on the way. The alderman made a speech in which he said that he was thoroughly in earnest in his plan to rid the city of tramps and hobos and at the same time to provide workmen for the farmers in the West. The resolution was adopted. The committee will meet this week.

AWFUL STIR

Caused By Exposure of a Society Woman In Memphis.

Memphis, Tenn., June 27.—Because Mrs. Ira Cochran (nee Sullivan), a dashing and handsome complainant in a divorce suit at Waynesboro, Miss., insisted on the payment of alimony ordered by the chancery court, the tribunal has issued a decree setting aside any future payment of alimony, turning her children, whom she had in custody, over to the husband, all on account of infidelity of the fair complainant.

She is one of Mississippi's most beautiful women, and up to a year ago went in the best of society. She sued for divorce, alleging cruelty and nonsupport. Pending trial she was granted alimony. Her husband finally quit paying, and she went into court with a petition. He answered charging all kinds of bad things against his wife, claiming she was not a fit person to have care of the children.

The petition was followed with witnesses and facts and dates. Four or five men, married and single, were summoned. Now the community is in an uproar, and many women are after the scalp of the fair defendant. Mrs. Cochran, dressed in the height of fashion, sat and cried bitterly. Her lawyers retired, deliberated and were glad to compromise the case.

QUESTION OF MORALS.

A Tennessee Letter Carrier Is Under Fire.

Knoxville, Tenn., June 27.—John M. Miller, a United States mail carrier, is under charge of conduct detrimental to the postal service and bringing reproach upon the local postoffice. J. K. Rosson, a postoffice inspector, said:

"For some time it has been said that Miller's conduct, in that, it is said, he permitted a member or members of his family to conduct his home in a questionable manner, has been objectionable to Postmaster Trent, and objections and complaints came from other postoffice employes in this city. I find that Mr. Miller's wife conducts her home and a resort known as Garland Springs in a manner that is not for the good of the service for such to be carried out.

"She also has an uptown store, where cigars and millinery are sold—a happy combination—and the purpose of this place is questionable. Mr. Miller denies emphatically any knowledge of the conduct of these places, but that, of course, is a question in the case."

Miller is still at work, there being no dishonesty charged against him. It is only a question of morals.

SOUTH DAKOTA CROPS.

Condition Excellent According to Government Report.

The South Dakota crop report tells of excellent condition of all grains up to Monday last. The report is as follows:

The temperature during the week, although it was cool the early part, averaged above the normal, with warm days and nights the latter part, and there was nearly the normal amount of sunshine.

Abundant rains occurred over most of the state, mostly in night thunderstorms and there was some local hail in several counties, but no very material damage is reported. The soil is amply moist generally, and the rains have left some lowland fields in the southern counties too wet, endangering the crops thereon.

Wheat, oats, barley and spring and winter rye made very thrifty progress, and while there are still a number of fields weedy in northern counties, on the whole small grain crops are in excellent condition, and wheat, oats and barley are heading in most counties. Winter rye is filling well, much of it is the dough stage and a very satisfactory crop is anticipated.

Corn has improved, but it appears that many more fields than expected of that affected by the frost of June 7 and the ravages of cutworms are being devoted to late flax and millet, thus applying a much larger acreage to flax an dmillet than at the beginning of the season was intended. There is much weediness and cultivation, except on high lands, is slow and retarded by the wet condition of the soil. On the whole, the present prospect for corn is not very good.

The condition of grass is much improved, and the prospect for a good hay crop is, on the whole, very satisfactory. Pasturage is excellent, the grass on the ranges west of the Missouri river is in very satisfactory condition and live stock is thriving generally.

Flax and millet seeding on corn ground and "breaking" continues, and that sown after the beginning of the rains is germinating very satisfactorily. Early flax and millet have made good progress.

There were some very-high winds in connection with thunderstorms, but beyond slighly lodging some rank grain, and causing apples to drop, in some southeastern counties, there was no injury to crops.

The week closed with the prospect, on the whole, for a bountiful crop of wheat, oats, barley, rye and hay very flattering.

Turns Up Alive.

Last fall John Nelson of the Steel Plant, Superior, disappeared, and until yesterday no trace of him was discovered. Nelson left a wife and family. Early in the spring the body of a man found in Duluth was thought to be that of the missing Nelson. However, Mr. Nelson is not to be classed with those gone before, as he was seen on the streets of the Wisconsin city yesterday. Nelson, in conversation with a prominent citizen, said that he had been employed until a few days since in a lumber camp in a remote part of Minnesota. Although his family is in mourning, the man did not appear at his late home yesterday. It is thought that his mind is affected, as there is no other reason for his strange conduct.

Hard on Marine Men.

Capt. Foley thinks that the last few days have been the most trying for marine men in recent years. Capt. Foley left Duluth Monday in charge of the Bon Ami and arrived home with his steamer last night. He says that during the entire voyage to Port Arthur and return, they encountered rough weather and when the rain was not falling, a dense fog prevailed. In thirty years' service on Lake Superior, Capt. Foley has never experienced such heavy weather as on his last voyage.

For Twin City People.

The North-Western line has arranged for a series of rail and lake trips during July. Every Saturday afternoon of next month the privilege will be allowed of leaving the twin cities via the Twilight Limited and arriving at Duluth in the early evening. There the Argo will be in waiting, which will be taken next morning for Port Arthur, arriving there early Monday morning. Leaving there after a two hours' stay, the return trip will be by way of Isle Royal and other places of interest on the north shore of Lake Superior, arriving at Duluth again at 2 p. m. Tuesday, and the twin cities that night.

TO REMOVE SIGNS.

A Movement Some Would Like to See.

It has occurred to some of the residents on the leading residence streets of Duluth that it would not be a bad idea at all to adopt a scheme that some Minneapolis people are working successfully. The people on Park avenue, Minneapolis, the handsomest residence street of that city objected to the unornamental signs that occupied some of the vacant lots, advertising them for sale. So the Park Avenue Improvement league got together and appointed a committee to see the real estate agents about it, and the prospects are that the signs will go.

The board signs that are stuck up everywhere there is a vacant lot for sale are not pleasing to look upon by any means, and some of the people that live on the better residence streets here would like it very much if a similar movement went into effect here. The Minneapolis people will chose other methods of advertising the lots than this, and probably more effectual ones. The success of the experiment will probably induce Duluth people to follow its example.

PEFFER BOUND OVER.

Must Answer For Non-Support of Wife.

The examination of Charles Peffer, a butcher of Two Harbors, took place at municipal court yesterday afternoon the charge against him being desertion of his wife. Testimony was introduced by Mrs. Peffer, who resides on East Third street in this city, and several others, to show that she has been destitute and has been compelled to receive aid for herself and children from the county. Peffer put in no testimony yesterday, his interests being looked after by H. B. Fryberger. The defendant was held to the grand jury for trial and bail was furnished in the sum of $200. According to the testimony of the complaining witness, the troubles of the family started in 1892, when she left him, only to return for a period of three years, followed by a permanent separation. This is the first case to come up under the new law regarding wife desertion and a conviction means a penitentiary term.

TIME IS NECESSARY.

Red Tape Delaying Normal School Opening.

Some people have been disposed to criticise the board of water and light commissioners for the delay in getting the normal school water connections ready. Professor Phelps said that the school would be ready by the stipulated time, Sept. 1, were it not for need of water, which would delay the opening two months, and Manager Case says that the reason for the delay in getting the pumping station up in time in the first place is due to the fact that propositions made by the water and light board to the normal board were not accepted promptly, thus delaying the board in making his contracts. In the second place he is unable to put in the pumping station until condemnation proceedings have been completed against the property upon which the station is to be built. These proceedings were commenced several weeks ago, but over a month is yet needed to finish publishing notices of hearing and appraisal. There are several yards of red tape that must be wound up before they can begin building. These matters are being forced as rapidly as possible, but the school cannot be ready for occupancy before Nov. 1.

PAWNEE BILL'S WILD WEST

Big Show Coming Here Next Wednesday.

Next Wednesday Pawnee Bill's Wild West show will be seen in Duluth for the first time. A few days ago it showed at Eau Claire, Wis., and the Leader said of it:

"The big show, or the wild west in this case, is given in open air and is much on the same principle as the performance given by Buffalo Bill, although not as large. The show opens with an introduction of wonderful riders and important personages from all parts of the world. During the performance the audience is treated to scenes of the wild west such as the early delivery of mail before the advent of railroads, in which stages were used. The attacks upon the whites by the Indians and the fights in which some remain dead on the field was all illustrated in a realistic manner.

The Arabian acrobats gave an exhibition of strength, building pyramids after which tumbling closed their part of the show. Another feature of the show was the method of dealing out justice on the Western frontier and hanging a horse thief. A horse was stolen after which the thief was captured, dragged to the camp of the cowboys, where he was hanged, then shot. The scene ends with a funeral procession, the dead man being borne to his grave on the back of the horse that he stole.

Miss May Little, the champion lady horseback shot of the world, gave a splendid exhibition. During her entire performance of shooting glass balls, she did not miss a ball, but each shot fired was successful.

ADVANCE IN COAL

The Dealers All Expect It to Come on July 1.

Say There May Be Another Rise a Month Later.

The East Is Consuming Vast Amounts of Anthracite Coal.

The householder that is contemplating the purchase of his coal stock for the coming winter and is not yet ready to take care of it is feeling a little nervous these days over the rumor that this class of fuel is likely to advance 25 cents a ton by the first of July. Nothing definite as to the threatened rise in prices has been received by the local coal agents, but the feeling is pretty general about the coal offices that the additional 25 cents will be tacked on at the close of the current month. The coal dealers say that hard coal values have been advancing at a rate of about 10 cents per month at the Twin Cities for the last two or three months, and while they have been enabled to hold the price down to the opening figure this spring, it is not probable that the coal companies will much longer consent to preserve the inequality of prices, that a rise of 25 cents will nearly equalize prices here and in the Twin Cities.

Hard coal has been selling at the head of the lake ever since the opening of navigation this spring at $6.75, but after July 1 the consumer will probably be paying $7 a ton. That is not all, for there is a hint held out that another month may witness a still further raise of 25 cents.

Inquiry at the local coal offices shows that there is a smaller stock of hard coal at the local docks than ever before at the same period of the year. But this does not necessarily have special significance, from the fact that were the demand in the East to let up a little and the volume of business thrown to the head of the lakes, the coal-carrying boats would speedily stock the docks here to their full capacity. So far as the coal dealers are able to explain the prospective rise in prices, it is due to the heavy demand for the fuel east of Buffalo, which is said to be much heavier at this time of the season than it has been before in years, and not much anthracite coal is coming up the lake. Still the demand for hard coal at this point has been light thus far this season, and the coal men do not expect the market to be very active before another month or eight weeks. One dealer who is pretty well posted on the situation says that only about one-tenth of the coal production of the Eastern states comes to the Northwest, and from this statement can be deducted the enormous demand there must be in the East.

Pocahontas coal, a grade practically between the bituminous and anthracite qualities, which have been selling for $5.75 and which is often used as a substitute for anthracite coal, is said to stand in line for a slight advance in sympathy wh hthat of hard coal.

The price of soft coal has not varied since the opening of the season from $4.50 per ton, nor are there indications of a change. Receipts are fully up to the average for this time of the year and the usual demand prevails. Owing to the increased dock capacity brought about by the completion of the dock extensions and others nearly completed, the coal stocks at the close of the navigation season will be heavier than ever before known at the head of the lake.

A Model Village.

It is rumored that a $1,000,000 village will be founded in New York state, in connection with a large shoe factory. The prime movers being a couple of philanthropists who desire to make the lot of their employes happy. Anything that adds to happiness should be endorsed, and that is why Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which cures diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels, has received the hearty endorsement of the American people and has a record of fifty years of cures to its credit. Use the Bitters for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness and constipation. It never fails to effect a speedy and permanent cure. It is also an excellent tonic. If you feel worn and nervous, it is just what you need to build you up.

DENIES ANY MURDER.

Bay City Man Claims There Was None.

Officers are expected to arrive from Bay City, Mich., today to take charge of William Groultz alias William LaJoie, who is wanted in that city on the alleged charge of murder and who was arrested here yesterday afternoon by Detective Irvine. The police authorities received word several days ago that he was in this vicinity and Detective Irvine arrested him as he called for his mail at the postoffice. Nothing further is known of his alleged crime by the local authorities further than the information contained in the sheriff's telegram that he is wanted for alleged murder.

Groultz was inclined to talk quite freely about his troubles and his story is that sometime last fall he seized a boy by the name of DeLorme that was in a crowd of others, calling him names, and shook the lad for annoying him. He says that the boy afterward was taken sick and died, but that his death was not due to the shaking, but to pneumonia. Groultz says that the prosecution is being pushed by the boy's father with the hope of getting damages from the father of the defendant. Groultz is about 24 years of age. His father is a saloonkeeper in Bay City. He left Bay City shortly after the death of the boy and went to Rochester, Minn., afterward visiting Detroit and numerous cities, finally reaching Duluth.

Fined For Drunkenness.

Oscar Champaign, a driver for the Duluth Van company, who last Monday night took one of the company's rigs out of the barn without permission and let it stray off, was yesterday charged with drunkenness and given ten days at the county jail. The law is very strict regarding the taking of a rig hitched along the street, but there was no provision that would cover Champaign's case as he was in the employ of the company owning the rig and took the horses from the barn. He had two companions with him on his ride, all of whom were feeling pretty gay after a visit to the brewery and numerous saloons. His companions were arrested Tuesday, but afterward released as they proved they were simply guests of Champaign.

IS PERFECT.

Beautiful Model of Ship Made By Capt. Miller.

Capt. J. W. Miller, of the health office, has completed his masterpiece in the building of models of ships. He has just finished the models of a full-rigged sailing ship and a tug, and though Capt. Miller has been at this work during all his long life he never made a model so perfect as these.

The ship is built on the lines of a vessel 180 feet over all, and 36 feet beam, and every detail is in exact proportion. The model is 15 inches over all and has a beam of 3 inches, so the scale is one-twelfth of an inch to the foot. This makes the model one-hundred and forty-fourth of the size of the big ship. There are two boats on the forward house and two on the davits, and each of these boats is as perfect in its proportions and details as the big one. There are three masts, of course, or it would not be a ship, and every yard, every shroud and ratline is there in its proper place and with its proper tautness. The rake of the masts is perfect, and the intervals between them, a little more between the foremast and the mainmast than there is between the mainmast and the mizzermast, are correct to a hair. The nine inches between deck and truck are a maze of tangled threads to a landsman, but to the salt every detail is recognizable, and all that needs to be done is to increase the size of the vessel 144 times and she would be in perfect shape for a long sea voyage. The mainyard, which in the large vessel would be sixty feet long, is five inches long in the model. Her wheel is of silver, her deadeyes and chain-plates are of brass, her tops, caps and cross-trees are of ivory, her decks are of holly, and her monkey-rail of mahogany.

Absolutely nothing is lacking. The windlass, hatches, galley, fife rails, pumps, capstans, ring-bolts, poop-deck and fo'c'sle ladders, belaying pins in the rails, monkey-gaff, brace pennants on the lower yards, every bit of yard or rigging or deck furniture that one reads about in the sea novels, are there and in beautiful proportion.

A gilded spread eagle adorns her stem, and the figurehead is a mermaid, both carved out of wood by the shipwright. In short, it is a work of art, every detail of which was worked out by Capt. Miller with a few simple tools and with no diagram or model to work from except the thorough knowledge of a ship that his years on salt waters gave the captain.

The tug is also complete, even to the wheel in the wheelhouse, and both vessels are floating in a sea of glass.

To Work the Mine.

The old Montrose mine in Bayfield county is to be opened and explored by a company in which A. Ammerman and C. D. Richards, of this city, are the most interested people. Reuben Ferguson will have charge of the work, which will be commenced at once. The mine is one of the oldest in this part of the country and it is thought that it contains considerable copper.

GLUTTONY

Is more common than we may think, if we define gluttony as eating beyond the body's need of sustenance and beyond the stomach's capacity for digestion and assimilation of food. That is a fair definition, and it fastens the name glutton on many a person who would resent the term as an insult. The fact of this gluttony is marked by its consequences. The overloaded stomach becomes diseased. The popular term for the condition is "weak" stomach. The "weak" stomach fails in furnishing adequate nutrition for the body, and soon the "weakness" spreads from the stomach to other organs.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition. It enables the perfect assimilation of food, by which alone the health and strength of the body is maintained.

"Your medicine helped me so much that I cannot praise it too highly," writes Mrs. C. L. Brooks, of Poland, Androscoggin Co., Me. "The first dose I took helped me. I cannot forget how I felt when I took it; I was suffering everything with indigestion, and my stomach was so bloated that it seemed as though it must burst. My husband said he was going for the doctor, but I said if he would get me a bottle of the 'Golden Medical Discovery' I would try that. I had not taken it long when I felt relieved, and have not had a touch of indigestion or stomach trouble since. I had been sick for four years, and less than four bottles cured me. Some people that knew me before I began to take the 'Golden Medical Discovery' tell me that they never saw such a change in any one, and they also say they don't see how I can do such large washings as I do now, when I had not done a washing for so long."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets cure biliousness.

RUSHING THE WORK

Lerch Barn Will Be Off First Street Tonight.

New Man Shows How Easy the Job Was.

Present Speed Provokes Many Comments on Previous Delay.

Going—going—and by the time that this issue reaches its readers the Lerch barn will be GONE!

First street will resume its natural jog, and the barn will have passed into history so far as its obstruction of First street is concerned. Since Oswald Hacquoil has taken charge of the affair the good people of Duluth have been given a chance to see just what could be done when the mover really wanted to do it, and now the first section is up on the vacant lots at the corner of Fourth avenue west and First street, absolutely out of the way of traffic, and the second section will be there tonight.

As announced in The Herald last night, Hacquoil said that if the street railway company would get its wires down for him early this morning, he would have the obstruction across the tracks by 5:30. At 8 o'clock this morning the barn was not only across the tracks, but in front of Nichols & Thomas' livery stable, and its rate of speed then, compared to its former extraordinary non-rate, reminds one of a locomotive and a snail. The barn moved about as much during the twenty-four hours that Sawyer was reclining in the calaboose as it did during the two weeks that he was out and superintending it. Hacquoil, although not a house mover by trade, seems to be getting there pretty quickly, and has done everything he said he would.

This morning Sawyer was up at the barn and seemed to be rather numerous around the place, but he was not bossing the job—one could tell that by the way the barn moved.

The manner in which the barn has been moved in the past thirty-six hours has not tended to detract from any sympathy which there may have been for Messrs. Lerch and Sawyer. From the moment a man who meant business took hold of the job it went along quickly, showing what could be done with the expenditure of a little energy. Comments were frequently hard today to the effect that Sawyer and Lerch, too, got off pretty easily yesterday in court.

The next step that will be watched with interest will be the fight for the possession of the lot on East Second street, upon which Mr. Lerch claims a lease.

DOES NOT APPLY HERE.

Dog Tax Law Exempts This County.

The statement that the last legislature provided for a tax of $1 on all male dogs and $5 on all females was true, but it does not apply to this county. The act exempts all counties that have a population of more than 75,000. The law is a pretty good specimen of granger legislation in the opinion of many who have read it. The tax is made applicable to all pesons owning dogs and fines are provided for all who try to escape it. The collections from this source are to be placed in separate funds and are to be held for the reimbursement of all persons who may sustain damage through the killing of sheep by dogs. The law provides for the appraisal of the damage and the method by which the owner is to be remunerated. The maximum value of each sheep, etc., is also fixed in the law.

Ran Into the Dock.

While making a landing at Booth's dock yesterday morning, the Argo ran into the dock and tore a considerable potion of it out. It is the point at which the city ferry lands and it is now compelled to land at the dock nearer the canal, so that people on Lake avenue cannot see whether or not it is at the Duluth landing. The hole is being repaired.

Bargain Friday

We are closing our greatest June business—two more days only remain, and we are fully determined to do the maximum business Friday and Saturday. Each department is keyed to the highest pitch, and every offering is an extraordinary one. Tomorrow will be, by all odds, the most important Bargain Friday thus far this year.

The character and qualities of goods we sell are the very best—we do not pick out cheap, shoddy merchandise and advertise it at a fictitious value. Our methods are radically different from the ordinary store in this respect. We never misrepresent, but always have the goods (and plenty of them) to back up every announcement.

The goods offered for tomorrow are seasonable. You will need them through the heated term. A few of the specials are as follows:

REACH ST. JOHNS.

Passengers and Crew of the Wrecked Lusitania.

St. John's, N. F., June 27.—The steamer Glencoe arrived here last night bringing six first, fifteen second and 436 steerage passengers and ninety-three of the crew of the Lusitania. Capt. McNayland and the chief officers of the ship remain with the wreck. The passengers are almost entirely Russian and Polish Jews. The steamer struck at 1:30 in the morning during a dense fog. Capt. McNayland had to force the vessel upon the reef, for if he reversed the engines the whole ship's bottom would have been torn out and she would have sunk instantly.

The panic among the passengers was intense. The details of what occurred on board have been previously cabled. The drawing of knives by the passengers was not general, it occurred in isolated instances only.

Thre hours elapsed between the time when the Lusitania struck and the time the passengers started to disembark. This delay was ocasioned by the difficulty in controlling the passengers and handling the boats. All the passengers and crew agree that if the Lusitania had struck the rocks in rougher weather not a soul on board would have been saved.

THE WEATHER.

United States Agricultural Department, weather bureau, Duluth. Synopsis of weather conditions for the twenty-four hours ending at 7 a. m. (Central time), June 27.—Temperatures ranging between 70 and 80 degrees were general this morning at 7 o'clock in districts east of the 100th meridian, while in Upper and Middle Rocky mountain districts they ranged between 40 and 50 degrees. Light to copious showers fell over Oregon, Washington, Northwest Canada, the Eastern Dakotas, Northern Minnesota, Western New York, Western Pennsylvania and Southeastern Texas. The barometer is high in Eastern states, Montana, Wyoming, Washington and Oregon, and low over Nebraska, the extreme Southwest and north of North Dakota. The winds at 7 o'clock this morning were generally fresh westerly in the lake region, except that at Duluth a heavy northwest thundersquall prevailed.

Passing of Cecil Rhodes.

The man who was largely instrumental in bringing about the war in South Africa, whereby the British empire has sought to destroy the independence of the Boer republics, is said to be threatened with paralysis and about to return to England a permanent invalid with but a few years of life in prospect. Cecil Rhodes, the diamond king and the map-maker of South Africa, will leave Cape Town next Monday probably never to return to the land where he has amassed a fortune of many millions. The erect, heroic figure that dominated a wilderness and cut paths over it for the march of civilization is said to be bent and decrepit, the once firm lips agape, the one time far-seeing and fearless eyes dull and haggard. It is the irony of fate that the wrecker of many an Afrikander's hopes is himself a wreck. It is a singular fact that Rhodes left England as an Oxford undergraduate in poor health and sought in South Africa for a climate to prolong his life a few years. It worked wonders in his case, and he became a giant in form and strength. And Africa agreed with him in more ways than physically. The weak schoolboy was transformed into a man of iron and he became the master of South Africa. Politically and in a business way he was supreme. When the British South African Chartered company came into existence, no one knew, except that remarkable man, whether he was wanted to open up the wealth of South Africa to his government or himself. A tract of country five times the size of Great Britain was added to the British empire by the will of one man, without authority and in the very teeth of that empire's opposition. Then ambition directed his covetous eyes towards the Boer republic. The Jameson raid followed. It was his only mistake. It stripped Rhodes of all his official positions and he was execrated by the civilized world. The war that it really brought about has told upon even his iron nerve, and now he is wrecked physically. The Boers will call it retribution.

The New Consul For Pretoria.

It is reported at Washington that the counsel-generalship at Pretoria, vacant for many months, is to be filled by the appointment of Grant Gillespie of Missouri, who has been assured that congress will increase the salary of $2000, which is inadequate to support the incumbent. A published sketch of Mr. Gillespie's life shows that he has had quite a notable career in the volunteer army in the last three years. He was a first lieutenant in the Sixth Missouri regiment, commanded by Capt. L. H. Hardemann, of the Tenth United States cavalry in the war with Spain, and served creditably with that regiment on garrison duty in Cuba for six months. When the volunteer regiments for service in the Philippines were formed, Gillespie was commissioned a first lieutenant in the Twenty-first United States volunteers. As soon as his regiment arrived at Manila, Lieutenant Gillespie was detached from it and placed in command of a company of Macabebe scouts. He distinguished himself in this service and was brevetted twice for gallantry. He commanded Gen. Funston's scouts for about a year. For the last six months of his service in the Philippines he was assistant chief of police of Manila under Capt. Wilder, of the Sixth United States cavalry, and when his regiment was ordered home to be mustered out, Gen. MacArthur asked him to remain and accept the place of chief of police of Manila. If Mr. Gillespie goes to Pretoria as consul general it will be with the understanding that the salary is to be increased to $4000.

DULUTH'S GROWTH.

The great demand for houses in Duluth continues, and there are numerous families who are practically homeless at the present time because they cannot secure residences at rents within the limit of their means. Indeed, there are few houses obtainable at any rental. What will be the state of affairs when the camping season has ended and the campers on Park Point and other places return to the city in search of residences can hardly be contemplated with complacency. There is a hope, however, that the dwellings now being erected will relieve the congestion, but it is certain that there are not enough in process of construction to accommodate all who want houses, and there will be some disappointed people in the fall. Few, if any, of the houses now being built are for rent, practically all having been rented before the foundations were laid.

It is evident from these facts that Duluth is growing in population rapidly, and yet it would require a close analysis to discover where all the people are coming from. But the fact remains, and it presents a problem that must be solved. More houses must be built or the growth of the city will be hindered.

MILKMAN TO MAJOR.

The fact that favorites of the administration may accomplish almost any thing, even though contrary to the spirit of certain laws, is becoming to be more generally recognized every day. Not only favorite politicians, but personal favorites of high executive officers, are well taken care of in the distribution of offices and fat positions of various kinds. The latest subject to came under the glare of public disapproval is the former milkman of the president—a man who ran a dairy at Washington, and who numbered among his friends President McKinley. Not long ago staff appointees in the army were not subject to physical examinations, like appointees to the line. It was formerly the rule to put them through a mental examination, but the theory was that a paymaster, for instance, not having to do anything or expose himself seriously, could perform his duties just about as well if in delicate health, or lame, or partly blind, as if he were thoroughly "sound of mind and limb."

An ex-officer of the line, Charles Newbold, by name, a man who was running a dairy in Washington, was appointed from civil life to be additional paymaster of volunteers in March, 1899. This was, under the law, the necessary stepping-stone to a corresponding appointment in the regular army later, and in July of the same year he was transferred to a paymastership in the regular establishment with the rank of major. At the time of his staff appointment he had been about thirty-two years out of the service, and was about 60 years of age.

It apparently did not occur to anyone that a man who already had had some military training and knew what was expected of a paymaster would have sought such a position if unable physically to do it justice. But after he had enjoyed a rather quiet life at the station of St. Paul, where there was little to do, he was ordered to the Philippines. This was in 1900. The chief paymaster at Manila directed him to go, as the other paymasters were going, into the field to pay the troops. He objected on the ground of an organic trouble forbidding severe exertion or exposure. The chief paymaster wished to have him sent before the retiring board, but Newbold appealed to Gen. MacArthur, who, at his request, sent him back to the United States. On his return to Washington a retiring board investigated his case, reported that his disability was not contracted in the line of duty, and recommended that he be wholly retired; that is, separated from the service altogether, with one year's extra pay. The president cannot wholly retire an officer without such a recommendation from a board, but, on the other hand, the board's function is only advisory, and the president, after invoking it, is not compelled to abide by the recommendation. President McKinley has done nothing in this instance; neither has Maj. Newbold, although presumptively he knows what the board recommended as, in the judgment of its members, for the best interests of the service. Unless one or the other does something to change the present situation, Newbold will retire in August next—being 62 years old—on three-quarters pay of a major, or $2500 a year.

This case is understood to have resolved Secretary Root to change the preliminaries to appointment so as to put the staff upon the same footing as the line in the matter of physical examinations, and prevent further occurrences of like character, where a man can be appointed to a position for whose duties he is, by his own confession, physically unfit. In army circles much indignation has been stirred up by the fact that while Newbold has been receiving all this gratuitious consideration, officers who have served through the civil war, and in the Philippines and China, are still pegging away at a round of duty and hardships at meagre pay and with insignificant prospects. Maj. Newbold's former service in the army was limited to six years—from 1861 to 1867. During that time he stayed in the West, and took part in no battles of the civil war. His record was good as far as it went, though it is understood that his resignation resulted from his dissatisfaction with some command given him by his superior officer. The most common assumption regarding his hold upon the presidents' special favor is their business relations while Newbold was managing his dairy there; but this is denied in quarters where the facts are undoubtedly accessible, and "influential backing"—the support of persons whom the president did not deem it wise to offend—is given as the explanation. Whichever it might be, the major's retirement on three-quarters' pay this summer will, if it occurs, have a demoralizing effect upon the army, already hurt by unjust discrimination and personal favoritism.

STRIKES AND POLITICS.

A report of the testimony before the industrial commission respecting the labor disputes in Chicago last year has just been issued. It is a voluminous report and apparently covers all the sides of the question very thoroughly. One thing shown clearly by the testimony is that courts and officers have taken a bold hand in the labor strikes in that city for purposes of political capital. A summary of the testimony published in a Washington dispatch says:

"It was claimed also by several of the witnesses not only that policemen themselves were prejudiced in favor of the strikers, but that the higher city authorities leaned the same way. They asserted that the police had their instructions not to interfere except in case of absolute necessity, and several specific instances were cited to show that this was the case. It was claimed that this attitude of the authorities, which showed itself also in the actions of the police justices and other inferior courts, was due to political influence, especially to the decree of the party in power to cater to the large vote of the laboring classes at the coming election. These witnesses held that strikes in Chicago have been especially numerous just before elections, and that both parties have been disposed to make political capital out of labor difficulties."

This state of affairs is not peculiar to Chicago. Labor difficulties have frequently figured in politics outside of that city. The readers of The Herald will remember the coal miners' strike during the progress of the last presidential campaign and the part taken in the settlement of the trouble by Chairman Hanna of the Republican national committee. The Republican press used this fact in favor of the Republican party. The truth is that the politicians manipulate labor troubles for partisan purposes, and, on the other hand, labor leaders manipulate politics for the benefit of labor. They may be both doing wrong, but it is natural for men to take advantage of every circumstance calculated to secure the ends they are seeking.

The practical monopoly which Wales has enjoyed for years in the tin industry seems to have been broken and the United States steps in as a most dangerous rival. The exportation of tin plate from this country has been making rapid strides of late. While as recently as in 1891 we were importing tin plate to the value of $26,000,000, in 1900 (calendar year) the value of the combined imports of this article was only $4,000,000. This is in spite of the fact that the country never used so much for the petroleum trade, in the canneries, for roofing and plumbing purposes and for the manufacture of kitchen utensils. It was announced triumphantly about three years ago that a plant in the natural gas belt in Indiana had begun to export American tin plate. The treasury department, in its monthly reports, gave the article a separate heading, but the business dragged. It has now take a sudden spurt. In the ten months ending with April we shipped abroad 1,306,100 pounds of tin plate against only 275,900 pounds in the same period in 1900 and 183,955 pounds in 1899.

Brazil has notified the state department of her intention to send delegates to the Pan-American congress meeting in Mexico in October, something she has not before done, and in the face of the apparent efforts of Peru to disarrange proceedings unless the definition of "arbitration" agreed upon by the executive committee should be changed. This action of Brazil is, therefore, a victory for Chile, negatively at least. It is said that no nation except Peru is formally on record as not intending to send delegates to Mexico in spite of her claim that most of the South American countries sympathize with her contention. Before the convention occurs it is safe to predict that all the countries of South America will be in line. The coming in of Brazil practically takes the backbone out of the opposition.

A woman in Cincinnati testified in open court that she ran her house for fifteen days on 84 cents. Her husband only allowed her $3 a week to pay for rent, board and clothing for herself and five children. Her itemized account for the fifteen days was: Car fare, 5 cents; coffee, 10 cents; lard, 5 cents; prunes, 10 cents; soap, 5 cents; beans, 5 cents; beef, 10 cents; kraut, 5 cents; tomatoes, 15 cents; turnips, 10 cents; oil, 4 cents. She declared her husband was afraid she might get extravagant.

The Topeka State Journal expresses the opinion that the work of protecting the small manufacturers from the encroachment of the trusts by lowering or removing the tariff on certain lines as proposed by Congressman Babcock, is not likely to begin before all the small concerns have been swallowed up, unless the measure should make more rapid progress in congress than those of like character usually do.

Lone Wolf and his friends are no exception to the rule that the Indian who hearkens to the counsel of the pale face usually regrets it. They went to Washington on the representation of Judge Springer that great things could be accomplished. They were promptly turned down by the Great Father and now find themselves far from home and strapped. But the walking is good.

Senator Fairbanks of Indiana wants to run for president. Other politicians in Indiana who want his seat in the senate, which expires in 1903, also want him to run. The Des Moines News suggests that the tall Indiana senator should well study that fable of the late Mr. Aesop concerning the dog, the stream and the meat.

The president has pardoned Charles Mussey, who was formerly cashier of the National bank of Rutland, Vt., and sentenced to seven years in jail for misappropriating $100,000 of the bank's funds. It is safe to say that if Mussey had been a clerk and embezzled $1000, he would have served out his term.

The Samoans are suffering the penalty of civilization. As a result of wearing clothing, introduced in Samoa by the white men, the natives are dying off from consumption and other diseases. When they wore no clothes and covered their skin with cocoanut oil, they never had even a slight cold.

It is now denied that Senator Allan Greer, of Wabasha county, is seriously ill at Denver. His health has improved and he is so busy shooing and fishing that he has not time to think of dying at present.

G. R. Sims says "the future of Great Britain lies in its gradual absorption by the United States." This will give the Saturday Review another spasm.

Among the causes assigned for the recent strike at Dayton, Ohio, was the hoary and musty one that improved machinery displaces manual labor.

A great heat wave has swept over the West. The heat may be disagreeable but the farmer who can almost see his corn grow is not kicking.

After next Monday the Philippines will be governed by two governors and one sultan.

A day without rain is becoming a rarity.

WHITTLED TO A POINT.

Detroit Journal: "My heart wasn't in the service!" she faltered, with quivering lip. "When I looked around and saw that my hat wasn't in it I—"

Here she burst into tears.

Washington Star: "What do you think of Aguinaldo now?"

"It is fine," answered Aguinaldo, with gentle barbaric simplicity, "especially the free lunch."

Philadelphia Press: "Tell me," said Miss Skinnay, on the promenade, "is my—er—ankle showing?"

"Yes," replied Miss Plumpleigh, "but I wouldn't worry. I don't think anyone will notice it."

Detroit Free Press: Toper—It's getting so now that our barrooms have better pictures than can be seen anywhere.

Groper—Yes, you ought to be a connoisseur by this time."

Boston Transcript: Prison Visitor—Poor man, your life here must be excessively sad.

Convict—A good deal like matrimony, marm.

Prison Visitor—A good deal like matrimony?

Convict—Yes, marm; so easy to get in and so hard to get out.

Washington Star: "Do you think that unselfishness ever pays in politics?"

"Of course it pays," answered Senator Sorghum. "The unselfish man is the one who doesn't want any of your money. And he goes down as clear profit."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "That Bunker Hill monument celebration came near being an international affair."

"How was that?"

"Why, while the Americans were illustrating the way they whipped the British an Italian organ grinder ran a seven-inch knife into an Irish policeman."

Puck: The Tramp (between mouthfuls)—I wuz wunst a wealt'y married man, mum, but I am penniless now.

Kind Lady—You poor unfortunate man! Why didn't you put your fortune in your wife's name?

The Tramp—I do—an' she learned ter play bridge whist.

HEART AND MIND.

If all the dead whom I have known alive
Could rise unsheeted from their every grave,
What is the question I would first contrive
And which the friend whose answer I would crave?

Not to the great philosopher or sage
My unrelenting tongue should be untied,
Though in that hour I might believe an age
Of longing wonder could be satisfied;

Not to the teacher of the ways divine,
Nor preacher of the faith he'd held on earth—
These well might follow in an ordered line
As one by one the mind should give them birth—

But, searching, for one face, the heart would call:
"Dost thou remember me, my all in all?"
—JOHN GEORGE ROMANES.

Landsmen Enjoyed It.

Boston Transcript: The landsmen on board the Illinois are enthusiastic over the spectacular beauties of sea and sky during the trial trip. The sharp and vanishing contrasts of the color of the waves particularly struck them, and they say these were most noticeable when the helm was put hard down, the ship came up into the wind, running close hauled on an easy bowline, with the prevailing backstay carried through the lee scuppers to the aft engine room hatch by a tamming hitch in the weather clew gaskets.

Evans Should Stick.

Philadelphia Times: That Pension Commissioner Evans is tired of having resolutions hurled at him and would be willing to resign his office for one less onerous, may be readily believed. That he will not resign is most earnestly to be hoped. Having stood to his post thus long, it would only give encouragement to the pension sharks for him to leave it now, no matter who may be put in his place. He has simply administered the law honestly, in the interest of deserving pensioners and has constantly endeavored to protect them against the attorneys and agents who use them to rob the government. This is the whole source of the agitation against him, and the president, who has rightly shown his confidence in Commissioner Evans, will be suspected of yielding to an unworthy pressure if he should let him go just at this time, when the pension sharks have but lately renewed their outcry.

Sensations In the Pulpit.

Nashville American: Men are not attracted to church by mere lectures on social and civic topics. The more intelligent of them do not care to hear sensational preachings. Why should the minister attempt to imitate or compete with the platform lecturer, the stump speaker, or the stereopticon showman? If the word of God, the message of Christ, is not to be preached from the pulpit, where shall it be preached.

Good Words For Chinamen.

Buffalo Express: The Chinese are a thrifty, cleanly and law-abiding people and there should be no discrimination against them. The Chinese government does not assist emigration as some European countries have done, and this, with their remarkable love for home, may be taken as practical assurance that the influx with not be in the large numbers, which agitators would have the public believe.

Welcome If Honestly Acquired.

Worcester Spy: The idea that Americans had any part in the looting at Pekin or that they accepted any of the booty is extremely disagreeable. It must be admitted, however, that there has been some ground for the opinion that certain Americans are not above suspicion. The announcement comes from Washington that an important Chinese relic is to be placed on exhibition soon. One hopes that there will be exhibited with it a concise statement showing that it was obtained in a legitimate manner.

Vacations In the Country.

Brooklyn Eagle: The growing popularity of the vacation spent in the country is one of the encouraging signs of the times. Hundreds of thousands get out of town every summer. It is true that some of them can remain away not longer than a week. But they take that time in the country. The railroad companies are improving their train service so that business men may spend the summer with their families fifty miles or so from the city, returning to town every day.

"Unfortunately, the police too frequently follow their clews without reflection or with prejudice, and as a result they are as often wrong as right."

This remark from my friend Belter was called forth by a discussion of a murder which had recently shocked the community, and which the detectives were endeavoring to ferret out.

"But in this case," I replied, "they appear to be on the right track. They have arrested a colored man, a disreputable character, who was seen loitering about the house shortly after the occurrence."

"And who is as innocent as you or I," said Belter.

"What makes you think so?"

"A little reflection. He is a colored man and a shiftless character, hence public opinion at once pounces upon him as the culprit. But the negro had no motive for the crime. There was not evidence of either lust or robbery. Had he been guilty, he would have fled from the scene. He had ample time. Instead of which, he was actually coming toward the house instead of fleeing from it. The well-defined footprints about the place were made by a pair of comparatively new boots, while this poor fellow's shoes were out at the heels and almost soleless. Now if I had this case in hand, I should seek for the murderer in a different quarter."

"Where, for instance?"

"To begin, with, I should ascertain whether the victim's death would be of any benefit to any one. The newspapers say that she was engaged to be married. It is just possible that her intended found it necessary to get rid of her."

"Absurd! He was desperately in love with her. His grief was described as harrowing, when he heard of her death."

"I think he acted a part—overacted it, in fact. You may remember that when he viewed her corpse, he exclaimed: 'My God, how terrible. Stabbed with a kitchen knife!' Now up to that time nothing had been said about the weapon, and it was not till some minutes afterward that a bloody kitchen knife was found in the yard. In my opinion that man is the murderer."

I laughed at Belter, but he shrugged his shoulders and said: "We shall see."

Subsequently developments showed that my friend was right. The latter was arrested on suspicion, and a net of circumstantial evidence so skillfully woven around him that he confessed his crime.

I congratulated my friend upon the success of his theorizing. "Why," I said, "you are a second Sherlock Holmes."

"Who was he?"

I thereupon told him of the adventures of that wonderful, though fictitious person, and offered to lend him his "Memoirs" if he cared to read them. He accepted with avidity.

"Reasoning things by deduction has always been my hobby. I think I should have made a good detective."

"Well, I said jokingly, "if ever I am involved in a complicated case, I shall submit it to you, and see what you can do toward unravelling it."

The opportunity came sooner than I expected. About a week after our conversation my mother was robbed of a valuable diamond brooch. The circumstances were as follows: My mother had remained at home one Tuesday afternoon and busied herself with some embroidery. After working for a while she discovered that she was out of a certain color of silk, which was essential to the success of her design. Putting on her hat, she went to a shop in the vicinity to purchase the missing article. They were out of it, and she tried a store further down the street. She was gone in all about thirty minutes. When she returned she resumed her work. It was not until an hour later that she happened to notice that the upper left-hand drawer of her chiffonier was partly open and an end of lace was protruding. Knowing that she had not left the drawer in that untidy condition, she examined it carefully. The contents of the drawer were considerably mixed up, but apparently nothing was missing. The right-hand compartment was also slightly open, and on looking in, she found that her jewel box had been opened and a brooch worth probably $200 had been extracted. The other jewels in the same box, and there were quite a number of them, had not been disturbed. We had three servants in the house, two of whom had been with us for a number of years and were above suspicion, and a third, a chambermaid, who had come to us a short time before, and who was slovenly, careless and generally unsatisfactory. It was only on account of the prevailing scarcity of servants that we kept her at all. On her our suspicions at once fell, but a thorough search of her belongings failed to bring the missing article to light.

"The jewel was valued for its associations as much as for its intrinsic value, and my mother was seriously depressed by its loss and by the conviction that we harboured a thief. I informed the police of our loss, and after notifying the pawnbroker to keep their eyes open, they sent an officer to investigate the case. He was a stout, pompous old man with an oily, easy bowline, with the prevailing backstay carried through the lee scuppers to the aft engine room hatch by a tamming hitch in the weather clew gaskets.

My mother told minutely all that she could remember of that memorable afternoon.

"You think," asked the officer, "that the theft occurred while you were out after silk?"

"I am sure of it."

"Why?"

"Because when I went out at about 3 o'clock I took my purse from the left-hand drawer. It was in perfect order. When I next saw it, the contents had been disturbed and a piece of lace projected from the top."

"How long were you gone?"

"About thirty minutes."

"Who was in the house during that time?"

"Annie, the cook, and Bess, the new girl. The nurse, Lizzie, and the baby were out, and the older children were at school."

"Were the drawers of the chiffonier usually locked?"

"I usually leave the drawers open, when I am at home, and lock them when I go out. As I did not expect to begone more than five minutes, I neglected to take that precaution."

"Do you suspect Annie?"

"No; she has been with us for seven years, and is very devoted to us."

"How about the new girl?"

"Bess came to us last week. She is a stranger to us, and I could find out nothing concerning her character."

The detective shrugged his shoulders. "You have my sympathies," he said, "but if people would be more particular as to whom they employ such crimes as this would be less frequent. Where were the girls when you went out?"

"They were both in the kitchen cleaning up."

"Did they know you were going out?"

"Yes; but I told them I would be back in a few minutes."

"And when you returned, where were they?"

"Bess opened the door to let me in. Annie was upstairs in her room."

"Please call the girls."

Annie and Bess were ushered into the "presence," both pale with apprehension. They underwent a rigid examination. Annie confessed that after the "missus" had gone, her work being done, she went up to her room on the fourth floor, leaving Bess in the kitchen to answer the door. She saw no one go in or out.

Bess stated that on being left alone she had gone into the parlor and became so infatuated with a large illustrated book that she was oblivious to all else until she heard her mistress ring. This story appeared absurd on its face, and the detective chuckled at the ease with which he was fastening the guilt where it belonged. We all went upstairs, and again Bess' trunk was searched, but the brooch did not materialize. The girl protested amid a profusion of tears that she was innocent.

"Have either Annie or Bess been out of the house since the theft was discovered?" asked the officer.

"I sent Bess to the grocery store just before discovering the theft, and, coming to thing of it, she was gone a terribly long time."

"Of course," chuckled the detective "She made use of the opportunity to secrete the jewel. I think there is no doubt that this girl is the culprit. We will take her to the station house and see whether a night in a cell will persuade her to confess what she has done with the brooch."

In spite of her protestations the poor girl was led away. Two days later my friend Belter called to return my book. We were discussing the theft as he came in; my mother was convinced that Bess was the guilty party, while I expressed serious doubts about it. I at once told Belter the entire story and asked his opinion. He listened attentively, insisted on knowing every detail and asked numerous questions. He arose at the termination of the story.

"I am sure Bess was not the thief," he said. "Why should she have taken one jewel, when she could have taken all, and left the house without detection. Had she ever seen you take the jewels out of the drawer?"

"No."

"Whoever stole the brooch knew with certainty that the jewels were in one or the other of the top drawers, and, failing to find them in the left-hand side, looked for them in the right-hand compartment. Will you let me look into the parlor?"

We accompanied him to that room. On the table lay a book of illustrations by Dore. This he took up, and examined it attentively.

"Is this a new book?" he asked.

"We received it a few weeks ago."

"Bess told the truth in regard to looking at the pictures," he said. "Here are the faint marks of her dirty fingers on each page containing a picture. There are sixty-two pages in all which bear the impress of her thumb. If he had spent half a minute looking at each it would have occupied her about half an hour. Did it rain or shine on Tuesday?"

"It rained in the morning," answered my mother, "but it cleared in the afternoon. The weather was fine, although the ground remained muddy. I regretted having to stay at home."

"Then why did you stay there? Was it important that you should finish your embroidery?"

"Yes; I wanted to get through with it. Besides, I was expecting someone."

"Whom were you expecting?"

"A protege of mine. A poor girl, whose family I have been assisting. I wrote to her mother to send Sally home that afternoon for some cast off clothing. Then I wanted to send her to my sister's where she was to obtain work."

"Did Sally come Tuesday afternoon?"

"No; she did not. Next morning she came and offered as an excuse that her mother had been sick and had detained her."

"Did you corroborate this?"

"No; I have been too busy and too worried to bother with it. Besides, Sally is truthful, and her mother is usually on the sick list."

"Had Sally ever been to the house before?"

"Yes. She comes once a month. I pay her mother's rent."

"Does she usually come into the bedroom?"

"I generally receive her in that room."

"Please take me upstairs. I want to see the chiffonier."

We led him to the room. He examined the chest of drawers carefully, pulling out each drawer in turn and inspecting the woodwork. This piece of furniture was about five feet in height and surmounted by a beveled mirror.

"Is Annie Bess a tall girl?" he asked suddenly.

"Yes. Tall and thin."

"H'm," Belter appeared lost in reflection. "And how old is Sally?"

"About 18."

"Then I suppose she must be unnaturally short, possibly deformed."

"Yes. She is a hunchback."

"And wore dresses down to the ground."

"Yes. How do you know? Have you ever seen her?"

"Not to my knowledge. Have you any entrance to the house besides the front door.

"There is an alley leading from Bleak street."

"Is the gate usually open or closed?"

"It is open when the girls are in the kitchen, but they have instructions to close it when they go upstairs."

"Would your friend Sally be apt to come in through the gate?"

"Yes. She usually comes in that way."

"Could I speak to Annie?"

Annie at once obeyed the summons.

"When your mistress went out on Tuesday, you went to your room?"

"Yes."

"Why?"

"My work was done and I had some sewing to attend to."

"Was the gate closed when you went upstairs?"

"No. Bess had to carry out the ashes. I told her to be sure to lock the gate before going upstairs."

"Did she lock it?"

"I can't say. Before I came down the theft was discovered, and we all lost our heads."

"Did anything out of the ordinary occur on that day which might throw some light upon the subject?"

"I remember grumbling a little at finding a muddy footprint on the steps which I had just scrubbed. I scolded Bass, but she said she couldn't have done it, as she had not been out of doors."

"Now," said Belter, straightening up; "if you will please give me Sally's address I think I can restore your jewel within an hour."

"You certainly don't suspect Sally," cried my mother, in amazement.

"I am sure she is the thief. You expected her and she came punctually through the gate. Her footprints on the back steps proves it. She found the kitchen deserted, for Annie was upstairs and Bess was in the parlor, lost in ecstatic contemplation of art. She went up to the sitting-room which was also empty, and thence into the bedroom where she expected to find her benefactress. Here, too, she found herself alone. The girl, though deformed, is rather vain, for she stood in the center of the room, where she could best admire herself in the mirror. You can still see traces of mud on the floor, the imprint of her shoe nails in the carpet. She suddenly remembered that she had seen you take your jewels from one of the drawers. Overpowered, perhaps, by a desire only to see the glittering stones, she opened a left-hand drawer. Being deformed she was too short to look over the top. She thereupon pulled open the lower drawer and stood upon it. The nails in her shoe scratched the varnish, and the imprint is still visible directly above this. I found a splash of mud, where her dress touched the woodwork. I concluded from this that she wore long dresses. Seeing that the jewels were not in the left, she tried the right-hand drawer. She found the jewels, and yielding to temptation, took the brooch, which pleased her most."

"It sounds very well in theory," said my mother, "but I still believe that Sally is innocent and that Bess is the thief."

"Perhaps this will convince you," replied Belter. "Here is a paper box which the thief fingered in her search for the jewels. It contains the impress of her thumb." He took the box down to the parlor, we all following. "Now," he continued, "please compare these marks with the thumb prints on Dore's pictures. You will see that they are entirely different. No two persons have exactly the same lines in the skin of the fingers. Bess confessed that she had looked at these pictures, consequently it was not she who handled this box."

"Well," I said, convinced, "let us go to Sally's house, and see whether your reasoning is correct."

We went without delay. Sally, after a little cross-examination, confessed her crime. It had occurred exactly as Belter had related. She had thrown the brooch into a heap of rubbish until she should find an opportunity of disposing of it, and was very glad to escape arrest by restoring the jewel. Bess, of course, was reinstated, and her salary raised as a compensation for the injury done her. Should you need the services of a good detective, I can cheerfully recommend my friend Mr. Belter.

"How Tildy Smith Can Play."

Say, p'raps you've heard of Tildy Smith,
The belle of far and near;
The lady I've been goin' with
For nigh on seven year.
It wa'n't her beauty won her fame,
It wa'n't her winnin' way;
Planner music made her name.
You ought to hear her play.

Of course she ain't no Rubystine,
She's simply T'll, you see;
But I'd put up that colt o' mine
She's nigh as good as he.
She's got no Paderewski frills,
Her fingers ain't so fleet;
But, land! There's jest one tune o' Till's
That simply can't be beat.

Why, when she sets before the grand
An' tosses back her hair,
You'd think that Sousa's famous band,
Instid o' T'll was there.
She starts the tune out kind o' slow,
To sort o' clear the track,
An' then before you really know,
She rips it up the back.

She'll make you think the soldier men
Are marchin' past the place;
She'll hev you up behind ole Ben
An' nearly get the race,
She'll make you think you're mighty glad You're livin'; by and by
She'll git you feelin' fearful sad,
An' then you'll want to die.

An' next she feede the birds a while—
You almost see 'em 'round;
An' when you're jest about to smile
She quits 'em with a bound.
An' then the air gets full o' dust,
The house begins to jump,
An' when you're jest about to bust
She lands you with a bump.

An' when she quits an' makes her bow
Before the yellin' crowd,
That ole planner, yes, I vow,
Is sort o' lookin' proud.
I'll say you never heard o' T'll?
That's queer I'm bound to say.
Well, when you come to Stubbleville
Drop 'round an' hear her play.

TO CHLOROFORM BURGLARS.

"Have you ever heard of an anesthetic safe?" asked a safe and lock expert. "It was invented many years ago, and I came across one in an old house the other day. The idea of the thing was that any cutting or drilling through the outer casing would release certain chemicals which would promptly stupify everybody in range of their fumes. In the morning the owner would find his valuables intact, and could simply call a policeman, and pack off the unconscious burglars to jail.

"With such a device it was unnecessary to have massive steel walls, and the model which I chanced to inspect was made of one-eighth inch sheet iron. The inner box was entirely surrounded with glass tubes about the diameter of a lead pencil, and filled alternately with two chemicals, which were supposed to produce stupefying gas when they came into contact. There was a thin outside casing, and any effort to break through it would necessarily fracture two or more of the fragile glasses.

Prescriptions are filled correctly...

Every drop of medicine that goes into a prescription which is filled here is perfectly pure. We make it our business to see that everything is pure and of standard strength. There is no guess-work about it. Pure drugs and intelligent compounding are what make a prescription filled here so effective.

No doctor can obtain the desired results in the sick-room unless his prescriptions are filled with drugs of the highest quality. The sick-room is the one place above all others where quality counts more than anything else. If you want the patient to improve, to respond to the physician's labors, you should be particular about the medicine. You should have his prescriptions filled with nothing but pure fresh drugs and chemicals.

More and more physicians are depending on our prescription department. We compound are we think your doctor would like to have them compounded, and as we know they should be.

Most of the reputable physicians of Duluth patronize our prescription department. This fact should be of interest to you. It means that if you bring your prescriptions here to be compounded, that the physician is satisfied—the patient gets the best medicine.

SOUTH ON TICKETS

May Be Represented on the Old Party Tickets.

Maryland Favors Lowndes and Kentucky Stands For Yerkes.

Democrats In the South Have Not Expressed Preference.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Southern states may be represented on both the Republican and Democratic national tickets in 1904. There is a disposition upon the part of Republican leaders in the South to compel their Northern associates to give them this kind of representation in the next national campaign.

The Democrats in the Southern states have also about arrived at the conclusion that this great section of the country, which furnishes, usually, more electoral votes to the Democratic national ticket than any other, should be recognized, and they will insist upon this recognition, it is believed, at the national Democratic convention in 1904.

Two of the so-called Southern states have good vice presidential timber for the Republican ticket in the next national campaign. These two states are Maryland and Kentucky. The Republicans of Maryland seem to think that it would strengthen the national Republican ticket in the next campaign if a Marylander was given second place on the national ticket.

About the only man the Maryland Republicans have in view at this time is former Governor Lowndes. Governor Lowndes resides at Cumberland, and is a neighbor of Senator George L. Wellington. It was probably through the efforts of Wellington that Lowndes was defeated for re-election as governor of Maryland. In view of the fact that Wellington, who was elected as a Republican, is no longer considered as a member of that party, his influence against Lowndes in case he is brought forward for the vice presidency would not be sufficient to injure his candidacy for the nomination, nor would it injure the prospects of the national Republican ticket. It is also a question now among public men as to which party Wellington will affiliate with in the future. The Republicans do not care to take him back into that party's fold, and the Democrats never have been elated over his affiliation with the Democracy in the last national campaign. It can therefore readily be seen that, if the Republicans of Maryland desire representation on the national Republican ticket in 1904, Lowndes can certainly secure the state delegation, if not the nomination, at the hands of the Republican national convention.

The Kentucky candidate is Mr. Yerkes, the Republican candidate for the governorship of that state the last year. Mr. Yerkes now holds a federal position with headquarters in Washington, but if his state will give him a solid delegation to the next national Republican convention, he will consent to become a candidate for the vice presidency, even though his candidacy is not successful at the national convention. In the event that either Senators Hanna or Foraker should be nominated, the geographical location of Yerkes would not be at all favorable for him to secure the vice presidential nomination. This would also prove to be the case if Senator Fairbanks should capture first place on the Republican national ticket in 1904. If the successful candidate for first place on the ticket, however, comes from either New York, Wisconsin or Illinois, for instance, and the Republicans decide to take a man from the South as their vice presidential candidate, Yerkes would probably stand a better chance to secure the nomination than Governor Lowndes of Maryland or any other candidate the Republicans of the South might bring forward for this honor.

When Maj. McKinley was nominated at St. Louis in 1896, it was at that time thought that the vice presidential nomination would go to the South. Henry Clay Evans, the present commissioner of pensions, was then the leading candidate from the South for the vice presidency, and at one time at St. Louis it looked as though he would be successful. He failed, however, for the reason that the Republican leaders from the North made a combination which resulted in the nomination of Mr. Hobart and the defeat of Mr. Evans.

It is not likely that Mr. Evans will be brought forward as a vice presidential possibility in 1904. While he has conducted the affairs of the pension bureau on a strictly business basis, he has made many enemies by his strict interpretation of the pension laws. It will readily be recalled that members of the Grand Army of the Republic have long been dissatisfied with the management of the pension bureau under Mr. Evans' administration and have made repeated efforts to have him ousted from the commissionership. The president gave them an audience two or three times at the White House, listened to what they had to say regarding Mr. Evans' course at the head of the pension bureau, but declined to call for Mr. Evans' resignation, as was requested by the G. A. R. representatives. The opposition of the G. A. R. would make it unwise, of course, for the Republicans to consider Mr. Evans as a vice presidential possibility in the next national campaign.

What the Southern Democrats will do regarding the vice presidential question is something that will probably not be definitely settled until it is discovered who the standard bearer of that party will be in 1904. The Democrats of the South have plenty of good vice presidential timber. If Mr. Bryan should, by any chance, head the Democratic ticket again in 1904, his running mate, without doubt, will come from one of the Southern states. If former Senator Hill, of New York, who is very popular in the South, should be placed at the head of the ticket in the next campaign, it would be an easy matter to induce the delegates to the Democratic national convention to choose a Southern man to make the contest with the New Yorker.

Up to date, it appears that only two men from the South have been given consideration as possible vice presidential candidates. These two men are Senators Martin and Daniel, of Virginia. It is not known whether or not Mr. Daniel would allow his name to be used in this connection, but it is believed to be a fact that his colleague in the senate, Mr. Martin, would consent to become a candidate, provided he was endorsed by the Democrats of his own state for this position. Northern, Easterrn, Western and Southern Democrats have, for the past two years, regarded favorably both Daniel and Martin as good vice presidential timber.

You Can Cure It.

A New Cure for Catarrh in Tablet Form.

The old time treatment for catarrh was in the form of douches or sprays; later on, internal remedies were given with greater success, but being in liquid or powdered form were inconvenient and were open to the same objection to all liquid remedies, that is, that they lose whatever medical power they may have had on exposure to the air.

The tablet is the ideal form in which to administer medication, but until recently no successful catarrh tablet had ever been attempted.

At this writing, however, a most excellent and palatable remedy for catarrh has been placed before the public and sold by druggists, called Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, composed of the most recent discoveries in medicines for the cure of catarrh, and results from their use have been highly gratifying.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets contain principally highly concentrated antiseptics, which kill the catarrh germs in the blood and mucous membranes, and in this respect are strictly scientific and modern, as it has been known for some years past by the ablest physicians that the most successful catarrh treatment was by inhaling or spraying antiseptics.

The use of inhalers, douches and sprays, however, is a nuisance and inconvenience, and moreover can in no wise compare with the same remedies given in tablet form, either in efficacy or convenience.

A clerk in a prominent insurance office in Pittsburg relates his experience with Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in a few words but to the point. He says: "Catarrh has been almost constantly with me for eight years; in this climate it seems impossible to get rid of it. I awoke every morning stuffed up and for the first half hour I was coughing, expectorate and sneeze before I could square myself for my day's work; no appetite, and a foul breath which annoyed me exceedingly. I tried Stuart's Catarrh Tablets for two months and found them not only pleasant to take but they did the business, and I can sincerely recommend them to all catarrh sufferers."

Druggists sell Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at 50 cents for full sized package. They can be carried in the vest pocket and used at any time and as often as necessary. Guaranteed free from cocaine, mercury or any mineral poison; absolutely safe.

MOLTON METAL

Frightfully Burned Several Foundry Workmen.

Chicago, June 26.—Caught in streams of molten metal which poured into the cupola room of the Soft Foundry department of the American Car Foundry today seven workmen were frightfully turned three of the mfatally.

The explosion of a dynamite shell which had been placed in the cupola with scrap iron caused the accident. When the shell had been heated, it burst, breaking the walls of the cupola, the molten metal streaming forth in all directions. Not one of the men in the room escaped the white hot metal.

The victims: Thomas Cusack, foreman of the cupola room, died on the way to hospital; Frank Baleer, skull fractured and entire body burned; Michael Smentak, entire body burned by metal, both legs broken; Charles Brown, scalp wounds and burned about body; Frank Diedo, arm broken and burned about face and head; William Burke, body burned; John Sefick, body burned and leg broken.

SO DECEPTIVE

Many Duluth People Fail to Realize the Seriousness.

BACKACHE IS SO DECEPTIVE—IT COMES AND GOES—KEEPS YOU GUESSING—LEARN THE CAUSE—THEN CURE IT—NINE TIMES OUT OF TEN IT COMES FROM THE KIDNEYS—THAT'S WHY DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE IT—CURE EVERY KIDNEY ILL FROM BACK TROUBLES TO DIABETES—HERE'S A DULUTH CASE TO PROVE IT:

Mr. Henry Hibke, police officer at Lakeside, residing at 4544 London road, says: "I have no hesitation in recommending Doan's Kidney Pills to any one who is at all troubled with their kidneys or suffers from pains through the loins, or from the effects of colds settling in the kidneys. An officer's work necessitates his being exposed to all kinds of weather. A few years past I had attacks whenever I caught cold and a heavy aching pain developed across my loins and the kidney secretions became irregular and unnatural. Otherwise I have always enjoyed the best of health. Seeing Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended I procured a box at W. A. Abbett's Drug store and began using the remedy. The trouble was soon removed."

MARKETS ARE QUIET

As Far as Foundry Trade Is Concerned In Iron.

Consumption However Continues on Unusually Large Scale.

The Labor Situation Is Being Given Less Attention.

New York, June 27.—The Iron Age in its issue today will say: So far as the foundry iron trade is concerned the markets have been rather quiet, and are still balancing. Cincinnati, which is the chief distributing point for Southern iron, is rather weak. In the east the purchase of basic pig by the leading steel interest, both for Western and New England delivery, are having their effect. Among these sales is one lot of 6000 tons. In Pittsburg some larger outside steel companies have taken round blocks of Bessemer pig. Apparently, however, it is only for prompt shipment that this iron is wanted.

Consumption continues on a large scale, and there are those who feel confident that it is bound to continue to the top notch well into the winter months. In many lines, as in steel rails, and in railroad equipment generally, this is abundantly assured by the orders on the books. In structural material, in which there was a lull in new orders there is more doing. Some very good contracts have just been placed, among them one lot of 10,000 tons for shipment at the Pueblo works of the Colorado Fuel and Iron company. The same is true of the shipyards on the lakes, which have just booked additional tonnage.

The labor situation is being given less consideration. The end of the machinists' strike is in sight, so that that consuming branch will soon be restored to its normal condition. It is not believed that there is serious danger over the moulders' demands, while the conferences between the Amalgamated association and the union rolling mills are likely to lead to an early adjustment.

The flood in West Virginia will not delay coke shipments from that important district more than two weeks at the utmost.

Some uneasiness has been caused by the reports from England that steel billets and wire rods were again being offered from this side. This was construed as an intimation that powerful interests had evidence that there is danger of consumption here falling off later on. We understand, however, that the management of the United States Steel corporation has decided to change the policy pursued by constituent companies in the past by selling abroad only when relief was desirable. It is understood that henceforth the leading American makers will at all times keep in touch with the foreign markets through sales, even though they be small only.

GROOM CAME NOT.

Committed Suicide Just Before His Wedding.

Clarinda, Iowa, June 27.—Thomas J. Rogers, whose marriage to Miss Inez C. Plank, a young lady of this city, was set for 6 o'clock last evening, shot himself through the head at that hour instead of going to the home of the bride, where the ceremony was to have been performed. Rogers died an hour afterward. About twenty invited guests assembled for the wedding, but soon after 6 o'clock word was brought that the groom had killed himself. Rogers was 27 years of age. Three years ago he inherited $12,000 from his father. He had spent all of this amount except $85.

SHOT FATHER-IN-LAW.

Winona Man Then Turned Gun on Himself.

Winona, Minn., June 27.—A double shooting took place here last evening just before 6 o'clock. Joe Campbell shot and probably fatally wounded his father-in-law, William Grundman, and then shot himself in the head. Grundman is failing rapidly. It is not believed that he can live.

The trouble is of long standing. Grundman and his son-in-law have never gotten along well. Grundman has been compelled to support the family the greater part of the time. Grundman is a cigarmaker and has a small factory in this city.

In Campbell's attempt at suicide he shot his right eye to pieces and the left eye is seriously injured, but it is thought the bullet did not penetrate the brain. He was too drunk last night to give the doctors permission to cut out his eye, so they did not operate. While his condition is serious he may recover.

STRIKERS RETURNING.

Metal Trades Association Thinks Strike Nearly Over.

New York, June 27.—A special meeting of the finance and strike committee of the National Metal Trades association has just been held to hear reports as to the progress throughout the country of the strike of the machinists.

Reports were received from members of the association in the principal cities, which showed that daily strikers in nearly every section of the country were returning to work unconditionally. After the meeting it was said that the belief was general that the strike would be ended in about two weeks.

IN MICHIGAN.

The Main Menominee River Drive on Its Way Down.

Menominee—The main Menominee river log drive was started Monday morning, and as the water in the river is sufficiently high it is expected the drive this year will be fast. Sunday morning a crew of seventy men was sent to Florence, Wis., and the logs are moving. The main river drive started about the same time last year. The Paint and Pike river drives were completed last week, and all of the other tributary stream drives are out. So far but few logs are hung up, Mann Bros. have some logs that they will not be able to get out this year, but the drives have as a rule been very successful.

Niagara—The men in the paper mill at Niagara do not take kindly to Italians. Sunday night four men of this nationality started to work. They managed to hold their jobs until about 4 o'clock Monday morning, when the other employes turned water from a hose on them, showing by this inhospitable procedure that they thought it was time for them to make scarce. One of the Italians took the stage for Quinnesec. The other three walked out of the city.

Iron Mountain—The reunion of the French societies of the upper peninsula at Iron Mountain was a success. The day opened with a severe storm, but by noon the weather had cleared so that it did not in any manner interfere with the festivities. A couple of thousand strangers spent the day in the city, most of them returning to their homes Monday evening, although a considerable number of the visitors still remain in Iron Mountain. The program for the reunion was sufficient, and the observance was generally voted a success.

Evelyn Gordon, of a repertoire company of that name, had one of her actors arrested at Iron Mountain, the troupe having arrived in that city to play a week's engagement. Reginal H. Barlow is the man's name for whom the warrant was sworn out. Miss Gordon alleges that she heard a noise in one of the ladies' rooms, and that admittance was refused her when she endeavored to ascertain what was going on. As she stood outside the door it suddenly opened and Barlow struck her in the eye. Miss Gordon says the woman in the room looked as if she had been doped. She was Miss Florence Hamilton, who was to have married Barlow on the stage at Escanaba last week, but who, at the last moment, refused to carry out her part of the matrimonial contract. Barlow was held in the county jail, in default of $100 bail, awaiting his trial.

RULING PASSION.

Wickes Family Has Record In Divorce Line.

New York, June 27.—For the second time in his eventful career, Thomas H. Wickes, vice president and general manager of the combined Pullman and Wagner Palace car business, has been divorced. The decree is absolute. It was granted by Justice Truax in the supreme court.

Col. Franklin Bartlett, who heard the testimony as referee, recommended that the prayer of Mrs. Wickes be granted. This action today completes a matrimonial and elopement record in the Wickes family that has few duplicates. The father has been twice divorced, and rumor in Chicago, where he makes his home, has it that he is about to marry again. His daughter, Florence Lillian, eloped, lived with her husband two weeks and secured a divorce. She is now on the stage. His son Harry practically eloped with a Kansas City girl. Another daughter is living happily with her husband in St. Louis. Thomas H. Wickes was sued for divorce by his first wife in Chicago in 1894. She alleged extreme cruelty, specifying that he kicked her out of bed, slapped her face and threw food at her.

The ink on the decree was scarcely dry before Mr. Wickes took to wife Clarissa Spicer, a handsome young Chicago woman. He married her in secret. It has been known for a long time that the elder Wickes was not happy with his second wife. She left him more than a year ago and came to this city, establishing a residence. It was not known until the decree was handed down that she had secured a divorce. The decree Wickes is not free to marry until the plaintiff "shall be actually dead."

It is also ordered that Wickes shall pay his wife $125.25, the amount of her disbursements in the suit.

JOHN KENT'S WIVES.

Two Names, Two Brides and Two Jobs.

Chicago, June 27.—Two names, two wives, two homes and two jobs, all possessed at one time by one man, brought P. Klein-Kent to grief.

When arraigned in the criminal court on a charge of bigamy he gave his name as either John P. Klein or John P. Kent. He told the court that he was christened under the former. By both, however, he had a wife and by both he had separate leases to homes. By each name he was differently employed. He told Judge Smith that he was guilty of bigamy and received an indeterminate penitentiary sentence and a fine of $1.

The defendant, under the name of Klein, married Mary H. Panoch, Nov. 13, 1898. As Kent he married Olga Salstrum, at Hammond, Ind., Dec. 6, 1900. Although the work cost him his health he cared for them both.

As Klein he held a day position and as Kent he worked through the night.

"I was sorry afterwards that I did it, but I married them," he told the court, "and I was determined that I would go through life without their knowing the true circumstances. They found me out, though."

His first wife, Mrs. Klein, by whom he had two children, lives at 108 Mohawk street.

His second wife, Mrs. Kent, lives at 1130 School street. For the first he worked days at a salary of $25 a week; for the second he worked nights at $10 a week. He was able, under the circumstances to spend little time with either, and his numerous excuses finally brought him under suspicion.

He strove valiantly to keep up the two homes. He told Mrs. Klein that he had prospects for a lucrative night position, which he was watching, and he told Mrs. Kent that he was attempting to work himself into a day job.

Mrs. Kent, dissatisfied with her allowance, finally began an investigation. She followed her husband to his work and then to his other home. From the corner grocer she ascertained that he was the husband of Mrs. Klein and the father of her two children. Then she followed him into the house.

The trouble that resulted brought a policeman to the scene and the husband was arrested. After his arrest, which was followed by an indictment, he decided that he loved his first wife best and he asked to be allowed to get a divorce from Mrs. Kent. Yesterday his case on the charge of bigamy was called in the criminal court and he pleaded folly as the only excuse for the crime. After the commission he declared he had attempted to keep up the two homes, but had found it impossible to please both his wives.

THE DAKOTAS.

Town of Miller Has a Wonder In Its Saloonkeeper.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Miller—This town has but one saloon, the proprietor of which recently had a man arrested for being intoxicated. He gives liberally to churches and when a reformed drunkard not long ago went back to the saloon after a drink, the proprietor told him he had been praying and hoping he would find it out and not drink again. This caused the reformed drinker to take new courage and he has quit for good.

Deadwood—There will likely be a lively contest among the Republicans for the position of judge of the eighth judicial circuit, to take the place of the present incumbent, Judge Moore. Several candidates have had their names publicly announced, among them being John H. Burns and Frank J. Washabaugh, both of this city. Each will have strong backing. Other candidates purpose to enter the race later on.

Deadwood people are now looking forward to a pleasant spell of weather, which will help make the carnival a success. The rain has stopped and there is every appearance of a settled condition of things.

Aberdeen—Senator Kyle is gradually improving. His physicians pronounce him out of immediate danger, but with a tedious period of recovery before him.

Yankton—In police court the hearing of William Darrell was called. He was charged with threatening C. M. Henderson with bodily harm and to kill. The judge gave the parell the choice of standing trial or leaving the city never to return. He chose the latter alternative.

Custer—At the term of court the docket was well cleaned up. A verdict was brought in against Robert Bowers for grand larceny. A motion was made for a new trial, which was overruled. He pleaded guilty to petit larceny and was fined $100. There was no appearance against John and Isaac Tanner, and a motion to quash was granted. The jury returned a verdict against George Gould for petty larceny and he was fined $40. The case of Fred S. Matie was continued and that of the state vs. William Smith was dismissed on account of the inability of the prosecuting witness to appear.

Huron—Doyle Bros., Darlington, Wis., have closed their deal with the Kelly Land company of this city for sixty-seven quarter sections of land in Beadle and Davidson counties. The land business in this part of the state is better than for many years, and while prices are high state transfers will continue to increase. Much of the land sold is to new settlers.

Hot Springs—Because of many applications that have recently been made to the general land office to cut and remove dead timber now standing in the Black Hills forest reserve, Commissioner Herman has ordered that the timber be disposed of without advertisement at the rate of 25 cents per cord.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Park River—The third annual fair of Walsh county is being held in Park River for three days, commencing Wednesday. Although the weather was cloudy and a little rain fell it has turned out a perfect June day and Walsh county is showing some of its best produce. One farmer, Thomas Bolton, is said to have upwards of 100 entries. T. K. Smith is president, and Attorney E. Smith Peterson, secretary.

HOT AT LA CROSSE.

The River City Suffers From Intense Heat.

La Crosse, Wis., June 27.—La Crosse and vicinity is having the hottest weather this month for several years past. Yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock the mercury in the government thermometer stood at 98 degrees, which is as high as ever reached in June since 1874. Eight prostrations have occurred and two victims are not expected to recover. There is no relief in sight and it is as hot today.

CIGARMAKERS STRIKE.

Quebec, June 27.—All the union cigar men are out on strike. They demanded higher wages and sent a notification to their employers to confer with one of their officers in St. Sauver. The two leading factories here, owned by H. D. Barry and the Quebec Cigar company, are both holding out. One of the factories is employing non-union men and teaching them the trade.

Cascarine The Household Tonic Laxative.

Mrs. James McKay gives the following testimony as to the quality of the laxative tonic, Cascarine: "All mothers know the difficulty in trying to make children take medicine. It is a black day for the little ones when their stomach is out of order and they have to take these nasty remedies which stick to the throat and leave a bad taste in the mouth all day long, for when these medicines are taken into the little one's stomach they gripe terribly and cause much annoyance. I tried several laxatives for family use until I was about to give up in despair. At this time a friend told me what Cascarine had done for her children, and as a last resort tried it. We have used it ever since. I can honestly say that Cascarine has no equal. It is a pleasure in taking and after taking. My advice to mothers is to keep Cascarine as I do, always on hand. It solves the problem of treating children's ailments, and will save you a great deal of anxiety as well as worry, many a time."

Cascarine is made from roots, herbs, barks, plants and berries. Cures after all other treatments have failed or money refunded. If your complexion is muddy, your eyes yellow; if you are nervous, have a slight fever, feel mean, out of sorts, or if you are constipated and generally sick, take Cascarine. It stimulates the secretions, improves the appetite, dissolves impurities from the body, purifies the blood and tones up the system in general. No need of your going to a doctor and paying big doctor bills when you can be cured by the best prescription that the world has ever known. There is only one genuine Cascarine. It is a liquid laxative and pleasant to the taste, and does not interfere with the most delicate stomach. Buy a bottle today at your druggist's. Price 50 cents per bottle.

ANOTHER ADVANCE

Wheat Is Strong and Closes at Better Prices.

Improved Cables Were the Cause of Better Prices.

Leading Shorts on the Chicago Board Covered Heavily.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 27.—The wheat market started out at an advance this morning over last night's closing figures, reacted, but soon sold up again. It was reported that leading shorts in September covered heavily at Chicago, and a good demand for July was also noted. The chief cause of the advance in prices was strength at Liverpool, where closing unchanged to ½d higher than that market. The Price Current reports crop conditions good with winter wheat harvesting and threshing reports exceeding expectations and the quality exceptionally high. Primary receipts of wheat were 490,622 bus, last year 437,742 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 589,600 bus.

Receipts at Duluth and Minneapolis, 331 cars, against 329 last week, and 378 last year. Chicago receipts, 53 cars, 1 of contract grade.

Trading in futures was dull on the Duluth board. September wheat opened ⅛c up at 66⅜c, sold at 66⅝c at 9:30, reacted to 66⅛c at 9:55, recovered to 66⅝c at 10:30, eased off to 66⅜c at 11:11, held steady there and closed at 66⅞c, an advance of ½c. Chicago advanced ½-⅝c and Minneapolis the same.

Cash sales were 25,000 bus at July price. September flax was stopped in its upward course today and closed at a decline of 1c while October continued unchanged. Other coarse grains were unchanged in price.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard—Cash, 69⅝c; to arrive and July, 70c; September, 67⅝c. No. 1 northern—Cash, 668⅛c; to arrive and July, 67c; September, 66⅝c. No. 2 northern, 63¾c. No. 3 spring, 57⅝c. Oats, 27½-28c. Rye, 46⅝c. Flax—Cash, $1.88; September, $1.42; September Northwestern, $1.43; October, $1.36.

Car inspection—Wheat, 82; corn, 1; oats, 2; rye, 1; flax, 8. Receipts—Wheat, 93,474; corn, 5386; oats, 2464; rye, 2250. Shipments—None.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Better Prices For Wheat, Corn Unchanged.

Chicago, June 27.—Improved cables caused better prices in the wheat pit today. September opened ½c higher at 67⅜c, declined to 67¼c and advanced to 67⅝@67¾c. Loading shorts covered heavily. July also was in good demand. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 331 cars against 329 a week ago and 238 a year ago. Local receipts were 93 cars, 1 of contract grade.

September continued upward on a good export demand until 67⅝c was reached. The close was firm ½@⅝c higher at 67⅜@67⅝c.

Corn was featureless, September opened unchanged at 44⅞@45c, declined to 44½c and rallied to 44⅝c. Receipts were 143 cars, 2 of contract grade.

The close was easy, ¼@⅜c lower at 44⅝c. Oats were inert. September opened a shade up at 26⅝@27c and declined to 26⅜@26½c. Receipts were 105 cars.

Provisions were dull but steady. September pork opened a shade lower at $14.82½ and sold up 5c. September lard opened 2c down at $8.70 and advanced to $8.72½; and September ribs unchanged at $8.15.

Close, wheat, June, 67¼c; July, 67¾c; September, 67⅝@67½c. Corn, June, 42⅝c; July, 43½@43¾c; September, 44⅝c. Oats, June, 26⅝c; July, 26¾c; September, 26¼c. Pork, June, $14.60; July, $14.90; September, $14.80. Lard, June, $8.62½; July, $8.62½; September, $8.70; October, $8.67½. December, $8.22½; January, $8.07½@8.10. Ribs, June, $8.00; July, $8.00; September, $8.12½; January, $7.32½. Flax, cash, Northwestern, $1.88; No. 1, $1.88; September, $1.35; October, $1.38¾. MARKET GOSSIP.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 307 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.:

Chicago, June 27.—Wheat—Broomhall cabled that the advance at Liverpool was on strength in Berlin and oversold condition of market with nothing new in regard to the Russian crop situation. Here, there was further free covering of shorts. September wheat sold as high as 67¾c. Crop situation remains unchanged and unfavorable. The Price Current says winter wheat threshing reports are meeting or exceeding expectations and quality exceptionally high. Northwest stocks will show a considerable decrease for the week and a further decrease in the visible is expected. Not much business in the cash market so far reported. Market has had a fair reaction and we see very little that is confidently bullish in the situation.

Corn—Tone of market is quiet and steady and there is not much selling pressure noticeable. Price Current says rain is much needed in southwest and the president of the grain dealers association of Kansas is reported as saying: "It is not possible for Kansas to raise 60 per cent of a crop with the best of conditions from now on." These conditions together with small receipts prevent any material selling pressure. Tone of market steady.

The oat market is quiet and steady and local features are without interest, country still seems bullish on oats and there is fair buying of September for general account. At the decline in cash oats, a better shipping demand has developed.

Provisions are easier. Receipts, hogs, primary markets, 74,000 against 65,000 last year. There is a lull in the speculative buying and local traders have sold the market off. There is some talk of slacking in demand particularly for lard.

ELKS' EXCURSION

On Steamer Peerless Next Tuesday Evening.

The local lodge of Elks is making great preparations to make the excursion on the steamer Peerless next Tuesday evening a fine success. The excursionists will be given a ride of thirty miles down the south shore. The Elks have engaged a band, and there will be dancing and plenty of music. The excursion will be run, rain or shine, the boat leaving the dock at 8 o'clock p. m. The Elks are giving this excursion for the purpose of raising funds to defray the expense of taking a band with them to the national meet at Milwaukee. The organization is among those most liberal in its charitable dealings, and during the institution of the lodge in this city an immense amount of charity work has been done in a quiet, unobtrusive way, of which the general public knows little about. Tickets can be procured from any of the members of the organization for 50 cents each.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

During Early Part of Session Was Nearly Recovered.

Steady Recuperation Under the Lead of Missouri Pacific.

Closing Was Very Dull But Firm at the Rally.

New York, June 27.—The cable brought lower quotations for Americans from London this morning said to be due to further liquidation for Berlin account. Opening prices here sagged in sympathy; Metropolitan street railway fell 2 points. Otherwise declines were fractional. The only notable gains were in Iowa Central of a point, and Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville pfd., of 1¾. Trading was on a small scale. Some further recessions were made in prices of railroad stocks, but the maximum was only ¾ per cent in St. Paul and Kansas & Texas pfd. Buying of usually dormant stocks then became a feature, causing a rise of 3 points in Iowa Central pfd, 2 in Lackawanna and Pullman, and a point in National Biscuit, Chicago Terminal Transfer issues and Wisconsin Central. Prominent stocks then began to improve, St. Paul rallying 1¾ from the low point. The local traction rose 1 to 1¾. Union Pacific got up to yesterday's close. The announcement that the Seventh National bank had closed its doors turned the market weak under liquidation all around. St. Paul dropped 2½ and Manhattan, Sugar and Missouri Pacific over 2 points. Many other stocks lost a point.

Supporting orders were rushed into the market and large sums of call money were loaned at 6 per cent, causing a rebound in prices of a point in many stocks. The recovery was most marked in Manhattan, Missouri Pacific, Sugar and St. Paul. Business became dull again and the tone grew inactive until it was operated by machinery in the form of the tilt or helve hammer. When steam succeeded water as a motive power, a steam cylinder replaced the tripping cam, but the first half of the past century had nearly expired before the original form of this device was at all changed by James Nasmyth's invention of the upright steam hammer. Since then the falling weight of this design of tool has gradually been increased from a few hundred pounds up to 100, and even 125 tons; but excepting the smaller sizes, up to 25 tons, it has since 1839 been superseded by the hydraulic press, which by its slow motion produces a more thorough working of the metal. Presses have grown until the capacity of 14,000 tons was reached in 1893, requiring a 15,000 horse power engine to drive it. Such a tool, with its accompaniment of 200-ton electric cranes for handling the work underneath, is capable of forging ingots over 75 inches in diameter and weighing more than 250,000 pounds. This whole plant, costing over a quarter of a million dollars, was not projected without an adequate understanding that it was to meet the commercial demands of many years to come, and industrial developments, great as these have been, have not as yet called for anything that has tasked its full capacity.

THE FIRST TOOL.

Man's first tool was the uplifted hand grasping a stone, and from this came, after many years, the hammer, says the International Monthly. As heavier blows became necessary, the hammer grew in size until it was operated by machinery in the form of the tilt or helve hammer. When steam succeeded water as a motive power, a steam cylinder replaced the tripping cam, but the first half of the past century had nearly expired before the original form of this device was at all changed by James Nasmyth's invention of the upright steam hammer. Since then the falling weight of this design of tool has gradually been increased from a few hundred pounds up to 100, and even 125 tons; but excepting the smaller sizes, up to 25 tons, it has since 1839 been superseded by the hydraulic press, which by its slow motion produces a more thorough working of the metal. Presses have grown until the capacity of 14,000 tons was reached in 1893, requiring a 15,000 horse power engine to drive it. Such a tool, with its accompaniment of 200-ton electric cranes for handling the work underneath, is capable of forging ingots over 75 inches in diameter and weighing more than 250,000 pounds. This whole plant, costing over a quarter of a million dollars, was not projected without an adequate understanding that it was to meet the commercial demands of many years to come, and industrial developments, great as these have been, have not as yet called for anything that has tasked its full capacity.

SCOOP NET DELIVERY.

Just before a Ward liner leaves her East river pier for Cuba or Mexico a big strapping negro carrying a net attached to a long pole takes up his position alongside the gangplank and nervously looks from those gathered on the wharf to the tourists assembled alongside the steamer's rail, says the New York Press. When the gangplank is hauled to the wharf the negro's eyes roll in every direction, and he fidgets the pole as if he had an awful responsibility upon his brawny shoulders. The net is about the size of one used in crabbing, but the pole is about three times as long.

Sometimes the net and pole are not used at all, and the negro goes away and puts it into a locker when the ship backs into the stream. His face brightens up as he does this. Frequently messengers arrive on the wharf late with bundles, letters or telegrams; or passengers on the ship about to back away suddenly remember something, which they jot down quickly and pass ashore. It is under such emergencies that the negro and his scoop net play their short inning. Quick as the flash of gunpowder he places the package or message in the bottom of the net, and with a deft turn of his wrist pokes the article in question under the nose of his owner.

No other steamship line uses a scoop net in this way, and ordinarily once the gangplank is withdrawn communication between the ship and the shore is closed except to the old-fashioned and seldom successful mode of hurling a letter wrapped up in a bunch of keys aboard, or to the more expensive habit of chasing the craft with a specially chartered tugboat. At best this net plan is a quick move, for scarcely a few minutes mark the removal of the steamer's gangplank and the start of the ship streamward.

"I once passed a pocketbook aboard that a passenger had forgotten," said the knight of the net yesterday. "I learned it had $5000 in it. The wife of the man going away brought it down just as the plank had been pulled in. The ship had begun to go astern, and I tell you them lawn tennis chaps never had to play as fine a game of touch-and-go as I did them. This net delivery is the invention of the stevedore, whose men have had to put valuable papers aboard ship on the fly. It is the only system of its kind in the country, so far as I know. We are very proud of the plan."

NO MORE BIG RANCHES.

Chales S. Goodnight, a pioneer ranchman in the Texas Panhandle a generation ago, arrived in Kansas City recently, says the Kansas City Journal. During his long career he has kept abreast of the constant changes that have been made in ranching. He says this generation has seen the passing of the 1,000,000-acre ranch and that immense tracts in one body have seen their day in Texas. Mr. Goodnight says that ten men with 10,000 acres each can operate more successfully than one man on 1,000,000 acres. Following this theory he began selling off his originally immense ranch into smaller ranches, and now only has 10,000 acres. This is enough, he says, and is a model ranch. On it he has several thousand head of range cattle, some elk, 200 head of buffalo and the largest herd of Persian sheep in America. Recently he commissioned "Buffalo" Jones to go to the Rocky mountains and secure as many mountain sheep as he can. These he will ship to Texas and cross with Persian goats. In this way Mr. Goodnight expects to have one of the most unique and valuable herds in existence.

The Herald's "want" columns continue to grow in volume and in usefulness. This is conclusive evidence where to obtain the best results.

The total sales were 662,500 shares.

BRITISH CONSOLS.

London, June 27.—Consols for money and account 95 3-16.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 27.—Cotton opened firm unchanged to 6 points higher and immediately advanced to a level of 9 to 13 points over yesterday's closing, on general buying. So far as the Texas rains were concerned, private telegrams declared the precipitation was very light and entirely local. Liverpool cables stated that Manchester spinners were in the midst of a large export and domestic trade.

Cotton spot closed quiet; middling uplands, 8⅞; middling gulf, 9⅛; sales, 275 bales. Cotton futures closed steady; July and July, 8.61; August, 7.52; September, 7.46; October, 7.40; November, 7.37; December, 7.40; January and February, 7.43; March, 7.46.

NEWS OF THE LAKES

Cleveland Shipper Has Trouble In Finding a Boat.

Vesselmen Say the One Cargo Was All In Sight.

The Steamer Madagascar Is Aground In Lake St. Clair.

Chicago, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—One shipper who had charge of a cargo he wanted to load by tomorrow night had considerable trouble in finding a boat. This gave the appearance of a better demand but vesselmen claimed it was an illusion, for when that one cargo was taken there was not much else in sight. Rates hung at 1⅜ cents.

ANOTHER BODY FOUND.

Au Sable, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The remains of another victim of the Baltimore disaster came ashore five miles above Oscoda today. The body will be brought here for identification.

MADAGASCAR AGROUND.

Detroit, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The steamer Madagascar is aground in Lake St. Clair. The wrecker Saginaw went to her assistance this morning.

LAKE TRADE SATISFACTORY.

Buffalo, June 27.—The vesselowner is adding to his lead in the business and now begins to feel that the season is his. The 3-cent offer on wheat from Duluth for the fall is said to be sure to be followed by another of 4 cents a month or so later. "The situation is better than it has been before this year or last," said a Buffalo vesselowner, "and the best of it is that this week is the top of the wave. We are sure of the season now." Shippers are trying to make it appear that freights are weak and it is true that coal is still scarce but it is so much more plenty than vessels are that brokers are predicting that the rates will go up very soon. They will ask 50 cents to Lake Michigan right away, unless there is a change for the worse. Vessels were never so scarce. Lumber shippers are asking if it is true that there is no room for tonnage for them. They say that the brokers do not ask a higher rate, they merely say that the boats are all engaged. Receipts of grain are light, but the deficiency is made up by ore.

HAWGOOD OCEAN STEAMERS.

Buffalo, June 27.—The Hawgood steamers that set out for the Pacific coast after trying to do something satisfactory on the Atlantic are in a fair way to get there this season, and it looks as though they would find something to do. But they do not find smooth sailing entirely yet. The Eureka is reported in a partly disabled condition at Buenos Ayres, her heating apparatus having given out, and she will have to make considerable repairs before going on. The Tampico, which started ahead of the Eureka, was lately heard from on the coast of Chili, where she stopped for coal. She was in good condition. It is hardly expected that the lake fleet will again take to salt water until the recollection of the fate of most of the vessels that went there not long ago is out of memory somewhat.

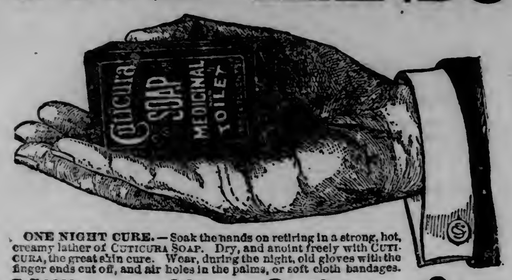
SORE HANDS



ONE NIGHT CURE.—Soak the hands on retiring in a strong, hot, creamy lather of CUTICURA SOAP. Dry, and anoint freely with CUTICURA, the great skin cure. Wear, during the night, old gloves with the finger ends cut off, and air holes in the palms, or soft cloth bandages.

Millions Use Cuticura Soap

Assisted by Cuticura Ointment, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby itchings, rashes, and chafings, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Millions of Women use CUTICURA SOAP in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and excoriations, too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, especially mothers. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used them to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, the BEST skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humour,

Cuticura THE SET Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP, to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle; CUTICURA OINTMENT, to instantly allay itching, inflammation, and irritation, and soothe and heal; and CUTICURA RESOLVENT, to cool and cleanse the blood. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring, itching, burning, and scaly skin, scalp, and blood humours, rashes, and irritations, from infancy to age, with loss of hair, when all else fails.

AT CLOQUET.

Seats at Circus Fell and Several Persons Injured.

Cloquet, Minn., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—An accident happened Tuesday night at the circus performing in this place, resulting in more or less serious injury to several persons. Some one mischievously loosened some of the guy ropes holding down the tent, letting fall one of the upper row of seats resting against them. Among those injured were: Henry Johnson, leg broken; Joseph Prevost, leg badly bruised; a man named Peterson, internally injured, and others whose names are unknown.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Andrews started on a trip yesterday morning. They will visit friends in New York state, and incidentally take in the Buffalo exposition.

Lumber shipments are heavy nowadays. The Northern company alone is putting over 500,000 feet a day on the cars.

John H. Huseby's 13-year-old boy was hooked in the cheek by a vicious cow Tuesday, making an ugly wound.

County Attorney Green was here yesterday on business.

The damage to streets and lots by the recent heavy storms is greater than at first supposed. It will foot up some thousands of dollars.

John F. O'Brien left on a trip eastwards on Tuesday.

Contrary to expectation, the river remained stationary yesterday morning. There is a good driving stage of water and an abundance of logs is insured to last out the season.

E. Dalzell went to St. Paul yesterday on a business trip.

Simon Anderson is ill.

William La Salle went to Eau Claire, Wis., where he was married yesterday.

An outbreak of smallpox is reported at Bloodwood. H. B. Allen was telegraphed for to confer with the authorities there concerning the best measures to stamp the disease out.

FOUR MISSING.

Feared Miners Were Suffocated By Gas.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., June 27.—A large breaker at No. 2 mine of the Delaware & Hudson company, in the eastern part of the city, was destroyed by fire yesterday. The flames communicated to the head house, fan house, and then extended down the shaft. Loss, $10,000. Condy Connor, Jake Bucks, Peter O'Donnell and John Bugdale, who were in the mine when the fire broke out, are missing. It is feared they were suffocated by gas which rapidly accumulated after the fire. Several hundred men escaped safely through another mine.

AT CASS LAKE

Very Attractive Program Being Arranged For the Fourth.

Cass Lake, Minn., June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—The committee from the Commercial club having in charge the Fourth of July celebration have about completed all arrangements, and the indications are that it will be the greatest event in the history of this village. The running team of the Bemidji fire department, which won the championship of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Tournament association at the tournament held at Bemidji last week will be here and give several exhibitions. The Bemidji band, one of the best in the north half of the state, will also participate, and the Bemidji baseball team will "cross bats" with the local club. There will also be a band of Pembina Indians, numbering over 200, who will join the Chippewa Indians in dances and give equestrian exhibitions. A long program of athletic sports and games have been arranged, and the whole will conclude with a display of fireworks.

TO RAISE WAGES.

Hanna's Road Will Reward Old Employes.

Cleveland, June 27.—The Cleveland City Railway company, better known as the Little Consolidated system, of which Senator Hanna is president, announced yesterday that the wages of all conductors and motormen who have been in the service of the company two years or more, will be advanced within a few days. Details have not been made public, but it is said the advance will equal if not exceed the one just granted by the Big Consolidated system, which amounted to about 1 cent an hour.

MINISTERS ANSWER.

No Intention of Questioning Judge's Integrity.

Denver, June 27.—Answers were made yesterday in the district court in reply to affidavits filed recently, charging Rev. W. H. Talmadge, state superintendent of the anti-saloon league; Rev. M. A. Raden, pastor of Grace M. E. church, and Secretary Wynkoop of the Christian Endeavor society, with contempt of court, it being alleged they criticised Judge Palmer for his action in issuing an injunction stopping the forcible closing of certain saloons on Sunday.

The answers declare there was no intention to cast aspersion upon the integrity of Judge Palmer. The cases were continued until Friday.

STRIKE DECLARED OFF.

York, Pa., June 27.—The strike of the union machinists in this city was declared off yesterday afternoon.

THE CRIME OF ROCHA

He Killed Just as an Obedient Dog Might Kill.

Now Unconcerned About the Death That Is Impending.

Smokes Cigarettes In Prison and Makes No Sign.

San Antonio, Tex., June 27.—In the Bexar county jail Juan Rocha, an old man, is waiting for the coming of the day when he must be hanged. He smokes corn-shuck cigarettes incessantly. It makes little difference to him whether he hangs tomorrow or next week, or not at all. He would be far less worried if told that he must die at once than if his jailer would cut off his supply of cigarettes.

Rocha is a remarkable prisoner, and he is condemned for a remarkable crime.

The highest court in Texas has confirmed the judgment of the lower court, imposing the death penalty. The case was appealed as a matter of form, because it is customary down here to appeal all cases involving the death penalty. Rocha would have been well satisfied to accept the verdict of the jury. He has never denied that he committed murder, and he didn't care enough for life to take advantages of technicalities to prolong it. But the lawyer appointed by the court to defend him did the full measure of his duty by carrying the case to the court of criminal appeals, where sentence was affirmed.

Far different is the situation of Mrs. Guadalupe Grimsinger, Rocha's companion in crime. She is serving a life sentence for murder. Young, good looking, intelligent, her punishment is far worse than Rocha's. She has intelligence and moral sense enough to appreciate the enormity of her offense, and she has before her the prospect of a lifetime of remorse behind the bars of the state penitentiary.

Rocha and Mrs. Grimsinger murdered the latter's husband, John Grimsinger. The murder was cold-blooded, deliberate, calmly planned.

There is probably not in the annals of crime a more remarkable instance of dog-like devotion and obedience than this of Juan Rocha. He is a peon, which, among Mexicans, is synonymous with slave. Rocha had been in the service of Mrs. Grimsinger's family all his life. Their word was law to him. He always did what he was told to do. He had nursed their sick and cared for their babies. He had helped bury their dead. Their joys had been his joys, their sorrows his sorrows. They had supplied him with food, drink and clothing. He had labored for them, not for the pennies that they flung to him occasionally, but because he was theirs, body and soul, and he knew nothing outside such a life of slavery. This is the peon, Juan Rocha.

When the pretty Guadalupe Rodriguez became the wife of John Grimsinger, she took with her to her new home the aged peon, Rocha.

He was her man-of-all-work, her slave and her confident. He was like one of her family; he had nursed her when a child, and it was natural that she should tell her secrets to him. At first her confidences were all rosy. She was happy. But as the years went by a note of discord came into the household. It grew louder and stronger until all happiness had been driven out and she was left a miserable woman. It was the old story of conjugal unhappiness. The marriage bonds became chains.

The woman, passionate and self-willed, could not bear to think of the continuance through life of such misery of such an existence. She told Rocha her troubles. At first she merely complained. Then she dropped wishes that she might be freed from her bondage. Then it was a wish that her husband were dead that she uttered in a half whisper. The old peon listened and grieved for her. If his mistress was unhappy he was unhappy. He was ready to do anything that would bring her relief from her misery.

Mrs. Grimsinger knew this. Finally she told Rocha that her husband must be put out of the way. He understood and said, "Si, signora," just as he had done all his life when orders were given. He asked no questions. His mistress had said the word and there was nothing to do but obey her command. It made no difference that obedience meant the taking of human life. He had been taught obedience all his life and he was too old to learn disobedience now.

Her wish having been made known, the sooner it was executed the better. Grimsinger worked at night and slept all day. While they were talking he was sleeping peacefully in the house.

Rocha took a hatchet, and while the woman waited with bated breath he went into the room. She heard the sound of the blows. In a few moments he emerged, the bloody hatchet in his hand. He had done his part, and now she must do what she could to hide the crime. Under her direction Rocha brought out the bloody bedclothing and they tried to wash it.

When it became dark Rocha dressed the body, and flinging it over his shoulder carried it two blocks away and droped it at a street corner.

Then he returned and they coolly set fire to the house, in order to burn up all evidence of the murder. The firemen came and Mrs. Grimsinger greeted them with "I'm glad you came so soon, or I would have been burned out."

She sent a messenger to her husband's place of business to notify him of the fire. The messenger returned with the news that Grimsinger had not been at work that night. Early next morning a man going to work stumbled over his body.

The sheriff and his deputies found in the house the half-burnt remnants of bloody bedclothing and the bloody ax. Mrs. Grimsinger and Rocha were arrested. Rocha confessed his part in the crime to the grand jury, but in his ignorant, blundering way he did all he could to shield Mrs. Grimsinger. The officials knew he was not the prime mover in the crime because they knew he hadn't intelligence enough to plan it. Both were indicted.

Rocha's case excited the sympathy of everyone who knew the circumstances, but there was no pity for Mrs. Grimsinger. But the prejudice in this community against capital punishment for women saved Mrs. Grimsinger's neck. Rocha was given the death penalty.

Since his conviction he has lain in jail, perfectly satisfied with his fate. Death has no terrors for him. All he wants is enough corn-shuck cigarettes and a little chile and bread and to be left undisturbed in the enjoyment of them. When the hangman comes he will say, "Si, signor," take a last puff at a cigarette, toss it away and step out to the gallows with the same stolid manner that he went to the murder of John Grimsinger.

NO HELP

Needed For Those Who Were In Flood Swept District.

Charleston, W. Va., June 27.—Governor White has issued the following:

"To the Public: Advices received from personal representatives sent to Keystone and flooded district in the Flat Top region are to the effect that the loss of life will not exceed fifty, and that there is no distress which cannot be provided for by the home people, and no need of outside help of any kind. The offers of help from all over the country have been generous and are highly appreciated. If it should develop that aid from the outside is needed, I will take occasion to inform the people of West Virginia of that fact. In any event I feel sure that the citizens of this state will be willing and able to supply any aid that may be needed. A. B. WHITE,

"Governor."

TEXAS OIL.

State Has No Interest In Land Sold.

Austin, Tex., June 27.—The Texas supreme court yesterday rendered an important decision affecting the oil industry. The court decided that the state has no interest in mineral lands sold toactual settlers from the school land domain. This settles a controversy started by the discovery of oil at Beaumont and other places in Texas.

YOUNG ARRIVES.

Will Succeed Gen. Shafter at San Francisco.

San Francisco, June 27.—Gen. Samuel B. M. Young, who is to succeed Maj. Gen. Shafter, when he retires from the army in the command of the department of California, has arrived in this city from the East, accompanied by his daughter. He will assume command July 1. Gen. Young's staff will be composed of Capt. H. P. Howard, Thirteenth cavalry, Capt. W. R. Smeddberg late of the Fourth cavalry, and Lieut. James F. McKinley, Sixth cavalry. Lieut. McKinley is a nephew of the president.

ADVANCED RESEARCH

Opportunities In Proposed Washington Memorial Institution.

Committee's Report on Advisability of National University.

Approve a Non-Governmental Establishment at Washington.

Chicago, June 27.—The committee of fifteen, of which President Harper of the Chicago university is chairman, having under consideration the question of whether it is advisable to have a great national university, has completed its work, and July 9 will make its report, which is quite long, announces that at one of its earlier meetings the committee adopted the following declaration:

"It has been and is one of the recognized functions of the federal government to encourage and aid, but not to control the educational instrumentalities of the country. No one of the bills heretofore brought before congress to provide for the incorporation of a national university at Washington commends iself to the judgment of this committee as a practical measure.

"The government is not called upon to maintain at the capital a university in the ordinary sense of the term."

After discussing at length the various questions that enter into the erection of a national educational institution the report says:

"The committee have been advised of a plan for a non-governmental institution at Washington which may be able to supply all that is desired. This plan is the outcome of action taken by the Washington Academy of Sciences and by the George Washington Memorial association.

"Both organizations have agreed to co-operate to found an institution in the city of Washington as a memorial to George Washington, which shall be maintained to promote the advanced study of the sciences and the liberal arts.

"Concerning the proposed institution it is assumed:

"1—That it will be independent of government support or control as it will also be independent of the support or control of existing educational institutions.

"2—That its objects will be:

(A)—To facilitate the use of scientific and other resources of the government for research.

(B)—To co-operate with the universities, colleges and individuals in securing to properly qualified persons opportunities for advanced study and research now obtainable only to a limited extent in Washington and not at all elsewhere.

"3—That its oversight and control will be in the hands of trustees and officers representing the educational experience and ideals of the existing institutions for higher education."

The report announces that the committee in conclusion has adopted a resolution to the effect that a plan is aproved for a non-governmental institution known as the Washington memorial institution, to be maintained at Washington, for the purpose of promoting the study of science and the liberal arts at the national capital and of exercising oversight of the advanced studies of duly qualified students in te governmental laboratories and collections.

NURSES

To Hold International Congress at Buffalo In August.

Washington, June 27.—(Special to The Herald.)—Trained nurses in Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia and elsewhere throughout the country are greatly interested in the international nurses' congress that is to be held in Buffalo Sept. 18, 19 and 20. The program will be a very interesting one and has been arranged by Miss Nutting, of the John Hopkins Training school, of Baltimore. It includes papers and discussions on matters relating to the administration of hospitals, to the training of nurses, to hospital, private and district nursing and to army and navy nursing.

Educational methods will be discussed by Miss Rachel Strong, matron of the Royal infirmary at Glasgow; by Miss Huxley, of Dublin, a sister to the scientist; by Mrs. Hunter Rob, president of the Associated Alumnae of Trained Nurses of the United States; by Miss McMillan, B. A., superintendent of nurses at Lakeside hospital, Cleveland, Ohio, and by Mrs. Dacre Craven, of London, whose services to her profession make her standing second only to that of Florence Nightingale.

In spite of her advanced years—she is 80 now—Florence Nightingale still works for the davancement of her profession and the extension of its usefulness. She will not be able to be present at the convention, but has promised Miss Nutting that she will send a paper on "The Progress of District Nursing."

Others to whom topics on the subject of district nursing have been allotted are Miss Carr, of Baltimore; Miss Fulmer, superintendent of District Nurses of Chicago; Miss Charlotte McLeod, head of the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada, and Miss Wald, of the Nurses' Settlement in New York.

At a symposium on "Opportunities and Responsibilities of the Graduate Nurse of Today," to be held at one of the sessions, a paper on "The Sanitary Inspection of Tenements" will be read by Mrs. Von Wagner, of Yonkers. "The Inspection of Factories" will be discussed by Mrs. Florence Kelly, of New York, and special work of the nurses in connection with the board of health—as inspectors of school children, etc., will be discussed by other speakers, among whom will be Miss Honor Morton, an English nurse and member of the London school board.

Army and navy nursing will be discussed by competent authorities who have served in those fields of work. "Organization and Legislation" will be the subject of an address to be delivered by Mrs. Bedford Fenwick, of London, a woman prominent in the profession in England, and for many years editor of the periodical the Nursing Record and Hospital World.

The administration of hospitals will be considered at the opening session of the convention. Among the speakers on this subject will be Miss Nutting, of Baltimore; Miss Isla Stewert, matron of St. Bartholomew's hospital, London, and Miss Maud Banfield, a graduate of St. Bartholomew's and now superintendent of the Polyclinic hospital at Philadelphia.

Added interest is given to the convention from the fact that it will be the first independent international gathering of the kind in this country. During the World's fair at Chicago, in 1893, at the suggestion of Mrs. Bedford Fenwick, who was then in Chicago attending matters connected with the exhibit from English hospitals, a "nursing section" was added to the hospital and medical congress held that summer, and Miss Isabel Hampton—now Mrs. Hunter Rob—then superintendent of the Johns Hopkins training school for nurses, was appointed chairman of the section.

Up to that time, with the exception of a few scattered alumnae associations, there was a complete lack of organization among the nurse of this country.

As a result of the interest aroused by that convention, the two large and influential organizations—the Association of Superintendents of Hospitals and the Associated Alumnae of Trained Nurses of the United States—which now represent the most advanced and progressive movements in the profession, were established.

The convention at Buffalo will be held under the combined auspices of these two organizations, which has united to invite other nurses from different parts of the country and from abroad to attend the congress.

Besides the delegates from abroad whose names have been mentioned, nurses prominent in their profession in England, Germany, Scotland, Denmark and Australia are expected to be present.

DISAGREE.

There Is No Hope of Verdict From Morrison Jury.

Eldorado, Kan., June 27.—There were no signs of an agreement of the jury in the Jessie Morrison case up to 11 a. m. The jury had argued continuously since 10 a. m. yesterday, and from outside indications was no nearer an agreement than at first. Deliberations continued throughout the night. Meals were served in the jury room, but no accommodations were afforded the jurors in the way of obtaining sleep.

OFFICERS ELECTED

By American Park and Outdoor Art Association.

Milwaukee, June 27.—The American Park and Outdoor Art association today selected Boston as the next place of meeting, and elected these officers:

President, E. J. Parker, Quincy, Ill.; vice presidents, Lewis Johnson, New Orleans; Charles W. Garfield, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Mrs. Herman J. Hall, Chicago; Professor Thomas H. MacBride, Iowa City, Iowa; Lineus Woolverton, Grimsby, Ont.; John C. Olmstead, Brooklyne, Mass.; secretary, Warren H. Hanning, Boston; treasurer, Ossian C. Simmons, Chicago.

At the forenoon session, Christian Wahl, of Milwaukee, read a paper entitled "Park Border Plantation," and J. Woodward Manning, of Boston, delivered a stereopticon lecture on "Forestry For the Park and Roadside."

NO AGREEMENT

Yet Reached on Steel Sheet Wage Scale.

Pittsburg, June 27.—The wage conference of the joint committee of the Amalgamated association and the American Sheet Steel association which began here yesterday, was resumed today, but no agreement has as yet been reached. The sheet scale remains almost precisely the same as last year, with the exception of the non-interruption clause which, it is said, is not satisfactory to the manufacturers.

CORONATION

Quaint Proclamation Read In London.

King Edward Will Be Crowned Next June.

London, June 28.—The royal proclamation announcing that the coronation of King Edward is to take place in June next, the exact day not yet being determined upon, was read this morning at James' Palace, Temple Bar, and the Royal Exchange with all the quaint, medieval scenes which marked the occasion of the proclaiming of the accession of the king. Today's ceremonial was unheralded, so the crush was not so great as on the previous occasion, but crowds quickly gathered from all directions and thronged the points at which the announcement was read. The ceremony began at St. James, where, from the purple draped balcony of the palace, the Norroy king of arms, (William Henry Weldon), in a brilliant uniform, accompanied by the heralds and pursuivants, in gorgeous tabards, and numerous state officials, read the proclamation.

At the appointed hour four state trumpeters, lavishly adorned in gold embroidered tunics, appeared in front of the balcony. By their side stood the Norroy king of arms, flanked by two royal macers, bearing gold maces and surrounded by the Blue mantle (Gordon Ambrose de Lisle Lee), the Rouge dragoon (Everard Green), the Somerset herald (Henry Farnham Burke), the York herald (Alfred Scott-Gatty), and the Windsor herald (William Alexander Lindsay), all in their full official regalia, and the Earl Marshal (the duke of Norfolk), the Lord Steward (the earl of Pembroke), the Lord Chamberlain (the earl of Clarendon), and others.

The trumpeters sounded a protracted fanfare, and then Norroy king of arms bared his head and read the proclamation in a clear voice, whuch must have been audible to the royal party, occupying a stand on the grounds of Marlborough house, facing the balcony of the palace. King Edward wore an admiral's uniform. Queen Alexandra and the others of the royal party watched the ceremonies with the greatest interest, the king using field glasses to obtain a clearer view.

As the Norroy king of arms concluded with the words, "God save the king," the trumpeters again sounded a fanfare, the king in the meantime standing at the salute.

A procession was then formed. Led by a detachment of the Horse guards, five royal carriages, containing the heralds, pursuivants and other officials, proceeded to Temple Bar and the Royal Exchange, where the formalities, less picturesque, perhaps, were repeated.

Lord Mayor Green and the sheriffs met the procession at Temple Bar.

DUKE'S DEBTS HEAVY

Creditors Accept What They Can Get and Manchester Hopes He Will Never See Bankruptcy Court Again.

London, June 28.—The duke of Manchester made today what he hopes will be his last appearance in the bankruptcy court, as his creditors formally accepted the compromise. Although the accounts showed that the unsecured debts amounted to £30,710, the trustees submitted that this sum could be scaled down to £19,714, with assets amounting to £5000. During the course of his final examination today, the duke reiterated that his failure was due to the loss of several thousands of pounds in theatrical speculations, and said he had not gambled.

Miss Portia Knight, the American actress, who has brought suit against the duke of Manchester for breach of promise, had lawyers present at the duke's examination today, but they were not permitted to question the debtor, and, consequently, they were unable to obtain information of much value to their client.

EQUAL TAX ONLY CURE

For the Evils of Monopoly, Declares Mayor Tom L. Johnson of Cleveland at a Social Conference.

Detroit, June 28.—"I am one of those," said Mayor Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, before the second national, social and political conference at its opening session today, "who believe that the greatest evil threatening this country today is monopoly in private hands."

Mr. Johnson thought that the cure for monopoly was equal taxation and said: "The day that the evils of taxation in this country are cured, the day that all classes of men pay the same rate of taxation, is the day that this country will be able to control these monopolies."

There were less than 100 people in Philharmonic hall when President Eltweed Pomeroy of New York, called the conference to order, and introduced Mayor Johnson as chairman of the session.

"The Function of the Church in Furthering Equality," was the first subject on the program and Rev. H. S. Bigelow, of Cincinnati, and Dr. Alex. Kent, of Washington, D. C., presented their views of the question after which it was debated from the floor.

"How to Use the Press," was discussed by James E. Scripps, of Detroit, who frankly admitted he did not know, as did Willis J. Abbott, of Ann Arbor, while George H. Sibley, of Washington, and Charles B. Patterson, editor of the Arena, discussed "How to Use Books and Pamphlets." Discussion of these topics ended the morning session.

ACQUITTED.

Pugilists Not Guilty of Causing Death of Billy Smith.

London, June 28.—The second trial of "Jack" Roberts, the pugilist, and others charged with manslaughter in causing the death of "Billy" Smith (Murray Livingston, of Philadelphia,) as the result of a boxing contest April 22, at the National Sporting club, this city, began today at the Old Bailey court. The jury in the first trial, which was concluded May 15, disagreed and the defendants were bound over to appear at the next session of the court.

The public prosecutor explained that the prosecution was undertaken with a view of stopping future competition of the kind, rather than with the view of punishing the defendants.

Among the witnesses called for the defense was the earl of Lonsdale. He said he had been associated with boxing for twenty-five years. The Queensberry rules, prevailing at the National Sporting club, minimized the danger of boxing contests.

At the close of the testimony, all of the defendants were acquitted.

FORECLOSE.

Decrees Filed Regarding Mills of Flour Milling Company.

New York, June 28.—The Journal of Commerce says: Decrees of foreclosure of the mills of the United States Flour Milling company have now been entered in all states and districts, with the exception of the southern district of New York, where a decree will be entered July 12. It will then be necessary to advertise the sale of the properties so that it will probably be six weeks before the various plants of the old company can be turned over to the Standard Milling company, the successor of the corporation.

In the case of the Hecker-Jones-Jewell Milling company, which is also in the hands of a receiver, a foreclosure will not be necessary, because that company is in a solvent condition, and it is expected that the receiver will be discharged at an early date.

JOCKEY M'DONALD DEAD.

Denver, June 28.—John McDonald, the California jockey, who has ridden for some of the greatest horse owners in the country, is dead in this city of consumption.

FAILURE FOLLOWS

The Firm of Marquand & Co. Makes an Assignment.

Connected With Embarrassment of Seventh National Bank.

Trouble Was Expected and Caused But Little Excitement.

New York, June 28.—The failure of the firm of Henry Marquand & Co., bankers and brokers, the name of which has been connected with the embarrassment of the Seventh National bank, was announced on the stock exchange today. The firm made an assignment to Frank Sullivan Smith. The assignment was without prefences. No statement of assets or liabilities was made with the assignment.

The failure was without appreciable effect on the stock market.

Frank Sullivan Smith, the assignee, reached the office of the firm shortly after 10 o'clock and at once assumed charge. He conferred with the members of the firm and began a systematic investigation of its books and impaired finances. Mr. Smith promised to make public a statement later in the day.

Frank B. Poor, partner in the house of Marquand & Co., said that Mr. Smith was in charge and that he would say nothing about the affairs of the firm. The formal suspension of the firm created scarcely a ripple of excitement. It had been aiticipated, for the events attendant upon the closing of the Seventh National bank had let in strong light upon the affairs of the firm.

During the first fifteen minutes of trading on the stock exchange, the following transactions were made for the account of the suspended firm: 500 shares Pennsylvania, 400 Bergen county gas, 300 American car and foundry and 100 each of Laclede gas preferred, Atchison preferred and Kansas & Texas preferred. Seven thousand dollars par value of Missouri Pacific of 1917 and 400 Iron Mountain 5 per cent bonds were also dealt in for their account. At 10:30 Manager Doherer of the clearing house said all the banks had cleared as usual, and no further trouble is anticipated. Inquiry at the local office of the Pittsburg, Shawmut & Northern railway brought out an assurance that there would be no disastrous consequence as far as the railroad was concerned.

"But did not Marquand & Co. finance the railroad?" was asked.

"Oh, yes," was reply of the official, "but they have the bonds and we have the money."

He added that Marquand & Co. had merely handled the bonds of the road, but did not control it.

Henry W. Taft, of the law firm of Strong & Cadawallader, attorneys for the assignee, made the first statement in behalf of the suspended house. He said:

"I cannot at this time give any figures on the liabilities and assets of Marquand & Co. We have as yet had no time to look over the situation and it will be several days before a clear idea will be obtainable. Much depends upon the disposal of the securities, and particularly the inactive securities, held by the firm. A general view at this time gives a favorable impression, but naturally the great question is as to collateral held by the house on its outstanding loans. I believe the creditors of the firm will fare very well unless there is a slaughtering of some of the firm's securities. I cannot say at this time anything as to the resumption of the firm. That will depend upon developments of the next few days. We will prepare a careful statement as to the affairs of the firm, but I believe it will take a couple of days to do it."

The firm of Henry Marquand & Co. consisted of Henry Marquand, who is the son of Henry G. Marquand, and Frank B. Poor, son of the former president of the National Park bank. The railroad guide shows that Frank S. Smith, the asignee for Marquand & Co., is vice president and general counsel of the Pittsburg, Shawmut & Northern. Henry Marquand is first vice president of the company. The admitted embarrassment of the firm in connection with the Seventh National bank failure resulted in the wholesale calling in of stocks loaned to them for delivery, and they were obliged to bid heavily in the open market to cover. At the same time the actions of the clearing house committee and the controller of the currency put official disapproval on securities in which the firm had large investments, and which figured as part of the collateral in the loan of $1,600,000 from the Seventh National bank, and which caused the suspension of the bank.

The disturbance in the stock market caused by the embarrassment, and which depressed prices, worked to the firm's advantage so far as it showed profits on their contracts, but the blow to their credit deprived them of resources to take advantage of these conditions.

The failure was expected all yesterday and caused no surprise. Yesterday's late rally in the market was attributed to buying for their account to cover short contracts.

EXCESSIVE

Curious Error In Chinese Indemnities.

China to Pay More Than Powers Demand.

Washington, June 28.—A curious discrepancy concerning the amount of the Chinese indemnities has developed, by which it appears that China has agreed pay about 35,000,000 taels, or $24,500,000, more than the united demands of all the powers. Just how this occurred is not clear to officials, but it appears to have been an error of calculation at Pekin, in the first place by those making up the indemnities, and later by the Chinese in their hasty acceptance of the total. As finally made up this total was 450,000,000 taels, but the present calculation, after taking in all the demands that are known, makes the total only 415,000,000 taels. In the meantime China has agreed to pay the larger amount, so that the question now arises, what will become of the excess of 35,000,000 taels?

Another question which has arisen in this connection is as to the amount of bonds which shall be issued to Japan, as that country has drawn attention to the fact that its shares of the indemnity cannot be negotiated on as favorable terms as some of the other powers can make. It is understood that the matter has been considered of sufficient importance to bring to the attention of the president, with a view to learning the general attitude of this government on the matter.

CANAL SHOULD BE BUILT

Western Engineers Secure Data of Proposed New York State Canal and Will Urge Congress to Construct.

New York, June 28.—A special to the Tribune from Albany, N. Y., says: Mr. Bond, state engineer, is authority for the statement that a few days ago he received a visit from two engineers, who brought him a letter of introduction from Mr. Hay, secretary of state. Their names he had forgotten. These gentlemen said the object of their visit was to secure a copy of Mr. Bond's recent elaborate report upon the probable cost of constructing a barge canal across this state, and the statistics bearing upon that subject in his possession. They stated that practically every state in the Northwest was in favor of the construction of a larger canal over this state, for the sake of lowering the cost of the transportation of wheat and other Western products to Eastern markets. The failure of the canal men of this state last winter, however, to come to any agreement upon a plan for canal improvement was discouraging to Western shippers, and therefore they now thought an appeal should be made to congress to improve the canals of New York at the expense of every state in the Union. The Western engineers said that it was known West that a 21-foot canal should be built from Buffalo to Lake Ontario, and then from Oswego on Lake Ontario to the Hudson river. A canal of twenty-one feet in depth would cost about $300,000,000. The United States, the Western engineers said, would have to undertake it. New York state could not be expected alone to accept such a financial scheme. Further, the visitors said that before congress met again, in their belief, the congressmen from the states of Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, South Dakota, Nebraska and North Dakota would come to an agreement upon a policy of canal improvement to be undertaken by the United States government, and that this policy would include a 21-foot canal from Lake Erie to Lake Ontario, and from Lake Ontario to the Hudson river.

MERELY MET BY CHANCE

American Multi-Millionaires Who Are Traveling Together Say They Are Not Concocting Any Shipping or Other Deals.

London, June 28.—J. Pierpont Morgan, W. L. Elkins, P. A. B. Widener and C. A. Griscon and other wealthy Americans, who are to sail for the United States, chartered a special train to take them this morning from London to Southampton, where they boarded the Hamburg-American steamer Deutschland. The special consisted of a saloon carriage, a second-class car for the servants, a baggage car and one of the best engines of the Southwestern road. Among those who gathered to see the party off were Second Secretary of the United States Embassy J. R. Carter and Joseph H. Choate, Jr., the third secretary, and a few English friends of Mr. Dawkins.

Mr. Griscom said to a representative of the Associated Press: "It is quite by accident that we are all together. We are not concocting great shipping deals or deals of other kinds. We thought it would be more comfortable to take a special, and so get a half hour extra in which to breakfast. We are all looking forward to an enjoyable trip."

Mr. Elkins said: "No, we have done no business here, we have had a most pleasant stay. There is really nothing to say."

Others of the party made similar statements, and, judging from the manner in which business topics were tabooed, the millionaire travelers might have been a lot of undergraduates off on a picnic.

At 9:25 a. m., half an hour after the regular train, the special started for Southampton.

Among the other passengers on board the Deutschland are Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Chekil Bey, Mr. and Mrs. John Boyd Thatcher, of Albany, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Spreckles, and Dr. James Worman, United States consul at Munich.

VAIN ATTEMPT OF WIFE

Mrs. Edwin Ruthven Tried to Save Her Husband From Electric Chair By Confessing She Committed the Murder.

Columbus, Ohio, June 28.—Mrs. Edwin Ruthven, wife of the Cleveland murderer, who was put to death in the electric chair early today, made a last effort, early in the evening, to save the life of her husband.

In the presence of Rev. S. A. Langford and others she made a confession that she and not her husband killed Policeman Shipp. Mrs. Ruthven declared that on the night of the murder she and Ruthven quarreled; that she left the house, met Charles Jacobs, a mysterious individual of whom Ruthven frequently spoke, and that he asked for Edwin, saying he had a job on hand. She told him her husband was not at home, but that she would help. She donned her husband's clothing and assisted Jacobs in the burglary. Policeman Shipp appeared and Jacobs fled. She used her revolver and Shipp was killed.

Ruthven, when told of the confession, declared it was not true. Mrs. Ruthven is serving a sentence for receiving stolen property.

FIRST AGAIN.

Hanover, Prussia, June 28.—Fournier was again first to arrive at the end here of the day's stage of the motor race. Dekuyff was second and Gilardot was third. Fournier thus adds to the grand duke of Luxembourg's prize which he won yesterday, the award offered by Hanover for the quickest journey from Paris to Hanover.

CHANGES IN THE WAR REVENUE LAW

After Sunday the New Act Will Be Effective---No More Stamps on Checks, Notes, Telegraph Messages, Etc.

After Sunday the changes in the war revenue act go into effect, and while there are still a large number of special taxes left, they are arranged so that the ordinary run of people will not be affected by them. Everybody who has written checks or sent telegrams or transacted other business on which there was a tax, small but annoying, will breathe a sigh of relief when the day arrives when it will no longer be necessary to have a collection of 1 and 2-cent stamps on hand.

Nearly all of the taxes that the common people will notice most are removed. That odd cent on a telegraph message, which the telegraph people collected for the stamp tax, will not be necessary after Sunday. The 2-cent stamp on checks, certificates of deposit and money orders will be done away with, and a man can make a promissory note without paying a tax. If he makes the note and it is protested there will no longer be a tax on the protest. The tax on insurance premiums has been taken off, as well as the taxes on mortgages, leases, miscellaneous certificates, warehouse receipts, express receipts and the stamp taxes on proprietary medicinal articles. The girl who is given to exercising her maxillary muscles on chewing gum may do so after Sunday without contributing to the expenses of passing liberty to the Filipinos.

The tax on tobaccos in all forms, and on dealers and manufacturers of tobacco are all unchanged, and so are the taxes on theaters, circuses and other amusements. Pawnbrokers, custom house brokers, bankers and owners of stocks and bonds will still have to pay their tax just the same. The tax on beer has been cut, but the tax on wines, tea, bowling alleys and billiard rooms remain the same. The tax on passenger tickets to foreign ports has been reduced, and the tax on commercial brokers, commission houses and vessel agents has been repealed.

There are still taxes, however, and it will be well for everybody that has much business to do to get a copy of the new law, or some digest of it, and study it up. Below will be found a list of the taxes under the new law, showing those that have been repealed.

The tax on conveyances of real estate is an important change. Conveyances below $2500 need no stamps at all, those between $2500 and $3000 call for 25 cents, and 25 cents must be paid for each $500 above that amount. The list follows:

BANKS AND BANKING.

Bank capital, including surplus for previous fiscal year, $25,000 or less	$50 00
For each add. $1000 over $25,000	2 00
Bonds, debentures, certificates of indebtedness, per $100 face value	05

THE DAKOTAS.

Immense Damage Done By Storm In Stutsman County.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Jamestown—Reports slowly coming in from different parts of Stutsman county indicate that the damage done to Jamestown property is but a small fraction of the total damage done to property in Stutsman county by Monday's hail, rain and wind storm. It is estimated that between $60,000 and $70,000 worth of personal property was destroyed by wind and hail and about $75,000 damage done to crops. So far as reported no lives were lost but there were many narrow escapes. Passengers from the north report that a strip of five miles between Buchanan and Parkhurst on the Jamestown & Northern was swept clean of grain and grass. The strip through the country caught by the hail is about five miles wide and forty miles long. Trees near Parkhurst show the fury of the storm, being stripped bare of leavse. A farmer named Vessey, had three quarter section tracts of grain completely ruined. Hail damaged it a great deal and a cloudburst completed the work. The big Craig farm north of Spiritwood is left with scarcely a spear of grain standing. Several buildings on the farm were also destroyed. It being early in the season but little hail insurance was in force and the loss is total in the majority of cases.

Minot—A grand celebration will be held in Minot on July 4. About $80 has been subscribed for attractions. A grand street parade, balloon ascension and a baseball game to decide the championship of Ward county will be among the features. J. S. Murphy will deliver the oration. The city will be handsomely decorated.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Mrs. W. E. Kidd, a member of the woman's board of visitors for charitable and penal institutions, reports having received a letter from Governor Herreid conveying his intention of pardoning the only female inmate of the state penitentiary. The woman was committed by Judge Bennett for adultery, notwithstanding that her husband pleaded for her release.

Bowdle—A disastrous fire was set by a Russian living near Swan Lake a few days since. When asked why he started it, he said he wanted to see if it would burn after all the recent rains. He found it would, for it destroyed about three quarter sections of hay for other people, besides burning up some that was already in the stack. He was arrested.

Ipswich—The county Republican judicial convention met in this city to elect delegates to attend the delegate convention at Faulkton to place in nomination a candidate for judge of the circuit court. The following delegates were elected: M. L. Lightner and George E. Aurand, of Roscoe; J. J. Reese, of Powell; D. W. Lewis, of Mina; C. H. Barron, of Ipswich; Fred Sargent, of Beadle, and F. E. Witter.

Unnecessary Loss of Time.

Mr. W. S. Whedon, cashier of the First National Bank of Winterset, Iowa, in a recent letter, gives some experience with a carpenter in his employ that will be of value to other mechanics. He says: "I had a carpenter working for me who was obliged to stop work on account of being troubled with diarrhoea. I mentioned to him that I had been similarly troubled and that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy had cured me. He bought a bottle of it from the druggist here and informed me that one dose cured him, and he is again at his work." For sale at Boyce's drug store.

HAD TO ADJOURN.

Another Tumult In Spanish Chamber of Deputies.

Madrid, June 28.—The discussions of religious conflicts led to a tumult in the chamber of deputies that the sitting had to be adjourned. Senor Silvela led the debate on government for not preventing creed conflicts but his remarks were drowned in a storm of Republican hisses and protests.

The minister of the interior, Senor Moret, promised to protect Catholic religious demonstrations so long as they were not of a political character.

AGAIN DENIED.

Rome, June 28.—The reported published in Paris that the pope is seriously ill and that Dr. Lapponi, his attending physician, does not leave the pontiff's side, is entirely unfounded. His holiness is in good health and yesterday received in audience the Austrian ambassador to the vatican and a number of other persons.

POSSIBLE LOOPHOLE

City Might Get a Revocable License For Canal Bridge.

Could Then Go After Congress For Permanent Authority.

Steps May Be Taken to Secure This Permission.

The publication of the letter from the war department to Mayor Hugo, in which it was stated by the acting secretary of war that the department could not sanction the aerial bridge project across the ship canal, was a dampener on the scheme, but later today there has been a more optimistic feeling in regard to the situation, and many Duluthians that have read the letter believe they can see a loophole through which the city may yet obtain the end sought, and that there may be little delay in going ahead with the preliminary preparations for the bridge. That the lettre denying the sanction of the department would be received was known to the city authorities a few days before the communication reached the city, and other ways and means of accomplishing that which the war department turned down were discussed.

It is believed that the city may get a revocable license or permit to build, one that would be sufficient to allow the city to go ahead with the proposed work, depending on the action of the next session of congress to either sanction or revoke the proposition. It will be noticed that the acting secretary of war said that:

"In the absence of authority from congress, the secretary of war can have no authority to grant any usufructuary or other interest in the lands of the United States, and any authority that the department could give in this case would only amount to a revocable license, which would hardly be proper to grant in a case where the structure is intended to be permanent."

It is on the revocable license clause in the above paragraph that the city authorities base their belief that the city has still a fair show of getting the bridge started, and that there can be no question as to getting the ultimate consent of congress to permit the bridge to be finished.

Acting on this belief, Mayor Hugo said this afternoon that an effort was being made to get in communication with Congressman Page Morris, after which the wheels will be set in motion for the purpose of getting the temporary permission of the war department for the preliminary steps in the construction of the bridge.

City Engineer Patton said today that he regards the plan as feasible, and that the footing of the pier work could be done this fall; that it would not in any way interfere with the government work, and in case of an adverse decision on the part of congress the ground could be readily filled in.

There are others in the city, however, that take the meaning of the acting secretary of war's letter to be decisive in the refusal to permit the construction of the bridge, their belief being based on the last clause in the paragraph that "it would hardly be proper to grant permission in a case where the structure is intended to be permanent."

Complains of No Rates.

The Herald is in receipt of a letter from a citizen of Eveleth stating that he applied at the railroad office there as to the rates that will be made to Duluth for the Fourth of July and was informed that nothing was known of any, that the agents had not been informed of anything different from the regular rate. It was the understanding that the railroads to the range would make special rates. The matter is evidently one for the committee on transportation to look into.

TO LECTURE.

Miss Good of National Improvement League Here Monday.

Secretary Thomas E. Hill, of the Duluth Improvement association, was in a happy state of mind this afternoon. He received a telegram from Secretary Routzahn, of the National League of Improvement Associations, that Miss Jessie M. Good, national organizer of the association, would arrive in Duluth Sunday and would lecture Monday. Mr. Hill is very busy perfecting arrangements and the place of holding the lecture will be announced tomorrow after Mr. Hill has had an opportunity after Mr. Hill has had an opportunity to arrange for it.

Miss Good will come to Duluth with a stereoptician and views from cities all over the country with which to illustrate her lecture. Friends of the movement for the promotion of civic betterment here in Duluth should, in th opinion of Mr. Hill, at once lend their aid to making the affair a success. It is possible that there will be a rally of the association members and friends of the work a few hours previous to the lecture. The movement towards civic improvement and public beauty has assumed such proportions as to warrant a group of earnest minded men and women in organizing the National League of Improvement Associations, with headquarters at Springfield, Ohio. The national society will give its aid to the Duluth Improvement association. The league aims to secure in every community either affiliation with some existing organization which may undertake the work best suited for local needs, or to form a society for that purpose.

Miss Good is carrying on an improvement campaign in all the large cities of the country. Her visit to Duluth will undoubtedly greatly aid the efforts of the local workers. Mr. Hill and the Duluth association have been congratulated very warmly by the national officers, who were first attracted by the judicious and effective methods adopted by them to improve, beautify and advertise the city.

E. G. Routzahn, of Springfield, Ohio, secretary of the national association, has suggested to Secretary Hill that it would be a good idea for the Duluth society to purchase and preserve the first frame house in the city, which is located on Lake avenue. He thinks it would be a choice place for a collection of local historical objects. The society has as yet made no move in this direction, but the matter is being talked over among the members.

The time and place of Miss Good's illustrated lecture will be announced tomorrow.

SCHEME FALLS THROUGH.

VERDICT SUSTAINED

Supreme Court Gives Decision In Oddie Damage Suit.

Verdict of $2000 Against Street Railway Is Upheld.

Council's Contention In Charter Amendment Case Sustained.

St. Paul, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The supreme court today handed down several decisions. In the case of Lizzie Oddie, respondent, vs. Luther Mendenhall, as receiver of the Duluth Street Railway company, appellant. It is held that the city ordinance prohibiting the leaving of horses unhitched was not violated by Mrs. Oddie's brother when driving with her. The order of the lower court, awarding damages to Mrs. Oddie, is sustained.

In the case of the state, ex rel. Henry F. Greene, contestant, vs. T. W. Hugo, as mayor of Duluth, respondent, the supreme court has decided that under the Duluth charter a majority of three-fifths of the vote cast for the charter amendment is not sufficient. The amendment must have three-fifths of all the votes cast at the election when the question was voted on.

The charter case referred to is the contest which was brought at the time the council declared the amendments to the charter, which were designed to allow the paving of a large part of Superior street, not carried because they had not received three-fifths of all the votes cast. The contention of the council is sustained.

The Oddie case is one in which a verdict of $2000 was returned for the plaintiff.

Trial In McPherson Will Contest Goes On.

New York, June 28.—In the Hudson county orphans court at Jersey City today, counsel for Mrs. Ella Muir, who is contesting the will of her mother, the late widow of Senator John A. McPherson, asked for an adjournment of the hearing set for today, pending decision of a notice of appeal from the order of the court refusing to remove the case to the circuit court where a trial by jury might be held. The request was denied, and witnesses were examined in final proof of the will of Mrs. McPherson.

WISCONSIN CREW

In Fine Condition For Racing Next Week.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., June 28.—Only the Pennsylvania university crews of all those that are to take part in the college rowing regatta here next week went out on the river for work today, the excessive heat influencing the coaches of the other crews to allow their men to rest until evening. The Wisconsin university crew stood the journey East well, and appeared to be in fine condition. They went out for a sail on the tug and exchanged salutations with the Cornellans, who were aboard their launch.

CLERGY HEARD.

Their Case Will Be Decided Next Monday.

Denver, Col., June 28.—Evidence was heard in the district court today in the contempt proceedings against Rev. M. A. Rader and Rev. W. H. Talmage. The principal witnesses were newspaper reporters who had interviewed the ministers concerning the injunctions issued by the court in the saloon cases. Judge Palmer ordered the defendants to appear before him next Monday morning, when it is said, he will announce his decision as to the contempt charges and also as to whether the temporary injunction shall be made permanent.

WILSON'S REPORT

RESUMED.

Discussion of Iron Wage Scale Continued at Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, June 28.—The adjourned conference between the committee of the Amalgamated association and representatives of the Republic Iron and Steel company and the American Steel Hoop company was resumed here today and indications point to the signing of the iron wage scale before the close of the day. At the morning session it was practically agreed to advance the base of the scale from $4.75 to $5, an increase of about 6 per cent. At the present rate for bar iron under the new scale, the puddlers will receive $5.50 a thousand after July 1, an advance of 37 cents and the finishers will get a corresponding increase. If a settlement is effected, all the union rolling mills of the country will continue in operation.

A MOTLEY LOT

Are the Prisoners Arriving at Bermuda.

Hamilton, Bermuda, June 28.—The British transport Armenian having on board the first ship load of Boer prisoners to be quartered on Darrel's and Tucker's island here, arrived in these water today. Only the health officers are allowed to visit the ship at present. It is rumored that there is much sickness on board.

The Armenian had a good passage of eleven days from the island of St. Vincent, with Boer captives. The prisoners seem to be in good spirits, though rather ragged in appearance. There was no case of infectious disease on board and the ship was allowed pratique. The prisoners are a mixed lot of native Dutch and Europeans.

The water supply for the new arrivals is very scarce, as the weather has been exceeding dry and the condensing apparatus for the camps has not yet been erected. It was only received this week from London. The prisoners will not be landed today.

ELECTRIFICATION

Of London Underground Road Causes Trouble.

London, June 28.—The parliamentary committee having the matter in charge was again occupied today, with the question of the electrification of the underground railroads. As the companies are unable to settle their differences as to whether the Yerkes or Ganz systems shall be installed, the committee decided that the board of trade should appoint an arbitrator to determine which system shall be adopted.

RETIRED.

Had Several From Directory of Seventh National Bank.

New York, June 28.—There was no news today in connection with the suspension of the Seventh National bank. The temporary receiver who was in charge said there was nothing to be made public today.

George W. Adams, the cashier of the bank, gave out the following card today:

"Messrs. Erskine, Hewitt, Hugh Kelly and Lorenzo Semple retired as directors of the Seventh National bank in January last, and since that time have had no official connection with the said bank. This statement is made by reason of the publication in various papers that the above named gentlemen were connected with the present management of the bank.

"GEORGE W. ADAMS,
"Cashier."

Assistant Postmaster Jordan said today that the post office was now using the sub-treasury as a temporary place of deposit ,instead of the Seventh National bank and that everything was going along very smoothly. There is a margin of about $50,000, he said, betwen the postal deposits in the bank at the time of the failure, and the $250,000 government bonds put up by the bank as security.

BEES GOT LOOSE.

Put a Stop to Business For a While.

Something less than a million honey bees made life a doubtful pleasure in the neighborhood of the fashionable Kimball house for just about two hours, says the Atlanta (Ga.) correspondent to the St. Louis Republic.

Originally the bees were in a bee gum and the bee gum was in a country wagon. The driver turned to look at a street car and while he was looking the wagon bumped into the curbing and the bee gum was thrown out. It struck the Belgian blocks with a heavy thud, and gave off 10,000 honey bees like an exploding bombshell gives off smoke.

Then there was the dickens to pay.

The bees began to slowly whirl toward Decatur street in a cloud that was as yellow as saffron, as big as a balloon and as noisy as a buzz saw.

The centrifugal force of their circling apparently flung hundreds of stray ones off to the sidewalks and crossings, where they soon began to make life lively for pedestrians.

A baldheaded, clerical looking gentleman crossing the street from the Southern Railway to the Georgia Railroad office was the first of their victims. He, all unconscious of the presence of the insects, uncovered his shining cranium to mop his perspiring brow, and forthwith one of them alighted upon the peak of his skull and plunged his stinger in.

The baldheaded man smote his head with an awful whack and let out a yell that served to warn the entire street and disappeared around the corner, the tails of his Prince Albert streaming out gayly behind him as he went.

A newsboy standing in front of the Kimball, crying papers, received attention next. The boy's mouth was stretched wide with a yell, and a bee darted into the cavern so exposed. As it landed in the interior a yell changed to a scream, and the newsboy turned a flipflap, descended upon and knocked down a severe-faced old lady who was making her way with great dignity toward the depot.

She arose, looked at the boy, and was just about to speak her mind, when one of the insects got behind her ear and hustled her toward her destination at a run.

One casualty followed another in rapid succession, and the yells and panic that followed the casualties emptied the neighboring stores and the Kimball house lobby in a jiffy.

As Chief Clerk Ed Calloway of the Kimball came plunging, hatless, into the street a man in front of the main entrance of a hotel whistled at an acquaintance across the street.

Ed Calloway thought the whistling was an attempt to hive the bees in the Kimball lobby and grabbing the man in the collar, he yelled for a policeman who was standing down in front of Palmer's drug store.

The officer heard the cry and started to respond to it. Before, however, he had covered twenty feet, a bee hit him fairly between the eyes, and he sat down with a thump upon the sidewalk. Then he arose like a jack in the box, reversed his direction, and vanished out Pryor in the direction of the Aragon.

Ed Calloway and the whistler meantime struggled with one another, and there would probably have been a tragedy if a peace-loving bee hadn't seized them, and proceeded to stop the trouble. It lit first on the end of Ed's nose, and then upon the end of the no the whistler.

By that time people had caught on to the difficulty, and having read that the thing to do under such circumstances was to beat tin pans and ring bells, came forth armed with coal scuttles, growlers, tin basins and such things, raising such a racket as Atlanta never heard before and could not again survive.

At the corner of Decatur and Pryor the swarm halted in the air, and the crowd halted upon the pavements—one man rinking a bell that he had frantically grabbed from the hand of a wandering son of Italy, and the others beating upon their coal scuttles and tom-toms of one kind and another.

George W. Allen, of the Atlanta and West Point road made his way through the crowd at this juncture, bearing a jug of sirup. Some of this he poured into a box and put the box in a furniture wagon standing there.

The whistling, the bell ringing, and the tom-tom beating were thereupon renewed with redoubled vigor, and because of it, or despite it, the bees began to circle in thousands above the wagon, while each individual in the crowd proclaimed in shouted tones that his particular method was the one that induced the honey-makers to halt The bees, swarming as they did above Decatur street, blocked that thoroughfare to all save trolley cars. The motormen of these closed their fronts, pulled their collars up around their ears, ducked their heads, and went shooting through the crowds like skyrockets.

After nearly half an hour of confusion most of the bees had settled about Mr. Allen's sirup, and under his direction three stalwart negroes seized the tongue of the wagon that bore the box, and moved off with the insects amid general cheering.

All morning, however, bushwacking bees continued to flit about the scene of the confusion, giving what one man called a correct imitation of "sniping."

AUTOMOBILE GLASSES.

To the various sorts of glasses designed for drivers' use have now been added automobile glasses, especially designed for the use of the automobile driver, says the New York Sun. These are not worn in the city, where, with the restrictions on the speed of automobiles they are not needed; but they are worn in the country, where the automobilist unshackles the machine and let it go at forty or fifty miles an hour, more or less. Going at that speed his eyes need protection; and this is afforded in the automobile glasses.

These glasses are spectacles fitted with very large shell-shaped or convexed glasses, the size and the shape giving a large field of vision. Attached to the frame is a mask that projects high enough above the glasses to cover the forehead of the wearer, up under the peak of the cap, and that extends below the glasses and out at the sides along the spectacle bows, sufficiently to cover the entire fail, front and sides.

For winter wear, when some warmth in it would be desirable, the mask is made of suede leather, lined with silk; for summer use these glasses are made with the mask of unlined silk, either of the gray suede color or of black.

Automobile glasses are a French notion, and originally all those sold here were imported from France. Now they are made here. Lots of them are sold. They cost, according to the material the mask is made of, from $2.50 to $5 a pair.

High Speed Automobile Races Will Not Be Allowed In France.

Paris, June 28.—Automobile accidents yesterday, in the Paris-Berlin race are causing an outcry and Deputy Gauthier brought the matter up in the chamber of deputies today. He asked that measures be taken to stop running automobiles at excessive speed and said, amid loud applause from the rightists, that it was a singular and a saddening idea to organize a race to Berlin, passing through Baselilles and Sedan. The premier, M. Waldeck-Rousseau, replied that the race would not have been authorized if it had only been started for pleasure or sport. Regulations were about to be issued to control the speed of automobiles and henceforth no race would be authorized at a speed exceeding that used in normal traffic. The roads were no longer to be placed at the disposition of automobile drivers. The statement was greeted with cheers.

PARDON REFUSED.

These Men Did Not Have Sufficient Pull.

Washington, June 28.—The president has refused to pardon ex-District Attorney Ellery P. Ingham and ex-Assistant Attorney K. Newitt, of Pennsylvania, who were fined and sentenced to two and a half years' imprisonment for connection with the famous Jacobs' counterfeiting cases in Pennsylvania several years ago.

STABBING AFFRAY.

Wealthy Wisconsin Farmers Cut Each Other.

La Crosse, Wis., June 28.—A special from Cataract, Wis., says that a probable fatal stabbing occurred there last night between two wealthy farmers. Charles Starck stabbed James Church with a jack knife in the groin, and the latter lies at the point of death. The were attending a barn raising, and a quarrel ensued over a wrestling match between the two.

NEW LEASE OF LIFE

Another Ore Find In the Minnesota Mine at Soudan.

Found Beneath the Jasper Ledge at Thirteenth Level.

Said to Be Better Than That In Mine Above.

The Minnesota mine at Tower has a new lease of life and the people of Tower are jubilant, for it also means that the main support of that town is not to be cut off as has been feared for some time. Not only that, but there is good reason to suppose that the mine will be better than ever and will produce more ore and give employment to more men than ever before.

Some time ago the ore deposit of the Minnesota mine at Soudan gave evidence of having reached its limit and the closing down of the mine appeared to be but the matter of a short time. At the thirteenth level, at a depth of 1300 feet, a ledge of jasper was encountered and this gave rise to the belief that the bottom of the ore had been reached. This has been the impression for a couple of years past.

Some time ago, however, Capt. Pengilly, who is in charge of the mine now, put diamond drills at work to pierce the jasper. The result has been the discovery of another bed of ore at the bottom of the old mine that has thus far given every evidence of being of practically equal in extent and as good, if not better, in quality as that which has been taken out from above it. The vein has been cross-cut for a distance of fifty-four feet already and its limit has not yet been reached. The ore seems to dip to the west and toward Vermillion lake and this has given rise to the belief that possibly there is a bed of ore under the lake. It is needless to say that the company will thoroughly explore the new find and that the Minnesota mine will continue to run.

The people of Tower who were despondent over the probable shutting down of the mines have been made very happy by the announcement within the past few days of this new find. It means new life to Tower, for with the Minnesota mine shut down the largest sustaining influence of the town would be cut off.

TRANSFER RUMORED.

Washington, June 28.—The Star this evening gives currency to the report that the Brooklyn baseball team of the National league is to be transferred to this city at an early date.

STARVATION SLOW.

During a prolonged fast the loss of weight is unsually rapid at first, and decreases as the time goes on; death ensues when a certain percentage of the loss has been reached, and this percentage varies according to the original weight. Fat animals may lose half their weight, thinner ones perhaps two-fifths; a man or woman of rather spare build, weighing 143 pounds, might, therefore, lose about 55 pounds before succumbing. Children dies after a fast of from three to five days, during which they have lost a quarter of their weight. Healthy adults, however, have fasted fifty days when water has been taken. A German physitian reports the case of a woman, aged 47 years, who fasted for forty-three days, taking water freely. She lost forty-four pounds out of 143 pounds, and died from exhaustion.

FARO THE FAVORITE.

Gamblers all Have Some System to Break Bank.

If any well-known sporting man was asked, "What is the favorite game among the fraternity?" it is dollars to red apples that he would unhesitatingly answer "Faro." It is to the seasoned gambler what railroad stocks are to Wall street speculators. Sometimes the sports try their luck at roulette or red and black for a brief period, but they eventually return to the standard faro, just as Wall street speculators, who occasionally take a flyer in petroleum, are never seduced for any great length of time from the stock market, says the Philadelphia Times.

The difference between an amateur and a professional at a faro table is that one trusts to luck, while the other plays according to some exact system. The former almost always loses, while the latter occasionally wins. On the surface of a faro table there are thirteen of the spade suit, laid face upward.

The side of the table on which the cards are laid, running from one to six, is where the dealer sits. In front of him is a nickel-plated box containing a full pack of cards. These are drawn out through a slit in the top of the box, which is just large enough to permit the passage of one card at a time. The cards are kept pressed against the upper part of the box by means of a spring at its bottom until the entire deck has been withdrawn.

The cards are laid in the box face upward. No wagers can be made on the top card, which is, of course, visible to everyone. The dealer takes it from the box and lays it aside. The next card he places close against the right-hand side of the box. The third card is then drawn and laid to the right of the preceding one. He repeats this process, dividing the cards into two piles, until the entire pack has become exhausted. The cards are then shuffled and the deal is repeated ad infinitum.

The losing cards are those which fall in the pile next to the box. The winners are therefore contained in the other pile. If a man places a number of chips on one of the thirteen spade cards he wagers a certain amount of money that a corresponding card in the dealer's pack will eventually be placed in the winning pile. If his chips are surmounted by a little black checker, known as a copper, he wagers that the card will fall in the losing pile. As each card is taken from the box it is recorded by a man known as a case-keeper. Players can therefore ascertain at any time during the deal how many cards have been extracted from the box and how many times any card has lost or won.

Professional gamblers always take careful note of the progress of every card. They have various methods of playing, one of the commonest being to play what are called "repeaters." A gambler who follows this method bets that any card which has won or lost will win or lose a second time. This method is directly opposite to what is known as "single out." Backing a certain card according to this system means that it will win and lose or lose and win alternately until all four of its kind have been dealt out.

In "double out" the cards must fall first two losers and then two winners, or vice versa.

When a player adopts the system known as "three on a side" he feels that he has an inspiration that the card he is backing will win three times and lose once or lose three times and win once.

To exemplify the system known as "two in the middle" the first card of a certain denomination must be supposed to fall in the winning pile, the second and third in the losing, while the fourth and last is again placed among the winners. Should the cards be withdrawn exactly reverse to the above order the system would still remain "two in the middle."

"Playing colors" means simply to back the red or black cards of a certain denomination either to win or lose. This method is quite a favorite among the professional gamblers.

Many of the fraternity, when engaged at faro, play "up and down the valley." This method was found years ago by an old gambler, who was always impatient either to win or lose his money.

His way was to bet on the whole board at once, backing all the high cards, from seven to king, to win, and betting that the remaining cards would lose, or reverse this order and place his confidence in the low cards.

There is still another system familiar to knights of the green cloth, which is known as "playing cases." A man who plays cases never bets on a card till there is but one of its denomination left in the box. Gamblers of this kind are unpopular with the dealers for this reason: A split occurs when two like cards are drawn from the dealer's box in rotation—one losing and one winning. A player who has bet on such a card loses half his money. This split is the bank's only percentage, which it, of course, has no chance to obtain from a gambler who plays nothing but cases.

"Playing the high card" is simply to wager that the winning card will be of a higher denomination than the one which loses, or vice versa.

YALE WON 'VARSITY

The Blues Had More Endurance Than the Harvard Boys.

The Last Half Mile Was a Most Magnificent Spectacle.

Honors Were Evenly Divided In the Two Minor Races.

New London, Conn., June 28.—In a race never excelled on the Thames, Yale's 'varsity crew won the great inter-university rowing event of the year, in the last half mile of the 4-mile course yesterday by a scant two lengths. The magnificent contest was witnessed by thousands from observation trains, yachts and point of vantage along the bank.

To Yale also fell the honor of a victory in the freshman race while Harvard takes consolation in the fact that her 'varsity four walked away from the Yale quartet handsomely.

The two minor races, with honors divided, served only to whet the appetites of the spectators. These contests had resulted exactly as the experts had predicted and some 20,000 people were impatient for the supreme event of the regatta. The big race was rowed down stream in the cool of the evening shortly after 7 o'clock. The conditions were fairly favorable. The race was a hard one for Harvard to lose; a magnificent one for the winners. The end found Goodell, the bow oar in the Harvard shell in a state of collapse. It was necessary to lift him from his seat into the launch.

In the Yale shell Stroke Cameron, too, was in distress, but he was able to help himself to the Yale launch. The other oarsmen were all strong and in good condition.

The freshman eights contest was an easy one for the Yale youngsters. Harvard, 1904, being four and a half lengths to the rear. Harvard's four won with marvelous ease by six full lengths.

No records were broken and the time for the 'varsity race was unusually slow, probably because of an unexpectedly low stroke and the cross wind.

The race between the 'varsity eights, the event of the day, was delayed until wind and tide conditions were favorable. It was 6:50 o'clock in the evening when Referee Meikleham caused the whistle on the yacht Nushka to be blown as a signal for the rival eights to prepare. At exactly 7 o'clock the Yale oarsmen launched the shell at Broad View and five minutes later were paddling leisurely to the starting point, half a mile down the river. Harvard was but two minutes behind the Elis and went across the river to the accompaniment of the Harvard band. There was no loss of time and at 7:14 both boats were in position, receiving instructions from the referee, Yale had the east course, while Harvard occupied the west. The pistol was fired at 7:15. It was a start almost on even terms, Harvard possibly having a slight advantage. For three lengths it was stroke for stroke at thirty-six to the minute, Yale then dropped to thirty-five while Harvard went down to 34.

The water was smooth, although there was a light breeze from the southwest. Before ten lengths had been traveled it was evident the race was to be a good one. Harvard had drawn away by a quarter of a length. The eights were rowing as one man. At the half mile it was Harvard by a very narrow margin, a second and a fifth as to time, and still a quarter of a length as to distance. As the first flags of the course were passed, Yale was rowing 35 and Harvard was one point lower. Harvard had settled down into the best work of her races with a beautiful style pull the Cambridge boys sent their shell still further ahead. Yale, too, was rowing magnificently, but at this stage of the race did not display the dash of the Harvard men. Accordingly, at the mile it began to look like Harvard. Her boat was 4 2-5 seconds ahead of Yale at the mile flag, a comfortable length to the good. At this point, however, Yale's spirit began to show itself, and a little more "go" appeared in the New Haven craft. Slowly but surely Yale gained, and, in the next half mile, cut Harvard's lead down to a scant half length. The difference in time was 2 4-5 seconds. Both crews were rowing like clockwork and there was every indication that each eight was able to stay out the entire four miles. Passing the mile and half Yale lowered her stroke and Harvard followed and for the rest of the race, with the exception of beautiful spurts upon occasions, the crews hardly varied from 30 to 31. Yale's pull seemed to be the more telling as the shells approached the navy yard for there was a perceptible gain for the blue, and when the 2-mile flags were passed Yale was leading for the first time in the race. The margin, however, was dangerously narrow. Harvard was one second behind, but in the next half mile she again wrested the lead away from Yale and at the two and half mile Harvard led by just two-fifths of a second.

Those on the official yachts, some of whom were oarsmen of former days, at this juncture began to talk about the race with enthusiasm. Thus far it had been magnificent and the performances of the crews promised a heart breaking finish. The Yale men pulled like giants, but Harvard was working with just as much power and skill. As a result Yale was unable to creep up and Harvard actually drew ahead still further one-fifth of a second, passing the 3-mile station three-fifths of a second ahead. The lead of the crimson oars was to be estimated not in lengths but in mere feet and inches. The shells entered the finishing mile with beautiful water conditions between the long line of yachts, and it remained for this last mile to afford the most spectacular contest seen for many a year.

With guns booming and sirens shrieking the two boats swept down the line, Harvard was still in the van, but Yale was clinging to her close. It was not until the three and a half mile flags were within hailing distance that Chittenden, the Yale Coxswain, called on his men for a mighty effort. Up went the Yale stroke and up crept the Yale shell. Harvard tried to respond and her men answered the call heroically but the sons of Eli tore along in a style that was maddening for Harvard supporters. The three and a half mile point found Yale again in the lead. She was never headed. Indeed with Harvard never letting down for an instant, Yale took on added strength and the Yale men began to steal away by feet. It was nothing but Yale after this and feet became generous proportions of a length. Then it was one length and open water appeared for the first time. It was the old story of a Yale crew with endurance to stay until the last stages of the long journey. Yale's victory was one of a scant two lengths. The time on account of the stroke was slow. The official time was:

	Yale.	Harvard.
Half mile	2:39	2:38 2-5
One mile	5:46	5:42 2-5
One and half mile	8:52 4-5	8:50
Two miles	11:54	11:55
Two and half miles	14:33 2-5	14:34

PANTON & WHITE
THE BIG GLASS BLOCK STORE
DULUTH, MINN.

Every American

From his school days is taught to honor and appreciate the significance of his country's natal day. Next Thursday, Duluth, with the rest of America, celebrates in a seemly style. The Big Store is now in gala dress. Tomorrow we inaugurate a true "celebration" by scheduling an inspiring price-cutting fete. There will be crowds here all day, taxing our utmost capacity. Saturday presents the only opportunity for preparation many of you will have before the Fourth, and tomorrow's sales have a significent meaning. The nature of our offerings will appeal to everyone—compare our prices—the merchandise—the store service—consider that we have a larger and more varied stock than any other store north of the Twin Cities—then you will cease to wonder why more than half of the selling is done at the Glass Block. Open tomorrow till 10 p. m.

QUICK ACT

Of Indiana Man Saved Fast Mail From Destruction.

Knightstown, Ind., June 28.—During storm David Duncan, near Mohawk, saved a fast mail train from what would have been a most disastrous wreck. He was driving along the side of the track and noticed that a freight car had been blown by the gale off the siding onto the main track, and at that time the mail was due. Without a second's hesitation he jumped from his buggy and ran onto the track. During a vivid flash of lightning the engineer saw his signal and the engine was brought to a standstill within a few feet of the freight car. Duncan's presence of mind no doubt saved scores of lives.

HE PROPOSED.

Were Man and Wife When They Returned.

New York, June 28.—Montgomery Gibson, son of former United States Senator Gibson of Louisiana, while out walking with Miss Hazel Frances Losch, in Jersey City, proposed marriage and was accepted. They were made man and wife by a Jersey City justice of the peace, and are now located at No. 20 East One Hundred and Eighteenth street, in a flat.

Young Gibson is a nephew of Justice E. D. White of the United States supreme court. He is part owner of the old Delmonico building, at Twenty-sixth street and Fifth avenue. His bride is the daughter of Mrs. George F. Losch, and is a relative of Justice Harlan of the supreme court.

DREW WAGES

And Savings of Her Husband and Fled.

Wapakoneta, Ohio, June 28.—Walter R. English, of St. Mary's, a soldier of this city during the Spanish-American war, has brought suit for divorce from pretty Daisy B. English. He alleges that in January last she went to his employer and drew his wages and then went to the building and loan association and withdrew a large sum that he had been saving up and left him. Her whereabouts is at present unknown.

POLICEMAN LOCKED UP.

By Burglars Before They Made Their Escape.

New Orleans, June 28—Officer O'Dowd will hereafter look before he leaps. He attempted to arrest two burglars who were robbing a saloon, but was taken prisoner by them. They kept him covered while they smashed in the safe and then locked him up in the place while they escaped. John Heinrich is the name of the saloonist who suffered. He lost a $40 gold watch and $6 in money.

O'Dowd was passing the place at 2 o'clock in the morning when he saw two men at work on a safe. He at once concluded that they were burglars, and went boldly into the saloon to place them under arrest. As soon as he put his foot inside the door they covered the officer with a revolver and threatened to kill him if he moved. O'Dowd stood perfectly quiet while the burglars finished their job and made their escape. They left the officer locked in the saloon.

A SUCCESSFUL BEGGAR.

Had Valises Containing Money and Valuable Jewelry.

Maysville, Ky., June 28.—Thomas Bishop, alias Samuel Fleming, alias George Collins, was arraigned in police court charged with obtaining money under false pretenses, and also with street begging. His case was continued until tomorrow. He is partly blind, and must have been a success at begging, as a search of himself and three valises brought to light money, valuable jewelry and other goods valued at $2000.

In the lot was a watch of unique design and rare make, which he claims he bought of Oskamp, of Cincinnati, paying $500 bill for it. In one valise was found about $200 in gold coin, a hundred bill and fully half a peck of Mexican silver half dimes and dimes.

Bishop admits he is a bigamist. He says he married his first wife at some point in Illinois, and then went to Atlanta and married another girl under the name of Samuel Fleming. The police suspect him of being a crook and are holding him in hopes of being able to make a case against him.

CABLE FLASHES.

Two lives were lost in a drowning accident in a small lake three miles southwest of Waterloo, Neb. The victims were Lee Setter, aged seventeen, and Walter Evans, aged thirty-two. The Setter boy was in bathing and went out beyond his depth. Evans attempted to save him, but both drowned. The bodies were recovered.

B. Shattuck, of Anoka, Minn., on the early morning Omaha passenger train had his pocket picked of $4500 in drafts. A gang of pickpockets has been travelling over the Omaha road from Omaha to the twin cities for two or three weeks.

Jesse Vansecoy and his brother John, aged respectively twenty-six and eleven years, were drowned near Ames, Iowa. The smaller boy got beyond his depth and the older one tried to rescue him. Jessie leaves a wife and child.

Residents of Ashland, Wis., have purchased between 5000 and 6000 acres of very choice timber tributary to the Clatskanie river, about twelve miles south of Astoria, Oregon.

Many people who attended the wedding reception at Mr. N. Blazens at Caledonia, Minn., were seriously poisoned by coffee that had been prepared in a copper boiler. Nearly one hundred persons are still under the doctors care.

A telephone message from Chester Point county sat of Howard county, Ark., states that a destructive fire raged there, destroying more than twenty houses. The records of the court house were saved, although it is not known whether that structure escaped. Loss will exceed $100,000, with insurance light.

George W. Cane, a Chateau county ranchman, had a disagreement with Joe Sheetz, another rancher, at Cleveland, Montana, and opened fire with a six-shooter. Sheetz ran inside a saloon and seizing a shotgun returned the fire with both barrels, literally blowing his assailant to pieces. A coroner's jury exonerated Sheetz.

The executive committee of American Federation of Labor has authorized an assessment of affiliated organizations for the purpose of aiding the striking machinists in their contest for a nine-hour day. A circular letter will be sent out immediately and it is estimated that $50,000 will be secured in response to the first call.

Rev. John Long, colored, while walking one a prominent street of McKimey, Tex., with his wife, almost severed her head with a pocket knife. He then walked down the street whore he was captured after a vicious fight and placed in jail. Long had been to the asylum from which he was released several months ago. The mother of the slain woman witnessed her death.

Three miles	17:52	17:51 3-5
Three and one-half	21:49	21:50
Finish	23:37	23:45

The freshman race and the 4-oared contest preceded the big event of the day. The freshman eights were sent off up the river for their 2-mile row just after 5 o'clock. Yale was at the railroad bridge at 4:45. The Harvard youngsters were five minutes behind. It required nearly fifteen minutes for the crews to take their places in the shells. Yale took the lead at the start and was never headed. The blues led by three-quarters of a length at the half mile, a length and a half at the mile and in the last mile by work superior in every department of rowing easily crossed four and one-half lengths ahead. Time was: Yale, 10:27 4-5; Harvard, 10:48.

From the appearance of the two fours on the water at the end of the freshman race there was never a doubt as to the superiority of the Harvard quartet. Their physique, their stroke, their finish were clearly ahead of Yale's. Harvard occupied the east lane, Yale the west. The race began at 5:40 and Harvard proceeded to take vengeance for the freshman defeat. The crimson oarsmen took the lead at the crack of the pistol and proceeded to make a walkaway of it. At the half Yale was a length behind, rowing a stroke of 34, two points higher than Harvard, the New Haven collegians were unable to remain in the running. Harvard gained so rapidly that the race became uninteresting except for the beautiful work of Harvard. There was trouble in the Yale shell, Thomas at bow and Ramsey at three having rowed themselves out so far as effective work was concerned. Harvard added lengths to her lead and crossed the line 11:49 1-5, six lengths ahead of Yale. The time of Yale was 12:09 1-5.

JACKIES HONOR SCHLEY.

Men Behind the Guns Are With Him.

New York, June 28.—Following on the heels of the announcement that the medals of the Santiago heroes during the Spanish-American war are to bear a likeness of Rear Admiral Sampson comes an honor to Rear Admiral W. S. Schley from the "men behind the guns." While the government has been honoring the one the men who did the fighting have honored the other.

The other night Gloucester Command No. 17, Spanish War Veterans, held a meeting in Brooklyn. The command is composed of the sailors who took part in the engagement which sent Admiral Cervera's string of warships to bear company with the late lamented Mr. McGinty. At this meeting, amid shouts of approval, Admiral Schley was made an honorary member of the command. It was also decided to extend to him an invitation to be present as a guest of honor at a presentation of the command's colors, to be held in Brooklyn in August.

Whether or not the admiral accepts the invitation depends upon the condition of his son, who at present is very ill. But the jackies will do all in their power to have him here. His election as a honorary member of the command is an honor conferred upon but two other men—J. Pierpont Morgan, who gave his yacht Gloucester to the government during the war, and W. R. Hearst, who did a similar act, and offered his services aboard. Whether or not the government honors Schley, the men behind the guns are with him to a man.

MELTING EYES

Made By Mrs. Whitehead at Another Man.

New York, June 28.—Lydell Whitehead tried but failed to get a divorce from his pretty wife, even when he told in court, as he did, that she made "goo-goo eyes" at John Fred Thomas.

When her husband failed Mrs. Whitehead brought suit and asked for a mere trifle of $1000 counsel fees and $150 a week alimony.

Mr. Whitehead, when the case was called for argument before Justice Gaynor in the supreme court, Brooklyn, made a novel suggestion as a compromise. He stated that he was receiving only $5000 a year salary from the Whitehead Construction company, and hence could not pay $7500 annual alimony.

He then submitted photographs of a nice looking cottage at Camelot, N. Y., where he says he is willing to have his wife go and live, and where he will also reside. He added that he wouldn't treat her as he did before he entered his divorce proceedings. Justice Gaynor took the papers, and Mrs. Whitehead will have a chance to consider the matter.

IRISH HOME RULE.

Archbishop Keane Takes a Very Optimistic View.

London, June 28.—Archbishop Keane, who has just arrived here from Ireland, in an interview said:

"England is gradually granting home rule to Ireland. I have just arrived from Ireland, where I performed the pleasant duty of preaching the sermon at the dedication of the cathedral of the diocese where I was born. I met many substantial, thinking Irishmen, and found them all optimistic concerning the final outcome of their struggle for self-government. For a full century England has been making concessions to Ireland, which, when carried to their logical conclusion, will amount to home rule.

"Gladstone prevails in such laws as the 'counties government act.' He prevails in every little victory Irish persistence wrings from British prejudice.

"The whole world knows how stubborn English prejudice is. Yet, after all, Englishmen love fair play. Ultimately they will yield to Ireland everything fair play demands. They will give Ireland a Roman Catholic university. Mr. Balfour has not abandoned his intention to press that bill. His withdrawal of it was a strategical movement, not a confession of defeat.

"Englishmen will continue to liberalize their policy until not only Ireland, but Scotland and Wales also will have their own parliaments. Then these countries, knit together geographically, will be represented in an imperial parliament that shall knit them together politically. The world will see in these islands a second realization of the American system of government. England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, will be federated states of a great self-governing commonwealth."

FOR LOVE OF HIS WIFE.

Why Claude McDowell Deserted From the Army.

Muncie, Ind., June 28.—Claude McDowell, residing at Yorktown, the young soldier who deserted the ranks in the Philippines and escaped to the United States, and who is wanted by the government authorities for deserting the army, represents a walking arsenal. He has grown desperate, and claims that he will never again be taken from her. He was captured once by Marshal Leonard of Yorktown and taken to Fort Thomas barracks, Kentucky, where he escaped after a desperate fight with the guards, and sought his bride. He has become so desperate that, although his whereabouts are known, the officer who effetered his capture refuses to repeat the work.

McDowell married a pretty and prominent young woman a short time previous to joining the army. It is said that his love for her caused him to desert. The sympathy of the majority of his acquaintances, knowing the situation, is with him.

CANNOT GRANT IT

War Department Unable to Sanction Aerial Canal Bridge.

The Structure Would Permanently Occupy Government Property.

Congress Alone Can Give Authority to Do That.

Mayor Hugo has received a communication from the office of the secretary of war, the effect of which means the delay of the construction of the proposed bridge over the ship canal for at least a year, and perhaps longer. The mayor is notified by the department that sanction cannot be given the project. Nothing further can be done regarding the construction of the structure until the passage of a bill through congress giving the necessary authority. The war department holds that it has not the authority to grant permission for the erection of a permanent structure on government property, an opinion to that effect having been handed down by the attorney general.

This is considered a very serious setback to the bridge proposition, all the preliminary steps toward the construction having been made by the commission. Work would probably have commenced next fall. Mayor Hugo has suggested that the only way to evade the delay is to change the plans by placing the piers 100 feet farther back from the canal, which would take them off the government property. This, however, would entail a greater expense, but might be more than justified in the saving in time.

Permission to erect the structure was asked of the war department through the recommendations in a letter from Secretary Root to Congressman Page Morris last February, in which the secretary stated that he believed the war department had full authority to act in the matter.

The letter received by the mayor yesterday was as follows:

"Dear Sir: Replying to your letter of the 20th ultimo, addressed to Capt. D. D. Gaillard, corps of engineers, United States army, submitting for approval on behalf of the city of Duluth plans for a suspended car transfer or aerial ferry over the Duluth canal, on the line of Lake avenue, in said city, I beg to inform you that from a report of the chief of engineers, U. S. A., it appears that the bridge towers and approaches to the proposed structure will occupy about 16,000 square feet of government land. It also appears that this structure is to be of a permanent nature.

"In the absence of authority from congress, the secretary of war can have no authority to grant any usufructuary or other interest in lands of the United States, and any authority that the department could give in this case would only amount to a revocable license, which it would hardly be proper to grant in a case where the structure is intended to be permanent.

"In two cases of a similar nature that were before the department recently, the attorney general held that the secretary of war had no authority to license any structure of a permanent nature.

"In view of the foregoing the department is unable to favorably consider this application.

"WILLIAM CARY SANGER,
"Acting Secretary of War.

"Hon. T. W. Hugo, mayor, city of Duluth, Minn."

The matter will undoubtedly be taken up with congress next winter.

SUSPECTS ARRESTED.

Superior Honeycombe Murder Takes a New Turn.

John Anderson, Mrs. John Anderson and John Byrued will probably have to answer to the charge of murdering Wallace Honeycombe, the Superior man found dead on the sidewalk, near his home, about two weeks ago. The trio, together with Honeycombe's widow, were arraigned in municipal court yesterday, charged by the police with being disorderly persons. The cases were continued until today. District Attorney C Crowhart has entered complaint against the first three named, charging them with murder. The police have been working on the case, securing evidence, but it is not known what proofs of guilt they can produce.

The arrested persons are given an unsavory reputation by the police, and allege that they were either implicated in the murder, or can throw light on the crime, if they choose to do so.

Anderson and the two women were taken to the county jail yesterday, and Byrued was confined at the city bastile.

TO PLAY ASHLAND.

Duluth Fashions to Give Them Two Games.

The Duluth Fashions will go up against the Ashland people for two games Saturday and Sunday. They will leave for Ashland tomorrow morning and will play their first game in the afternoon. Some of the Duluth team men are to be taken along, and a fast game may be expected. Hickey, who will play third base is a Tower man, and is said to be an exceeding fast player. King, behind the bat, is a man who can be depended upon and the rest of the players are able to make the Ashland people hustle. Cummings, the high school wonder, will pitch Saturday afternoon and Staub will do the twirling Sunday. The men going are: Catcher, King; pitchers, Cummings and Staub; first base, Randall; second base, Cheyne; short stop, Shepard; third base, Hickey; right field, Bennett; center field, Lamb; left field, Mullaney.

Going to Buffalo.

It is officially known that the Third regiment of the Minnesota National Guard will go to Buffalo the second week in September. They will only be gone from the state about one week and each company will pay its own expenses amounting to about $20 per man. Company C will be able to pay the expenses from its own treasury as it has plenty of ducats where others will not fare so well. The men will sleep in tents as in camp, and expect to have a fine time as doubtless they will.

NEW FRUITS.

Several Varieties Are Now Appearing In the Market.

There are new faces galore in the Michigan street market, and likewise in the Superior street market. There are currants, red and white, gooseberries, blueberries and melons. The melons include a fine grade of watermelons, which wholesale at 35 to 40 cents each, and retail for something more than that. The musk melons are know as Rockyford melons, and they are selling on Michigan street at $3 per crate. These new fruits are all of very luscious quality, and they are coming in plentifully. Strawberries are decidedly on the wane. There are some of them left at all the shops, but they are not particularly attractive any more, and in a few short days they will have disappeared altogether.

The next appearance on the Michigan street stage will be new apples of this year's vintage, but they will not be very tempting for a time. New apples from Kansas and Missouri are on the Chicago market already, and they will be here in a few days, but advance notices state that they are small and green and rather 'no account,' though they are fresh apples and have their uses. There are still some fine storage apples on the market, and they will be with us until the new crop begins to come in better shape. There is no let-up in the supply of apples. The only difference is that they are more plentiful and better in certain seasons than they are in others.

Spring chickens are firmer than they have been, and their Michigan street price is now 18 to 19 cents. This is due to the fact that the supplies are not coming in as rapidly as they were. Vegetables are generally cheaper all around, the only exception being cabbage, which is more expensive. The Florida celery is out of the market, and the Kalamazoo variety, which is juicy and succulent to the satisfaction of any palate, is in. The price is easy, 35 cents per bunch.

There is little difference now between the prices of old and new potatoes. The old ones are 75 cents a bushel and the new ones $1 to $1.10.

Damaged the Cable.

Yesterday morning some man broke open the cable box across the canal and put a screw in the cable which supplies power to the Park Point electric railway. A short circuit was formed and when the storm came the cable was burned in two. The cars on Park Point did not run until 9 o'clock. Mr. Hartman thinks that it is peculiar that the man was not killed while doing the job.

Sues For a Life.

A suit was filed in the United States court yesterday afternoon, by Mrs. Anna Williams against the Northern Lumber company for the sum of $5000 damages. It is alleged that George Williams, while employed as brakeman on one of the defendant's logging trains, was killed by a log falling off of the train. Mrs. Williams claims that the logs were insecurely fastened on and improperly loaded. N. T. Abbott for the company has filed his answer and denies each and every allegation. R. C. Saunders, of Pine City, is attorney for the plaintiff.

Storm Damaged Motors.

During the storm that raged in Duluth last Monday eight electric motors in large office buildings and mercantile houses were damaged by lightning. It is estimated that the expense of repairs to the motors will be at least $2000, to say nothing of the inconvenience to the occupants of the buildings.

ARE WEDDED.

Marriage of Miss Mary G. Jester and Robert B. Allen.

The marriage of Miss Mary Guss Jester, daughter of Mrs. Helen Cody Wetmore, and Robert Bruce Allen, took place last evening at 6:30 o'clock at Cody View, the home of the bride's mother, on Bay View Heights. It was a delightful home wedding. The house was prettily decorated with ferns, arbor vitae and smilax, with the green relieved by American Beauty roses, peonies and carnations. A large number of friends and relatives were present.

The ceremony was performed in the drawing room and Dr. T. H. Cleland of the First Presbyterian church was the officiating clergyman. The wedding party came down the stairway to the strains of the Lohengrin march played by the Lamners orchestra. O. C. Hartman and W. S. McCormick were the ushers. The bridesmaids were Miss Virgilence Cook, of Newark, N. J., and Miss Rosemary Odell, of Chicago, and the maid of honor, Miss Irma Cody, of New York, a cousin of the bride. The bride walked with George P. Everhart, of Chicago, who in the absence of Col. W. F. Cody, her uncle, gave her away. Dr. Cleland and the groom, with his best man, William H. Thompson, of Pittsburg, awaited the bridal party in the drawing room. During the marriage ceremony the orchestra played Schubert's "Serenade," and at the conclusion the Mendelssohn wedding march.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white silk with lace overdress. The bodice was adorned with rare old lace. She also wore a veil and carried white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Cody, was gowned in liberty silk over yellow, Miss Odell in liberty silk over green and Miss Cook in heliotrope crepe du chien with lace applique.

Following the ceremony, congratulations were extended, and after a brief informal reception Mr. and Mrs. Allen left. They have gone down the lakes to Chicago and next week will be guests at a house party given at Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Everhart. Afterward their trip will be extended farther East.

Following the departure of the bride and groom, refreshments were served. The dining room table was handsomely decorated, the centerpiece being a large basket of American Beauty roses. In charge of the dining room were Mrs. William Hankins and Miss Lydia Poirier, assisted by Miss Mildred Cleland and Miss Lulu Magoffin.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. George P. Everhart, of Chicago; Mrs. George Lytle, of Los Angelos, Cal., sister of Mr. Allen; William H. Thompson and Miss Helen Thompson, of Pittsburg; Mrs. Lewis, sister of Mrs. Wetmore; Mrs. George Meyers, of Dennison, Kan.; Mrs. W. H. Johns and George W. Johns, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bentley and Master Paul Bentley, of Chcago.

TOOK A LONG DROP.

New York Child's Miraculous Escape From Injury.

New York, June 28.—After 9-year-old Mary Houleroyd, of 613 East Fourteenth street, had fallen five stories from the roof of her parents' home, had struck and broken three clothes lines and gone through the roof of a shed in the back yards, she sat up uninjured and scolded the neighbors for having the clothes lines in the way. She had gone to the roof to see her brother operate a "flying machine."

From the fourth story hung a clothes line with a quilt. She struck the quilt and carried it with her to the ground. On the way down she struck two more clothes lines. She shot past the window where her mother lay ill, but made no outcry. She said afterward she did not cry because she did not want to scare her mother. She struck a shed roof and went through it to the ground. Her aunt, who lives on the first floor, ran out as the girl sat up.

"What is the matter?" asked the aunt.

"Nothing, only I fell off the roof. Please don't tell mamma, it might frighten her. I don't see why these people have clothes lines all over the back yard. They hurt me."

FALSE ALARM.

Two Chicago School Teachers Hurried Their Wedding.

Chicago, June 28.—Benjamin E. Page and Miss Grace Rand are teachers in the Lake View high school. Mr. Page is instructor in English and Miss Rand teaches mathematics.

Word was brought to Mr. Page that the school board was debating the question of hercafter requiring all women teachers who marry to immediately resign. His heart fluttered. He sent at once for Miss Rand and told her the terrible news.

Both concluded that they wanted to marry, and both wanted to continue teaching. The only method was obvious. A clergyman was summoned and then, in the presence of only their mothers, they were married.

Rev. J. A. Rondthaler, of the Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony. The following day the couple learned the school board had rejected the propcsed rule.

FOR THE DEFENSE

Testimony of Great Northern Railroad Against Pearson Begun.

Prof. Calvin Opposes Mr. Pearson's Geological Theories.

Attorney O'Brien Evinces Interest In the Professor's Compensation.

The case of Herbert W. Pearson, of Duluth, against the Great Northen railroad, to recover compensation for locating coal lands for the railroad, is still on trial at St. Paul and the defense is now having its innings. Tuesday at the conclusion of the plaintiff's testimony a motion was made by the defendant to dismiss the case on the ground that the testimony did not show a cause of action. This Judge Kelly denied and yesterday the defense had its first witnesses on the stand.

The entire forenoon was devoted to the testimony and cross-examination of Professor Samuel Calvin, of the Iowa geological survey. Professor Calvin's testimony was technical, and was calculated to disprove the truth of the scientific statements made by Pearson. It was impossible. Professor Calvin thought, for any man to determine the thickness or even the existence of coal beds over the area in question without such direct tests as digging in the earth. The professor called up the shades of a million or so of busy centuries to witness against Pearson's geological claims.

"Is there one geological fact in the whole Cottonwood district, according to your observations, that is consistent with the plaintiff's testimony?" asked Cyrus Wellington, attorney for the Great Northen road. The plaintiff's answer, "I do not know of one," concluded his testimony.

Professor Calvin illustrated his statements as to the existence of evidence of vegetation in the strata of rock over the Cottonwood district, by showing fossilized fern fronds, and fossilized shells were shown to prove esturial conditions in the same region. Photographs of strongly marked cliffs, rocks and hills were also exhibited.

In cross-examining the witness, C. D. O'Brien asked him if he had not been employed by the Great Northern road to make these investigations. The witness hesitated a bit in his answer and stated that he had been invited to go over the Cottonwood country by Professor Winchell, of Minnesota. He acknowledged that he had made a longer stay in the vicinity of the coal fields than had Professor Winchell, and that his visit and scientific research had been made partially with a view to giving testimony. Mr. O'Brien took some trouble to ascertain the exact number of hours that Professor Calvin had spent in actual observation in and at a distance from the coal fields, finally computing the time to be about seventeen hours, which had been divided among five different places.

The witness and cross-questioner were at odds for a little while over what constituted a sea level. Professor Calvin finally admitted that the water had stood at a particular level all over the region in question and that the earth was thrust above it by some interior disturbance.

It was a wordy war between the lawyer, who insisted upon a popular application of theories that were in danger of losing by such translation something of their color value, and the professional scientist, who constantly tempted his questioner out of his depth geologically.

In concluding his cross-questioning, Mr. O'Brien asked the witness a direct question as to the amount of the compensation he was receiving for his services. Professor Calvin laughed and answered he did not know.

PAWNEE BILL'S WILD WEST

Great Show Filled With Pleasing Features.

Pawnee Bill's Wild West has never visited Duluth before, but the fine reputation that it has attained in the East and South, where it has been traveling for sixteen years, makes it certain that the people of Duluth will give it a warm welcome next Wednesday, when it will show here. The Pittsburg Dispatch said of it:

"Pawnee Bill's Wild West show pitched its tents on the East Side Thursday, and all day the grounds were swarmed with eager spectators. Both afternoon and evening performances were largely atended, and all were thoroughly pleased with the exhibition. All the different phases of frontier life were portrayed in a realistic and thrilling manner, and for an exhibition of its kind it is the best that ever visited here. The daring riding and feats of horsemanship exhibited by bands of Indians, cowboys and Mexicans was of a high order, and filled the hearts of all with admiration. The boomerang throwing by the Australian bushmen was a novel feature and deserving of special commendation. In short, the entire performance from start to finish was excellent, and held the closest attention of the large audience."

Controls It All.

It is claimed in Superior that the filing of the deeds to bay front property by the Great Northern people is evidence that Mr. Hill now controls all of the bay front land from the East End elevators to the old McCord mill. There are rumors of a new mammoth coal dock and other improvements, but there is nothing definite.

Sale of Lumber.

A report from Ashland says that the Red Cliff Lumber company has sold all of its white pine stock on hand, more than 3,000,000 feet in all, to Eastern buyers, also 1,500,000 feet of unsawed pine stock. The sawed stock is piled on the docks of the company at Red Cliff. It will be shipped from there to Lake Erie ports.

A severe sprain will usually disable the injured person for three or four weeks. Many cases have occurred, however, in which a cure has been effected in less than one week by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. For sale at Boyce's drug store.

AT CASS LAKE

Gun Club Organized---Contract For New Boat House.

Cass Lake, Minn., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Local sportsmen have organized a gun club, with the following members: R. H. Hartley, George Birtch, A. A. Harper, James E. Nelson, William Burse, James Cardle, Charles Tedford, J. T. Gardner, Dr. Hanley, C. M. Taylor, A. S. Williams, Glen Owens, Heber Hartley, L. H. Burns, H. E. Reed, Dr. Stanton, W. Campbell and Walter McDonald. The club has procured grounds on which to hold their weekly shoots, which are located on the allotment north of town. A new Magautrap has also been ordered for the use of the club. There are some very good shots among the members of the club, and it is the intention of the organization to hold a shooting tournament during the month of August.

Cardle & Nelson, representing the Cass Lake Boat company, have let the contract to Otto Johnson, of Duluth, for the erection of a new boat house and dock.

Warren & Fairbanks have decided to erect a 2-story brick block on their lots, corner of Second avenue and Second street, and this week let the contract for the same. It is understood that work on the new block will be commenced at once.

IN THE CHAIR.

Edwin Ruthven Electrocuted In the Ohio State Penitentiary.

Columbus, Ohio, June 28.—Edwin Ruthven, a negro, was electrocuted in the annex at the Ohio state penitentiary at 12:08 a. m. The electrocution was successful in every detail.

The crime for which Ruthven, or Rutheben, as the commitment papers read, was electrocuted, was the murder of Police Officer Shipp in Cleveland on the night of May 6, 1900.

The case has been one of the most stubbornly fought in the criminal annals of Ohio. It is also notable for the sensational features in connection with the arrest, trial and conviction of the condemned man.

Ruthven, who was known as a desperate thief, was wanted by the Cleveland police on suspicion of being implicated in several burglaries. He was detected, as shown by the evidence at his trial, in the act of escaping after having committed a robbery one night. He turned upon the police officer who was in pursuit and killed him with a shot from his revolver. He escaped at the time, but was later apprehended at Indianapolis, after a hand-to-hand fight in which two policemen were wounded.

During the trial in Cleveland he was confined in an iron cage constructed for the occasion in the court room. Despite his reputation as a desperado, he has been a model prisoner during his long confinement in the penitentiary there awaiting the death sentence and has won many friends among the prison officials and visitors.

FOUND HER GUILTY.

Jury Finally Agrees In the Morrison Case.

Eldorado, Kan., June 28.—Jessie Morrison was found guilty of manslaughter in the second degree late yesterday afternoon, for the murder of Mrs. Olin Castle. The penalty is not more than five years or less than three years in the penitentiary. One of Miss Morrison's lawyers immediately filed a notice of appeal. Jessie Morrison was taken to her old cell and locked up. There her father, who had been with her, left her. The jury wrangled for nearly thirty hours over the verdict. It is said that one juryman held out obstinately for acquittal. Last night, while the jury was deliberating, the Eldorado band gave a concert in the city park near the court house, and Olin Castle and Hayward Morrison, Jessie's brother, played instruments side by side.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

A dispatch to the Petit Bleu from Rome announces the pope to be seriously ill and says that Dr. Lapponi, his attending physician, does not leave the pontiff's bed.

The secretary of the Cardenas-Jucaro railroad in Cuba has asked the courts to investigate an alleged shortage of $103,120 in the company's accounts. The directors and employes of the road will be summoned before the court and an examination of the company's accounts will be made.

A proclamation of King Edward announces that his coronation is to take place on a day not yet determined on in June next, and that the ceremonies shall include only such as are traditionally solemnized in Westminster Abbey. This officially excludes the king's champion and numerous ancient usages in connection with the ceremonies.

HARD FIGHT

Expected Between Billy Mason and Dawes.

Rumors That Quay and Platt Will Resign.

Washington, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—The term of Senator Mason of Illinois will expire March 3, 1903. Mr. Mason is going to make a very hard fight to succeed himself. He has already begun his campaign and hopes that he will be able to bring about his re-election.

At the present time there is only one dangerous candidate who will try conclusions with Mr. Mason for his seat in the upper branch of the national congress. This gentleman is Charles G. Dawes, the present comptroller of the currency. Mr. Dawes, as is pretty generally known throughout the country, is a close personal friend of President McKinley, and he also has a good backer in Marcus A. Hanna, of Ohio, the present chairman of the national Republican campaign committee.

It is a well-known fact that Senator Mason is not on good terms with either Maj. McKinley or Senator Hanna. Since coming to the senate, Mr. Mason has often made himself obnoxious to the administration and to the majority of the senators on the Republican side of the chamber. He has pursued a course something similar to that which has made Senator Wellington of Maryland objectionable to the president, to the Republican senators and to the Republican party at large. Senator Wellington, as is well known, has been read out of the Republican party, and at present is not regarded as a member of any political organization. He trained with the Democrats in the last national campaign, and, it is believed, greatly assisted in bringing about the re-election of President McKinley. He has also been instrumental in swinging Maryland back into the Democratic column.

Of course, Senator Mason of Illinois has not taken so radical a course in the senate against the administration's policies as did Wellington. He has, however, made an enemy of the president and Mr. Hanna, and of the majority of his Republican colleagues. It goes without saying, therefore, that he will not have the assistance of this administration in his efforts to bring about his re-election to the senate. On the other hand, it is maintained that President McKinley and his official associates in this administration will, in a quiet way, foster the candidacy of Comptroller Dawes for the senatorship, and this private life of Mr. Mason at the close of practically means the retirement to his present term as senator, March 3, 1903.

As comptroller of the currency it is pretty generally conceded that Charles G. Dawes has made a hit, not only with the president, but with the financiers of the country as well. While it is true that Mr. Dawes did not figure extensively in Illinois politics until Maj. McKinley was elected president, he has developed very rapidly since that time, and during his career in the treasury department he has become quite a noticeable figure in politics, and, it might be said, prominent in financial circles everywhere. Mr. Mason will find in him a foeman worthy of his steel, and the opinion quite generally prevails in Washington, and this is also true in Illinois, that Mr. Dawes will defeat Mr. Mason at Springfield when the legislature chooses Mason's successor in 1903.

* * *

There appears to be some foundation for rumors persistently and frequently put into circulation that Matthew Stanley Quay, United States senator from Pennsylvania, will resign his seat in the upper branch of the national congress within a year.

Pennsylvanians who come to Washington, and who have considerable information about Mr. Quay's personal affairs, say that he only sought election to the senate at the hands of the Pennsylvania legislature at Harrisburg last winter simply to prove to his enemies that he could reach the goal. Having been successful, and being in poor health, he, it is said, has decided to resign, provided he is certain that he can designate his successor in the United States senate.

* * *

It will not surprise people who know Senator Platt of New York very much if that gentleman retires from the senate before the expiration of his present term.

Senator Platt's friends will not admit that he is going to resign, but they concede that Mr. Platt, who is well along in years, is not in the best of health, and would be exceedingly glad if he could find a reasonable excuse for tendering his resignation, still having control of the New York Republican machine without danger to himself or to the Republican party in the Empire state. Information has recently been brought from New York to Washington to the effect that Mr. Platt is seriously considering whether or not he can safely leave the senate, designate his successor, and still control the machine in New York state as a private citizen. It is said that if he discovers he can do this, he will not fill out his present term in the United States senate.

* * *

Former Senator Gorman of Maryland is again actively participating in the politics of that state.

The Democrats of Maryland still recognize in Mr. Gorman a man capable of leading the Democratic party to victory in their state, and have decided to bow to his will in every direction, conceding to him another term in the United States senate, provided he can bring about the election of a Democratic legislature which will select a successor to Senator Wellington, whose term expires March 3, 1903. Mr. Gorman, who is supposed to be spending the summer quietly at his country home near Laurel, Md., is devoting more time than most people think to politics, and under his guiding hand the Democrats of that state believe he will so reorganize the Maryland Democracy that the state will be certain to choose a Democratic legislature in 1903, and this means the election, of course, of a Democrat to the senate in place of Mr. Wellington, who was elected as a Republican.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecast Official.

Chicago, June 28.—For Minnesota: Generally fair except thunderstorms tonight and possibly east portion Saturday. Cooler.

For Wisconsin—Showers and thunderstorms tonight and Saturday. Cooler Saturday afternoon or night.

North and South Dakota—Generally fair tonight and Saturday. Slightly cooler.

Upper lakes—Brisk southerly winds, shifting to westerly on Lakes Michigan and Superior Saturday afternoon. Partly cloudy with severe thundersqualls.

Where Uncle Sam Is Shy.

The German emperor has been expressing optimistic views of German trade, and it must be admitted that his opinion is supported by statistics with respect to South America, where Germany has been making special efforts to extend its commerce. Last year German commerce with the South American states, in both imports and exports, considerably surpassed that of the United States, as the following figures demonstrate: Germany's exports to Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay, Chile, Peru and Venezuela amounted to more than $40,000,000, while those of the United States were less than $33,000,000. Germany's imports from the same states were $111,000,000, while those of the United States were less than $83,000,000. Yet the United States is nearer to the South American states than Germany is in distance; is much closer to them in political sympathies; is a much larger and more populous country, and, finally, has a much larger foreign trade with the world in general. On every one of these grounds this country ought to surpass Germany in South American trade. Although the United States boasts that it is the greatest commercial nation in the world, it sends less than 14 per cent of it exports to its republican neighbors at the south, and less than 3 per cent to the vast and populous lands south of the equator. Great Britain has the larger share of the South American trade, and Germany ranks second in that respect. It surprising that American exporters permit other nations to practically monopolize these markets.

The Ship Subsidy Steal Again.

That the ship subsidy bill will bob up promptly on the reassembling of congress is a foregone conclusion. Mark Hanna was able to secure the insertion in the Ohio Republican platform of a plan favoring his pet measure. The bill did not get through the senate at the last session but the real battle ground where the subsidy question must be fought out is the house, and there it is known that a determined handful of thoroughly well-informed and independent members are ready to antagonize the Hanna-Payne bill with a measure which was framed in the closing hours of the last session. This bill, which has not yet been made public, will be introduced by some Western representative. The distinctive features will be the entire rejection of the speed-basis of subsidy payments and the absolute disbarment of foreign bottoms from participation in the subsidy. The proposed bill provides a ten-years subsidy period, and calls for rigid inspection of vessels enjoying the subsidy. The gradual employment of American sailors is insisted on. During the first three years one-fourth of the crew, the next three years one-third, and the last four years one-half must be Americans. The bill excludes positively al vessels peculiarly constructed for carrying liquid cargo. This is meant to apply to the tank steamers run by the Standard Oil Company. Under the Hanna-Payne bill the Standard Oil vessels could have drawn subsidy. Their tonnage ,aggregated 118,000 tons. All vessels enjoying subsidy are to carry the mails free. Subsidized vessels are also subject to acquisition by the United States government in time of war. These are but a few points of the new bill but they give an idea of what its framers have in view. It is understood that Senator Frye's views have undergone a great change in consequence of the opposition to the Hanna-Payne bill. He will not urge any radical change in the bill but will seek to secure its acceptance by concessions on minor and unimportant points. With the large Republican majority in both branches it may be possible to secure the passage of the measure, but it will be in defiance of public sentiment which is overwhelmingly opposed to the whole scheme of looting the treasury under the guise of encouraging American shipbuilding.

DULUTH WEATHER.

The wet and stormy weather with which Duluth has been visited for some time past has proved to be very disagreeable to most people and has naturally had a depressing effect on several lines of retail business, but it must be regarded as preferable to the extreme heat that has visited other sections of the country.

The people of Duluth have reason to rejoice that they do not live in a city where the mercury rises to from 100 to 110 degrees in the shade, and where warm winds and moisture combine to render the heat extremely oppressive and make life miserable. A little rain and cool weather is certainly far better than such conditions. Business men who find their sales curtailed by the rain may congratulate themselves that they are not doing business in the heat-oppressed cities, where it has been found necessary to totally suspend business for several days at a time while the extremely warm spell prevailed.

The fact is that the Duluth climate, taking the whole year round, is unexcelled, and there are very few places where it is equalled.

In view of the long spell of wet weather, Duluth has reason to expect clear, bright weather during the week of the Fourth, which is much to be desired on account of the extensive preparations being made for the celebration.

DULLNESS IN STOCKS.

This is the dull season in the stock market. There is less activity on the New York stock exchange than for some time past, and the dullness will undoubtedly continue until the end of the hot weather. Since the panic on the exchange in the early part of May, the movement of stocks has been slight. The high-water mark, so far as transactions are concerned, was about the time of the Northern Pacific corner, and that memorable affair brought many of the reckless traders to a realizing sense of the fact that an end had come to the steady advance in prices all along the line.

The general condition of business throughout the country has kept the price of railroad stocks very steady, and when the "community of interest" story has been linked with any particular road the stock of that road has invariably become a favorite with the general public. The industrial stocks have been relegated to the rear to a great extent, and the railroads have had the preference.

The midsummer dullness is now on, and many of the leading brokers are away on vacations, some in Europe and others at watering places in this country. They are taking a rest, having reaped a harvest, and in the fall they will return to Wall street refreshed and ready to present new schemes that will result in an active and exciting market during the fall and early winter.

ENDING THE WAR TAXES.

It is a feeling of extreme satisfaction that comes to many people when they think that on and after next Monday that pesky little 2-cent samp may be left off of checks, and that the telegraph company will no longer hold one up for a penny for a stamp for a message, and that in many other ways the war tax nuisance will be abated. The taxes which have been repealed outright are as follows:

Bank checks, 2 cents; bills of lading for export, 10 cents; bond or obligation by guarntee company, half of one cent on each dollar; certificates of damage, 25 cents; certificates of deposit, 2 cents; certificates not otherwise specified, 10 cents; charter party, $3 to $10; chewing gum, 4 cents each $1; commercial brokers, $20; drafts, sight, 2 cents; express receipts, 1 cent; insurance, life, 8 cents on each $100; marine, inland, fire, ½ cent on each $1; casualty, fidelity and guaranty, ½ cent on each $1; lease, 25 cents to $1; manifest for custom house entry, $1 to $5; mortgage or conveyance in trust, 25 cents for each $1500; order for payment of money on sight or on demand; perfumery and cosmetics, ⅛ cent for each 5 cents; power of attorney to vote, 10 cents; power of attorney to sell, 25 cents; promissory notes, 2 cents for each $100; proprietory medicines, ¼ cent for each 5 cents; protest, 25 cents; telegraph messages, 1 cent; telephone messages, 1 cent; United States money orders, 2 cents for each $100; warehouse receipts, 25 cents.

Regulations have been adopted by the department to govern the redemption of outstanding stamps of various kinds. In the case of rebates on beer, whisky and cigarettes stamps will not be purchased unless preented in quantities of at least $10 worth. Nothing less than $2 worth of stamps will be redeemed. No claims will be allowed unless presented within two years after the purchase of said stamps from the government. These claims must be filed through the various collectors of internal revenue. The government will redeem stamps at their face value if it can be shown that they were purchased without the discount allowed when large quantities were bought.

Those who want to get reimbursed for unused imprinted checks, drafts and other papers must forward all such imprinted instruments to the commissioner of internal revenue at Washington. Under the law and regulations all stamped instruments and all imprinted checks, drafts, etc., presented for the redemption of the stamps thereon, must, when the stamps are redeemed, be retained with the claim; therefore, no such instruments can be returned to the owners thereof. The government has an unlimited fund from which to make these reimbursements, so there need be no fear of the rejection of claims provided they are presented in proper form and within the period stipulated by the law.

THE RUSH OF SETTLERS.

The great interstate movement this year has attracted much attention throughout the country. Railroad men assert that the "home-seekers' excursions," organized by the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific, have been the means of carrying to the country tributary to those roads 60,000 permanent settlers. When the exaggeration of the emigration "boomer" and of the news-gatherer is squeezed out of this assertion, 40,000 would probably be found to be nearer the truth. But 40,000 persons is a very large number to be transplanted, and one's respect for the emigration agent is further increased by the fact that this transfer was accomplished in twelve weeks by means of weekly "excursions" organized after months of hard and skillful work.

The field of the emigration agent lies north of the Ohio river and west of the Alleghanies, and extends as far west as Nebraska. New England is as deaf to the allurements of the emigration man, and apparently as immovable, as its granite hills. New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania are apparently little better, and the South is a particularly poor field. In short, the population of the old Northwest Territory appears to be the most mobile, and it is to that region that the emigration agent confines his attention, and it was in that region that the excursions were organized.

In addition to these special excursions there has been a steady influx of settlers into the Northwest, and Northern Minnesota has been selected by a large number of them as their future home, with the result that the population of the rich territory tributary to Duluth has been largely increased. Even the once despised lands of St. Louis county, once regarded as unfit for agricultural purposes, is being converted into productive farms, and there are now over 4000 farmers in the county, whereas but a few years ago there were none. The discovery that excellent farming lands can be secured at a low price close to a splendid market must result in their rapid settlement and cultivation.

Opinion in Philadelphia is by no means agreed that the failure of the city to receive bids for its $9,000,000 3 per cent loan is due to the low rate of interest. Many people attribute the failure to the scandalous condition of the local government, so strikingly brought to public attention recently. It is certainly true that capital is better employed now than when such cities as Philadelphia had no trouble in selling 2 per cent bonds at par or better, but talk is still on the side of the necessity of making an early reduction of the rate on deposits to 3½ per cent wherever 4 per cent is now paid. There is promise of a general agreement among the banks to go down together to the lower rate. In other words, there has been no improvement to speak of in the earning power of gilt-edged investments. This fact tends to support the theory of rotten government causes for the Philadelphia failure.

Joaquin Miller having seen life in all its forms as poet, prospector, soldier, hermit, scout, recluse, having been the pet of the salons in Paris and London and affiliated with Tennyson and Browning on equal terms, and having officiated as guide through the gorges of the Yukon in Alaska, has now turned up as an oil magnate. Some years ago he bought 700 acres of land in Texas. Now comes the intelligence that his land is in the middle of the oil belt and that he is likely to end his days as a millionaire, being able, so to speak, to fry himself in his own grease.

That the best men of the South deplore the lynching habit is shown by the action of the Alabama constitutional convention in accepting a provision by which any sheriff who gives up a prisoner to a mob will be suspended and rendered subject to impeachment. Ex-Governor Jones delivered a speech in favor of the provision, and carried the delegates with him in a powerful denunciation of the evil.

It must have occurred to the British people by this time that the war in South Africa has now embraced Cape Colony. News is meager and unirustworthy, yet what comes through tells of fresh engagements, and continues to indicate that there is a growing rebellion among the Dutch subjects of the king south of the Orange river.

On Oct. 1, 1896, the first rural delivery route was established. According to a government report there are now no less than 3391 such routes in operation, and applications for 4517 others are at this time on file.

The Sioux City Tribune's "Salad Dressing" man gives this definition of an independent newspaper: "One that makes the machine organs look like 30 cents and feel like a cancelled postage stamp."

A New York janitress is suing an aged man for $1000, which she declares to be the value of two kisses which she alleges he forcibly took from her. He might settle the trouble by returning them.

With Depew and Platt both pulling for Odell, how is Roosevelt going to get the New York delegation? And the Republican party has never yet nominated a New Yorker for president.

There is probably no truth in the story that Senator Tom Platt will resign this year. Mr. Platt resigned once, and it took him twenty years to get into the senate again.

It only costs $1 now to get married in Cuba, Governor General Wood having fixed that as the maximum. It formerly cost $30 or $40, and consequently marriage was unpopular.

Now that a salt trust has been formed, perhaps some one will try to get up a combine that will control the air we breathe.

And now they say that Mark Hanna is a sure-enough candidate for president. Perhaps Mr. Bryan's wish will be gratified.

All the schemes for living on 15 cents a day look to the Topeka State Journal like plans to enable a lot of people to quit work.

Perry Heath's bank has suspended payment, and yet his friend Neely was not connected with the management.

The Pennsylvania legislature has furnished Senator Quay with a whole orchard of plum trees ready for shaking.

The pension commissioner has no fixed term, and Mr. Evans can serve until he dies, resigns or is dismissed.

Quay says he has made his last political fight. Probably because there is nothing left to fight about.

LAUGHING GAS.

Detroit Journal: It shows how inconsistent we are when men's names are all spelled out on wedding cards, but not on divorce summonses.

Pittsburg Chronicle: "Russia," said Bloomfield, "has ever been the friend of the United States."

"Yes," added Bellefield, "that nation has a tariffic affection for us."

Detroit Free Press: "She has had no lasting social advantages, has she?"

"No; they've only been rich nine months."

Boston Transcript: Poet—How much for this prescription?

Apothecary—Two dollars, please.

Poet (soliloquizing as he pays)—And the publishers tell me that poetry is a drug in the market. Oh, that it were.

Philadelphia Press: Mrs. Housekeep—Jane, are the eggs boiling?

Jane (formerly of Boston)—Most assuredly not, madam. Albeit, I believe I may safely say the water is in which they have been immersed.

Washington Star: "I hope to see the time when there is no money in politics," said the ardent youth.

"Well," answered Senator Sorghum, gravely, "when that time comes we'll simply have to go into some other business."

Chicago Record-Herald: "My daughter is going away and I bought her paper novels enough to last through the summer."

"Well?"

"She read them all through before she left town."

Harlem Life: The friend—Her face is her fortune.

The enemy—How interesting! Made it herself, too, didn't she?

Judge: Harold—You shouldn't wait for something to turn up, old chap; you should pitch right in and turn it up yourself.

Rupert—But it's my rich uncle's toes, old chap, that I'm waiting for.

Chicago Tribune: Ascum—He said he saw you in a store the other day looking at trousers.

Cholly—Twousers! the idea! Why, I never look at anything but twouserings. Twousers are all ready-made, ye know.

Detroit Journal: "There are others!" faltered the Chicago man, with infinite pathos.

Pressing about him, his neighbors anxiously besought him to tell them how he knew this.

"They put me on at Buffalo!" exclaimed he, and burst into tears.

They wept with him. The fierce civil pride that burned in their bosoms left them no alternative.

Nothing Is Gained Without Grit.

There's nothing that's gained without grit—
Remember that always, my lad—
Ambition will solemnly sit,
And energy, mayhap, go mad.
Unless grit will push them along
To the goal where success reigns supreme
Your life's but a somnolent song,
Your struggle a wearisome dream.

Ah, then, if the nail you would hit,
Be sure that you do it with grit;
For, until you do,
You will find it quite true
That nothing is gained without grit,
My lad—
That nothing is gained without grit.

You struggle until you are old,
Then say, with a sigh, "Nothing won,
Oh, why didn't some one take hold
And drive me till something was done?"
Why didn't you know how to grasp
The value of each flitting day,
And nip at old Idleness clasp
You tight in his meshes, and say:

"Ah, lad, you can't win on your wit,
It takes bits of courage and grit—
You may conquer a place
Near the first in the race—
But nothing is gained without grit,
My lad—
No, nothing is gained without grit."

ROBERT GRAY in Success.

Conditional Life Insurance.

Buffalo Express: An important decision by the United States district court in Iowa in an insurance case has escaped much public attention. Some life insurance policies contain an anti-suicide clause, rendering the contract void whether the person of the second part is sane or insane when he committs suicide. The court holds that this agreement is without effect, as it is not possible for a sane man to agree not to do certain things if he becomes insane. This is good sense and ought to be good law.

Trouble For the Trusts.

Chicago News: Since the department of justice at Washington is reported to be preparing to hand some trouble to anybody who may have violated the anti-trust law, it is probable that the trusts would be seriously alarmed if they were not all so innocent.

If the Victims Were Whites.

Buffalo Express: In consequence of a decision of the United States supreme court, about 200 Mission Indians in Southern California must be dispossessed of lands which they have occupied and tilled for many years. Civilized white men would be likely to go on the warpath over such treatment.

Another Shrinking Trust.

United States Investor: The reduction in the dividend of the United Fruit company is another instance of how the modern industrial trust works. This particular combine was organized on as conservative a basis as any of the trusts. Indeed, it may be said to have been floated very much more in accord with the soundest business principles than was the case with the larger part of the consolidations of the last few years. As compared with other corporations of this character it was very legitimately capitalized; it was managed with prudence and foresight; it did not begin to pay out all that it earned in the shape of dividends. And yet it has recently reduced its dividend rate from 10 per cent to 6 per cent, and its shares, which in March, were quoted as high as 137, fell on Wednesday of this week to 96.

Luck Chasing the Strenuous.

Minneapolis Times: Strange are the vicissitudes of life. Only a week or two ago Mrs. Lease filed a petition in bankruptcy and now she has gone to England to claim her share of a large fortune. Meanwhile Mr. Lease is industriously releasing the imprisoned fizz from the marble soda fountain and throwing in a stick when the proper wink is given by the proper party.

Expansion of the Lobby.

Philadelphia Ledger: Since we began to exploit our extension policy we have learned more thoroughly than ever the importance of the lobby as a legislative factor. The sugar and oil interests are openly charged with having instigated our present tariff troubles with Russia and Italy and now we are told that the tobacco interests are working strenuously to prevent the extension of United States trade rights to Porto Rico. Isn't it about time for the administration and congress to pay more attention to the interests of the people at large, leaving the well protected trusts to take care of themselves?

Has One All to Himself.

Kansas City Star: J. Pierpont Morgan has wandered about considerably, but he can hardly be called "a man without a country."

Expert Testimony.

Washington Post: Mr. Breckinridge says Bryanism is dead. And Mr. Breckinridge ought to be quite an expert on dead ones.

DAILY STORY.

JIM'S METAMORPHOSIS

BY EDGAR S. BRADLEY.

Author of "A Wail In a Storm."

(Copyright, 1901, William R. Miller.)

"No, Jim, maw'll never let me marry you, wi' them city airs o' yourn. Besides, I'm only a wild prairie gal and would only make a fool outen you wharever we went."

The pretty brown head turned from the lover's shoulder and the sun-kissed hand surreptitiously wiped away a tear that was stealing down the full tanned cheek of this "rose of the prairies." Clasping her passionately in his arms, Jim cried:

"Margie, my Margie, will you let me try to win your mother over to us? Will you not say to me that if she consents you will wed me; or, if she will not, that you will come away with me and be my wife?"

"Sh-h, Jim. You are a-wrongin' me. Never would I run away from maw. She has been too good to me sence paw died. But ef you will go on thisaway, go an' ask her. But, oh Jim! I know what she'll say and then it must all end; it must all end."

Tears, now uncheeked, coursed down her cheeks and she leaned despondently to the side of the old, weather-beaten sod house, used as an office for the ranch, and gave full vent to her grief.

When a girl, reared on the broad prairies, breathing the spirit of their savagery with the healthful ozone and the exquisite perfumes of their wild grasses, gives her heart to a man, it is like the opening petals of a flower, expanding with its growth and exhaling the fragrance of its purity with every caress of the restless winds. Her whole nature yields to the revelry of affection's happiness and her life is wreathed with a joy which, once broken, can never be restored.

Margie was the daughter of a rancher, raised in childhood in the low thatch-covered sod house against which she was leaning, and in later years in the comfortable building of logs situated in the center of the "windbreak," as the squarely set rows of planted trees are called, on a knoll which formed one of the foothills of the Big Horn range, in Northern Wyoming. Her mother, though a child of the East, refined and cultured, had laid aside all remembrances of her past life in the duty of assisting her husband to make a new home, and after his death to raise her beautiful daughter as a child of the prairies. It was the dislike of Eastern styles and mannerisms which Western air inculcates that caused her to set her face sternly against any suitor for Margie's hand who did not bear the appearance of a Western man.

Jim had come to the "B. Z." ranch two months previously as the agent of a large syndicate, to look over an immense property it was seeking to purchase. He met Margie and her artless and innocent ways had enthralled him at the first glance. It was thus that he remained beyond the time allotted to him and became more enamored with each day's meetings with the girl.

As for herself, Margie had grown to watch longingly for the sight of Jim's broncho coming over the edge of the old buffalo wallow from the range, or to listen at evening for the trippety-pat, trippety-pat of the unshod hoofs on the hard sod of the prairie. She also loved and it was with the most intense anxiety that she awaited Jim's return, for he had bounded away toward the house as soon as she gave her consent for him to apply to her mother for permission to marry him.

She had not long to wait. A few moments and his stumbling, dejected form appeared. hTe dump agony in his eyes as he raised them to hers well nigh destroyed her fortitude, but she bravely conjured a smile of farewell, as unspeaking, he slowly clambered into the saddle. No need existed for words, and with only a parting wave of his hand he spurred the little cow pony animal and in a mad gallop sank away into the foothills.

Two years passed away, and the dull, heavy pain which succeeded to Margie's wild outpourring of grief after he had departed was not yet gone. No word came to her from him, and she grew to believe that he had forgotten her, yet a dim hope would arise that some day he would return.

Mrs. Manchester vainly pressed her daughter to accept the attentions of the many neighboring ranchmen, who would have bestowed their all upon Margie for a welcoming smile, but Margie softly turned away from all attempts at persuasion and pursued the course of her duties.

One day a stranger called at the ranch during Margie's temporary absence and applied for a position to Margie's mother. To Mrs. Manchester he appeared to be every inch a man of the prairies. He was tall, straight as the barrel of his short, glistening rifle; his long, unkept yellow hair dangled across his shoulders and caught the end of a firm, twirling mustache, and roving blue eyes denoted a spirit which, while jovial, could be roused quickly into impetuous anger. His long, well-shaped legs hung lankily along the sides of his grimy broncho and kept time to the slow monotone of his conversation, which indicated the habitually exclusive life of the Western herder. Mrs. Manchester was so favorably impressed with his appearance that she employed him forthwith and ordered him to the cowpunchers' camp among the foothills.

A night or two following had been set apart as a holiday to mark the arrival of Margie's twentieth birthday. Late in the afternoon the herders, or cowboys, as the yare commonly called, gathered on the wide stretch of prairie before the ranch house and began the frolicking in which cowboys love to indulge. Margie and her mother sat on the wide, rude porch, to watch the caperings and laughed and applauded heartily at the rough sports, wrestling, boxing, larit-throwing and riding "bucking" bronchos, mixed with rifle and revolver practice and the fire of rugged jokes which was kept running.

As the frolics were about to be closed, the stranger, who had led the others in all feats of strength and agility, walked carelessly up to the porch, leading a handsome stallion, which had been tethered at one side awaiting to carry his prize to the camp. As he was passing master to the camp. As he was passing Mrs. Winchester stopped him to compliment him upon his cleverness, and as she did so, Maggie arose suddenly and stammered something unintelligable to her mother. Instinctively she advanced to the step, when the stranger, with lightning-like quickness, sprang into the saddle, reached over, and, with a sweep of his powerful arm, lifted Margie to the saddle horn.

His horse, maddened by the sharp prodding of the spurs, sprang into the midst of the herd of bronchos which had been used during the sports, and they were sent scurrying in all directions by the shout of Margie's captor and the wild waving of his arm.

The herders, stupefied by the suddenness of the occurrence, were incapable of motion for a moment and when they did recover from their surprise Margie's form was between them and her captor and her body would have been the mark for the bullets of the revolvers which were drawn from their belts.

It was several moments before other horses could be obtained from the corral at the rear of the house, and then Margie and her kidnapper were lost to sight among the foothills and the blackness of the night.

Pursuit until morning was useless. In the numberless canons winding in and out among the foothills a fugitive would have a thousad chances of doubling upon pursuers. Sadly the men returned to their camp, while Mrs. Manchester was carried into the house almost prostrated with grief.

Hardly had the last herder disappeared in the direction of the camp when Mrs. Manchester was aroused by the clatter of a horse's hoofs rapidly approaching the house. Wild with anxiety, she sprang toward the door just as the sound of two persons springing to the porch was heard. The door flew open and a second later Margie was clasped in her mother's arms, tears of happiness being brushed aside by the same hand which caressingly patted her mother's face.

"Oh! maw, it's Jim—it's Jim. Don't you know him?"

And then Jim's cheery voice rang out: "Yes, mother; it's Jim. I've come to claim my bride. I'm a Western man now, don't you think?"

And Margie whispered in her mother's ear: "Yes, maw; Jim is a Western man now, isn't he?"

Mrs. Manchester's sine qua non was met, and she could no longer resist Jim's joyous impetuosity and Margie's shy, pleading manner.

INASMUCH.

Wild tempest swirled on Moscow's castled height;
Wild sleet shot slanting down the wind of night;
Quick snarling mouths from out the darkness sprang
To strike you in the face with tooth and fang.
Javelins of ice hung on the roofs of all;
The very stones were aching in the wall.
Where Ivan stood, a watchman on his hour,
Guarding the kremlin by the northern tower,
When lo! a half-bare beggar trotted past,
Shrunk up and stiffened in the bitter blast.
A heap of misery, he drifted by,
And from the heap came out a broken cry.

At this the watchman straightened with a start;
An old dear sorrow rushed upon his heart.
The thought of his dead father, bent and old,
And lying lonesome in the ground so cold.
Then quick the watchman cried out at his post,
"Little father, this is yours; you need it most!"
And tearing off his hairy coat he ran
And wrapped it warmly round the beggarman.

That night the piling snows began to fall,
And the good watchman died beside the wall.
And waking in that better land that lies
Under the greater stars that are God's eyes,
Behold! the Lord came out to greet him home
Wearing the coat he gave by Moscow's dome—
Wearing his coat, the very coat he gave
By Moscow's tower before he felt the grave!

And Ivan by the old earth-memory stirred,
Cried softly with a wonder in his word,
"And where, dear Lord, found you this coat of mine,
A thing unfit for glory such as thine?"
Then the Lord answered, with a look of light,
"This coat, my son, you gave to me last night."

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A woman is "sweetly reasonable" when she is reasonably sweet.

Love your neighbor and do good to them that tell your wife what their husbands have told them about you.

It is one of the ironies of life that a woman never has enough faith in her husband till she has too much.

When Eve bit into the apple she probably told the snake that she was tired of forever taking her husband's advice.

As far as appearances go, a woman will act more comfortably while her heart is bleeding than she does when she has a hang-nail.

The first two months a man would take the baby up in the garret and hide it if he thought his wife or the nurse wouldn't catch him at it.

Thoughts By Pease.

Anoka Union (Rep.): Will the Eighth congressional district be Republican next year? That depends.

A new senate is to be elected in Minnesota next year, and you can bet there will be no new apportionment of legislative districts, yet the increase of population demands it. The northern part of the state does not begin to have its proportion of representation.

At the late election Peacock Van Sant's majority was 2254, Smith's, 43,084; Hanson's, 53,091; Block's, 52,733; Douglas', 56,645. Nice showing the head of the ticket made; more than 40,000 behind the lowest, and 51,000 behind the highest. Can the Republican party afford to try so weak a leader again? Decidedly not.

Now, Who Can Doubt Him?

Philadelphia Bulletin: Mark Hanna's complimentary reference to Senator Forakcr before the Cleveland Republican convention apparently disposes of the theory that the junior Ohio senator was hostile to the re-election of his colleague.

MAKES NEGROES WHITE.

Wonderful Discovery By a Kansas Professor.

Denver, Col., June 28.—Since their emancipation it has been the dream of the black race that they might change their color, and it appears that their dream will be realized. Professor Johnston of the University of Kansas, who is here, has discovered the means by which he expects to make the negro white.

Professor Johnston's method consists of inoculating the negro with leucite, a harmless mineral which is found in the system of those strange oddities of nature known as albinos. Professor Johnston has discovered that albinism is the result of a disease. The white blood is a disease, or leucitis. Leucitis does not affect the general health.

Transmitted to a white-skinned person, leucitis checks the deposition of dark pigmentary matter in the cuticle, and gives to the skin a pale and sickly hue. Upon the skin of the negro it operates with great difficulty, and, while a colorless skin is the result of its work in a light-skinned person, its effect upon the negro is to bleach the skin only to a healthy flesh color.

The professor recently worked his discovery upon a negro with success. The negro's eyes did not change color, and, although his skin bleached, it did not assume the pale color of the albino. Professor Johnston is confident that this discovery will work wonders in the scientific world.

Mr. James Brown, of Putsmouth, Va., over 90 years of age suffered from a bad sore on his face. Physicians could not help him. DeWitt's Witch Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Max Wirth.

Penmanship!

We teach a plain, rapid, legible style of penmanship—just what the business world demands. Without a graceful, rapid handwriting it is almost impossible for a young person to procure clerical employment today. The improvement made by many of our students in this branch alone is well worth the time and money spent for the entire course. We have several special teachers of penmanship in our faculty, all of whom are fine penman and thorough painstaking instructors—hence results are always satisfactory.

The following specimens show that a few months spent at our college has made rapid, muscular movement writers out of these slow, cramped finger movement writers.

No Summer Vacation

Our school will be in session throughout the entire summer. Commercial, Stenographic, English and Penmanship courses taught by a full staff of experienced teachers.

Students may take either the business or shorthand course, or combine the two. The English course may be taken as a preparatory course to either, or students may select any branch or branches they wish from one or more of the courses.

To Former Students:

As we are constantly receiving calls for experienced stenographers and accountants, we suggest that you file your application at the college office if you are out of employment or desire to make a change, and we shall gladly render you any assistance we can.

SEEKING OIL

Results of Boring In the Ottawa Valley.

Making Macaroni From American Wheat.

Washington, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Consul General Turner, at Ottawa, reports: For several years there has been discussion of work done in the vicinity of Ottawa in the discovery of oil and gas. Some thirteen years ago Ottawa was startled somewhat by the supposed discovery of petroleum at Ramsay's Corner, ten miles from this city. One John Cunningham brought a bottle of tarry matter with a strong odor of petroleum, which he claimed to have found on his father's farm. A sample sent to an assay office in New York and the report came back that it was petroleum, a fine specimen of condensed grade.

A company was formed, which bored to the depth of 1005 feet. Neither gas nor oil was found. Sulphurous water was struck, however, at 320 feet, and salt water at 550 feet. This disheartened for the time seekers for oil and gas about Ottawa. Two years ago Senator Poirier, of New Brunswick, undertook to make a thorough study of the geological and stratigraphical conditions of the Ottawa valley, aided by one of the leading geologists in America.

The counties of Carleton, Russell and Prescott were thoroughly investigated. No less than 150 bore holes down to the rock, at depths varying from twenty-five to 204 feet, were made by an artesian well bore through the overlying clay, and a reliable map was drawn. At Cunninghanm's farm the Trenton limestone is covered by the Utica shale and the Hudson river shale, and by 204 feet of overlying blue clay, remarkably soft. The elevation of the surface is about 260 feet above the sea level.

Senator Poirier started boring this last winter with a diamond drill owned by the Ontario government. No boring had ever been made through the belt of the Hudson and Utica formations around Ottawa, and from surface exposures the geological bureau of Canada had come to the conclusion that the maximum thickness of the combined Hudson and Utica strata would not exceed 300 feet. The Ontario diamond drill had a capacity of 469 feet. At that depth the drill, on close examination of the fossils found in the cave, had not traversed the Hudson formation. At about 445 feet from the surface a column of water and gas about thirty feet high spurted out, but lasted only twenty-four hours. The water, I am informed, showed positive evidence of oil, being covered with an oily cream.

Deducting from 469 the 204 feet of overlying clay, the drill at Cunningham's farm had only penetrated the rock 265 feet. It was thought advisable to drill from a point where the rock outcropped at the surface. Such a point was shown to exist some three miles away. At this spot the stratum was found to be horizontal and altogether undisturbed.

At 450 feet a strong pressure of gas was met, 200 pounds to the square inch according to the official report. The drill could only reach a few feet lower and the drilling had to be abandoned. At that depth the drill had, upon examination of the fossils, barely reached the Utica shale.

The drill hole, which is one and a quarter inches in diameter, has been left unplugged and has continued ever since to give out gas—rock gas, without doubt. The water that comes out is coated with greasy matter with spots resembling oil.

Encouraged by these results Senator Poirier and his associates secured a pumping drill of 2000 feet capacity and started boring a new hole on Cunningham's farm some thirty feet from the first one. On May 31 last, the drill had reached 540 feet from the surface; that is, 336 feet in the bed rock. The driller had met with no phenomenon, except a stronger jet of water and gas at about 490 feet, which, however, did not last. There are appearances of a tarry substance on the water.

Oil is expected to be struck at about 900 feet from the surface, that is, 700 feet below the rock, at the contact of the Trenton limestone with the Utica shale. In Ohio and Indiana it has been found at that horizon.

Consul Hayden writes from Castellamare di Stabie: "After efforts covering a period of over two years, I have succeeded in demonstrating the fact that the very finest quality of macaroni can be made of American wheat. This has been declared an impossibility by those engaged in its manufacture here, and there are hundreds of establishments in this district. Up to the present time Russian wheat and wheat from the Orient have been used, together with Italian wheat, for the production of this article of food the American wheat being considered too soft. Through the co-operation of one of the largest establishments in this district, it has been found that that this conclusion was based upon the proverbial conservatism of the people. When it is remembered that macaroni consists of wheat to the extent of 60 per cent, it will be readily seen that here is an opening for American wheat of no inconsiderable importance. It should be understood that while there is a tax on American wheat, there is also a tax on all foreign wheat—$1.44 for 220 pounds. It should also be borne in mind that international freights covering transportation of grain from Russia, the Orient and the United States are practically the same.

"It has been suggested to me that if the United States government would admit free of duty, or at least at a lower tax than the present tariff, macaroni made from American wheat, a market for our wheat would be opened in competition with that of Russia and the East. The present tariff on 1000 pounds of macaroni is $15, or 1½ cents per pound. Under the plan proposed, 60 per cent of the said 1000 pounds would enter free, leaving 40 per cent to be taxed at the present rate of 1½ cents per pound, making on the 100 pounds a tax of $6, instead of $15. It should be remembered in this connection that the Italian manufacturer of macaroni, under the scheme proposed, would have to pay freight on the same wheat manufactured into macaroni and transported to the United States."

Religious services to which a novel aspect was given by the use of which a megaphone attachment rendered the music were held at Odd Fellows' hall last Sunday afternoon. Rev. J. B. Clayton, an evangelist, presided, and Rev. George Buckler, of the New York Avenue Methodist church, delivered the sermon.

Mr. Buckler was formerly an actor, and among other things spoke of his own experience, when he had longed for the large audiences which he had observed in the churches, and how, when he had entered the ministry, he had longed for the large audiences which he saw at the theater doors. "Much," said he, "depends upon the point of view, and pastor is much like actor in the wish to address multitudes."

Germany has announced her recognition of the Monroe doctrine to South American diplomats in Berlin, according to their colleagues in Washington.

The attitude of Germany with respect to an isthmian canal has caused much speculation among Central and South American states. According to South Americn envoys here who discuss the matter, their representatives in Berlin deemed it advisable to obtain a statement in regard to the policy the German government proposes to observe.

In the conversations which occurred between Count Von Buelow, the German minister of foreign affairs, and the South American diplomat, the former is said to have stated that Germany recognized the existence and understood the extent of the application of the Monroe doctrine, and that she has no intention of hindering the construction of the canal by the United States.

A report was current among South American diplomats here several months ago that Germany would join with Great Britain in demanding the neutrality of the canal. State department officials are confident that the position attained by the United States in the affairs of the world has had something to do with German's attitude.

Five submarine boats of the Holland type have been ordered by the British government for trial this autumn. These boats are the first of their class built for the British navy, and will probably be followed by several others, in view of the rapidity with which France is adding to this part of her sea armament.

Great Britain has not heretofore looked with favor upon submarine boats. That the British experts are still skeptical of their value is shown in the statement of the admiralty office, which says: "What the future of these boats may be in naval warfare can only be a matter of conjecture. The experiments with these boats will assist the admiralty in assessing their true value. The question of their employment must be studied and all developments in their mechanism carefully watched by this country."

The annual summer cruises of state naval militia organizations on United States warships will be abandoned owing to the lack of support given the navy department's plan by the states which have such organizations. The decline in militia has been noticeable since the war with Spain, and unless a more active interest is displayed by the states, it is regarded as probable that the government will withdraw its annual appropriation.

This appropriation, which amounts to about $60,000, has been divided among the various organizations in proportion to the strength of each as shown in the preceding summer cruise. As there will be no practical work done by the naval militia this year, it is stated that the navy may not ask next session for the annual appropriation.

It is said the failure of the states to make suitable provision for supporting the men while on the annual cruises has been the main reason why so many have been compelled to decline the department's invitation this year. This is declared to be true especially of New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland. On such cruises the government furnished the ship, but the various organizations were required to pay the mess fees and other expenses for the week at sea.

AT CLOQUET.

House Owned By Charles Fuller Destroyed By Fire.

Cloquet, Minn., June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—An alarm of fire was turned in about one o'clock yesterday from Eighth street and Carlton avenue, and the department promptly responded. The house owned by Charles Fuller was discovered in flames. The inmates were absent, and all that could be done was to save the shell of the building. The inside was completely gutted.

M. T. Mongovan, and old-time resident, and well along in years, who has been sick for some time, is said to be gradually nearing the end.

W. R. Hoyle, of Philadelphia, is visiting with his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Simons.

Dr. A. E Johnson's horse created some excitement Wednesday. He was left standing in front of Hanneamp's meat market, and suddenly concluded to return to his barn. Dashing through the business streets, he succeeded in getting to the stable after wrecking the running gear of the buggy. The horse was uninjured.

The young men about town are about to organize a shirt waist club. L. A. Fish is booming himself for president.

George Shaw returned Wednesday night from St. Paul, where he attended the funeral of Dr. Foster, and old friend and former resident of Cloquet.

Miss Irene Cox will give a birthday party Saturday evening.

Frank Ehlers, for some time employed in Northern company's office, was removed to St. Paul.

Mrs. J. E. Lyndas is visiting friends in Illinois.

HEIRS TO WEALTH.

Britisher's Estate to Be Divided Among Americans.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 28.—Mrs. M. E. Bassett, a widow of Los Angeles, has fallen heir, through the death of Thomas Openshaw, an uncle, to a share in a vast estate in England, which is left to her, in conjunction with five brothers and sisters, who live in various parts of the United States. A brother, Thomas Bradshaw, resides in Cincinnati.

Mrs. Bassett has received a letter from a firm of attorneys in New York city notifying her of her good fortune, requesting proofs of her identification. The estate is worth up in the millions.

"My father's family," said Mrs. Bassett, "was very wealthy. He married against the wishes of his parents and was completely disinherited, though after his death, many years ago, his folks were very liberal in supplying my mother with money until her death, three of four years ago.

"We have always been expecting to inherit some money some time, but it has been so long now that we had almost forgotten to look for it. I shall communicate at once with a brother of mine in Alabama, and probably we will both get to England before the matter is settled."

CAREER OF WILLIAMS

The Sensational Horseman Has Settled Down to Business.

Caused the Little Town of Independence, Ia., to Boom.

Has Purchased Extensive Illinois Farm and Will Live There.

Lexington, Ky., June 28.—With the rise of C. W. Williams, the little town of Independence, Iowa, blossomed and bloomed as a bustling Western city. The great race track he laid out with its expansive club house, stand and stables, the electric power house, the street car line, the hotel and the opera house, all bearing the name of Williams, are still there, but when the wizard hand of this genius ceased to guide their destinies and he finally shook the dust of the city from his feet, transferring his interests to other scenes, the little settlement relapsed into the long sleep out of which he had suddenly awakened it.

C. W. Williams is a native of New York state, having been born in Columbia county, near Albany, forty-five years ago. He lived on a farm until 11 years old, when his parents moved to Jessup, Ia. There he continued his farm work until well in his teens, when he secured a position as clerk. His salary was $5 a month and board. While still a clerk he attended night school and mastered telegraphy. This secured for him the position of night operator on the Illinois Central railroad, a place he held for three years. In the idle hours of the day he began to speculate in butter and eggs, buying up all of the country product that he could secure and shipping to New York city for sale. This proved a decidedly successful venture, so much so that he resigned as night operator. Increasing his interests in his new venture, he established large creameries at Ossina and Postville and for several years virtually controlled the egg, butter and poultry business of that section of Iowa.

During this time he had occasion to visit the stock farm of H. L. and F. T. Stout, at Dubuque, and bought a pair of brown mares, full sisters, for a road team, paying $250 for them. One of them he sold and she has been lost track of. The other called Lou, is the dam of the $106,000 Axtell. Having secured four other mares, one of which he purchased from the Stouts for $75, he shipped the quinte to Kentucky, just sixteen years ago, and followed them down to select the stallions to which he would breed them. The $75 mare he bred to Jay Bird and the mighty Allerton was the result. Lou he mated to William L., getting Axtell. When asked the question as to why he had selected these stallions, he said he selected William L. because of the craze over his brother, the great Guy Wilkes, in California. He chose Jay Bird because he was siring stake winners, and because, aside from his peculiar color, he was the best-looking of all the sons of George Wilkes. He had size, superb conformation and grand action, and, better still, he was a natural trotter.

For years Williams shipped his mares to Kentucky to be bred, taking them to Iowa again, where they remained until they foaled.

Williams broke Axtell as a yearling and he could show a mile in about three minutes. Not realizing, at this early age, the white diamond he had in the son of William L., he offered to part with him for $300. He had a prospective buyer, who at the last minute backed down, and he was thus forced against his will to keep one of the very greatest stars the trotting turf has known. As a 2-year-old he got a mark of 2:23, the world's 2-year-old record at the time, and as a 3-year-old he trotted a mile in 2:12, beating the 3-year-old record and lowering the stallion record for all age. That night he passed out of Williams' hands into the possession of an Indiana syndicate for $105,000, still the highest price ever paid for a trotting horse and at the time the greatest sum ever exchanged for a horse of any breed. Flying Fox and Ormonde are the only horses that ever outsold the dashing son of William L.

Allerton as a 2-year-old could not beat 2:40, but as a 3-year-old he got a mark of 2:18¼, as a 4-year-old he scored a record of 2:13½, and as a 5-year-old, 2:09½, his present mark. Both of these great horses scored their records to high-wheeled sulkies. Mr. Williams would never put a price on Allerton, and he is one horse, he says, he will never part with.

The success of Axtell and Allerton caused Williams to sell out his creamery business and he made his advent as a trotting horse man pure and simple at Independence, his first move being the purchase of the fair grounds track there. Here it was that he originated the famous kite-shaped track, and among other improvments to the grounds he purchased an adjacent ten acres of land and laid out a fine park, with extensive artificial lake and beautiful flower beds. He held his first meeting in 1890 and fast were the races trotted and paced over the new track that the eyes of all horsemen turned toward Independence.

The winter following he erected a power house, lighted the city, laid street car tracks from all directions leading to his course, built a fine hotel and opera house and in 1891 held the greatest trotting meeting the world has ever known. There were horses there from every state and territory in America, and even Canada and Europe were represented. Score of private cars filled the sidetracks throughout the meeting and every vacant room in Independence was occupied by a trotting horse enthusiast.

Williams also established a successful weekly paper, the American Trotter. He virtually owned the city of Independence. If you rode on a street car one of Williams' conductors collected your fare, you paid your hotel bill to a clerk employed by Williams, and if you went to the races or to the theater Williams got your money. He even owned the lights of the city. In 1894, realizing when the panic came that Independence was too small a place for such extensive enterprises, Williams sold out his interests as best he could and transferred his track interests to Gedesberg, Ill., where he held successful meetings for three years. During the last few seasons he has let the management of race tracks alone, devoting his time to breeding.

Mr. Williams has purchased an extensive farm near Aurora, Ill., about thirty-seven miles from Chicago, and as soon as the residence, now under construction, is completed, he will live there. He firmly believes that he will yet breed a 2-minute trotter. He has already given more horses standard records than any other trainer or owner in the business, having controlled or owned nearly 300 horses with marks of 2:30 or better. He is the only man that ever owned five horses with records of 2:12 or better in a similar period of time, these stars being Gayton, 2:08¾; Elloree, 2:08¾; Allerton, 2:09¼; Altoka, 2:01¼, and Axtell, 2:12.

Mr. Williams takes a rosy view of the future of the trotter. He says that boom times will come again, with this difference: The pedigree must be there, the speed and gait as well, and on top of all the great individuality, without which no horse will become a stellar trotter.

FORTUNE

Powell Left Behind Him Will Go to the State.

Jacksonville, Fla., June 28.—John Powell, a blacksmith and a well known character of Jacksonville, died last Monday night in his little cottage on Church street, where he lived alone. He left a fortune in cash, bonds and gilt-edged mortgages of from $350,000 to $500,000. He has no relatives and left no will.

John Powell was 70 years old, and was an Englishman by birth. He came to Jacksonville nearly half a century ago, and worked at his anvil. He was as poor as the ordinary man of his trade, but was provident. He saved what he made, and accumulated a few hundred dollars, and then loaned this out on the best of security. This developed in years into a money-lending business of great magnitude, yet he continued at his trade, lending money as a side issue. It was in this way that in the past fifteen years he has been the heavy mortgage holder in Florida.

Many years ago his wife died. Since that time he has lived practically the life of a hermit, coming only occasionally to the busy section of the city, where he would sit on the federal building steps and watch silently the moving crowd. Few people knew him; he knew fewer. He was a member of no church, and a year ago when he was ill near unto death a priest called.

"Close the door," he said to his attendant. "They only come to see me for my money."

His dying request was that a pastor should conduct the simple services at the grave.

WHY?

IS ELECTRIC LIGHT BEST

Because it is healthy, clean, pure and brilliant.

HEALTHY— It has no odor. Prof. Thompson states that one cubic foot of gas consumes as much oxygen as four adults.

CLEAN— It causes no discolorations of furnishings and decorations in homes.

SAFE— As electric bell work, no danger of suffocation.

CHEAP— By using a little care in turning off lights when not in use it is cheaper than any other illuminant.

Blood Poison

THE MOST DESTRUCTIVE OF ALL HUMAN DISEASES.

The poison ejected from the fangs of the rattlesnake is not more surely fatal than the virus of Contagious Blood Poison, which pollutes and vitiates the blood, destroys the tissues and bones and eats like a canker sore into the flesh.

This disease appears first in the form of a little sore or blister; soon the glands begin to swell, pimples break out on the body, the mouth and throat become sore, making it painful to eat or swallow; dreadful ulcers appear on the tongue, copper colored splotches and other characteristic signs of Blood Poison come as the disease progresses, and the destructive virus takes deeper hold upon the system. The medical men are as sorely perplexed over the character of this blood poison as ever; they tell you to take mercury and potash alternately for three years, but the stomach of no human being can stand this treatment long; besides, they do not cure the disease permanently, as thousands know from experience.

OUR FREE HOME TREATMENT.

Our book on Contagious Blood Poison gives more information about this disease than you can possibly get from any other source. It describes accurately and fully the symptoms as they appear in each stage of the malady, enabling the reader to correctly diagnose his own case, and, by following the instructions laid down in this book, to successfully treat himself at home. Should the patient need any special direction or advice, our physicians will be glad to correspond with and help him along in every possible way. Don't hesitate to write fully about your condition; what you have to say about yourself will never go beyond our office. You can have the best medical advice and this valuable little book without any cost to you whatever. Our physicians are in correspondence with hundreds all the time, and have successfully treated thousands of cases. Don't despair of a cure because something else has failed.

S. S. S. is the only guaranteed purely vegetable blood purifier, and the only antidote for this peculiar virus; it purifies the blood and builds up the constitution. The appetite improves almost from the first dose, the sores soon show signs of healing, and the unsightly, dirty splotches and eruptious grow paler and paler, and finally disappear.

S. S. S. has for nearly 50 years been known and used as a remedy for this dreadful disease. Gently, but thoroughly, it removes all traces of the poison without the least injury to the system. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Atlanta, Ga.

DEMAND FOR MEN

It Is Brisk and Exceeds the Supply By Considerable.

Wage Situation Is Entirely Satisfactory to the Laborer.

The Harvest Work Bids Fair to Require Many Men.

With the summer season now well under way the labor market of the northwest may be regarded as in excellent condition so far as the interests of the laboring men are concerned. Work there is and and in plenty, more of it in fact than there are men for the work and from all sections of the northwest where large construction work is now going on there is coming in reports of a big shortage in labor and the employment offices of this city and the Twin Cities are flooded with orders, some calling for as hiah a number as 500 men, and this number wanted immediately. This condition of affairs has, naturally, had a bullish effect on the wage question and wages along nearly all lines of work have strengthened and are considered a shade or two better than the preceding two or three years when a similar shortage of men for the work of the summer months has existed. At the close of the winter logging season there was a short period when the supply was greater than the demand as many thousands more of men were employed throughout the pine districts last winter than in previous winters, and when the winter's work closed down a large part of the men drifted into the cities. It was then too early in the season in this part of the country to begin the contract work in railroad construction, stripping in the mining districts and industrial activity along other lines, and the men, rather than lie around the cities without employment, left for points farther south, where the season opened earlier. Some or them are coming back now, the higher wages paid forming an inducement, but they are not coming in numbers that satisfy the large employers.

There is said to be more railroad construction work going on in the Northwest this year than during last year, but the scenes of the greatest activity have in some instances been transferred to other states. For instance, there was more railroad construction work going on in the Dakotas last season than in any of the other states of the Northwest. While there is considerable work of this nature going on in those wheat growing states this year, railroad building is far more evenly divided among the other states, and thousands of men are employed in Minnesota, Wisconsin and in Iowa. One of the sections where the largest industrial activity is evident this year is in the vicinity of Sault Ste. Marie, and the abundance of work in that locality has drawn heavily on the labor supply at the head of the lake. So urgent is the demand for men in man localities that the employers are even paying the fare of the men out to the work.

In Minnesota, Halvorsen, Richards & Co., a Minneapolis firm of contractors, are doing the heaviest railroad work, and are pushing the Brainerd & Northern extension of the Northern Pacific road rapidly toward the international boundary line. The firm is now constructing a 13-mile line to connect the main line with the old logging road through the Red Lake reservation, and when this is completed the Northern Pacific company will have access to Red Lake, the logging road having come under its control last winter. The same contractors are doing a large amount of work near St. Croix Falls, in Wisconsin, constructing the Soo branch that is said to be headed for the head of the lakes.

The contractors are paying $2 a day for common labor and good wages for station work and axmen. The railroad companies are paying all the way from $1.75 to $2 for labor, and are demanding large numbers of men for surfacing work and extra gangs.

Among the other contactors, Winston Brothers are building a railroad for the Omaha company, between this city and Eau Claire, Wis., paying $1.75 a day, with board at $3.50 per week.

John Runquist is doing a large amount of track building and stripping on the Iron Range road, and is keeping a steady stream of orders into this city.

The National Employment company sent out several large crews yesterday for the work on the Brainerd & Northern line and for the Runquist contract work on the range.

There is comparatively little summer logging being done at the present time owing to the wet condition of the woods. The heavy rans have completely flooded some sections, and work has been suspended until the water runs off and the ground dries out. There has been a fair demand for men in the woods this summer, with wages from $26 to $35, including board.

There are not at present very many mill orders. The sawmills of the district appear to have full crews, and are running steadily. It is expected, however, that by a month or six weeks later, when the harvest season opens in the wheat country, that there will be many vacancies, as the men usually begin leaving this part of the country about that time. All reports from the wheat country indicate a big crop this year, and the farmers are said to be anxious about the labor supply. It is believed that harvest wages will be high this season.

REGRETS IT.

Ottawa, Ill., Loth to Lose Professor and Mrs. Weeks.

The Ottawa, Ill., Free Trader has the following to say with reference to the departure of Professor Charles W. Weeks and Mrs. Helene B. Weeks from that city to Duluth, the former to become the director of music and the latter organist at the First Methodist church here :

"Professor C. W. Weeks and his wife Mrs. Helene B. Weeks, have accepted the positions of director and organist, respectively, of the choir of the Methodist church of Duluth, Minn., and will perform their first duties there on Sunday, July 21, just four weeks from today.

"In making this decision they realize that they must sever ties which have linked them with almost every musical and social organization in the city, and the case of Professor Weeks, particularly, with state musical circles, in which he has become an important factor.

"It was in 1888 that Professor Weeks

came to Ottawa as superintendent of music in the public schools.

"The improvement in singing and music since he began his labors here could not be described in words. It is simply marvelous. But Professor Weeks' talents were not all bestowed upon the schools. He was sought for to conduct music at teachers' institutes in other counties, has been musical director in Ottawa high school, was leader of the Congregational church for eight or nine years, organized the Aeolian quartet, of which he is director, has been at the head of the Choral union and was the director of a large number of operas and musical festivities given here by local talent. He was elected secretary and treasurer of the Illinois Music Teachers' association in 1894, when that organization was simply existing. By his energy and progressive spirit it has developed into a large and progressive organization. For several years he has had charge of the public school music and sight singing at the American conservatory of music in Chicago. He has been re-elected for the coming year as well as to all the other positions named for the ensuing year. The Amateur Male Glee club was another of Professor Weeks' musical ideas, comprising the best male voices in the city. The public appearances of the club have always been events of interest in this city.

"Aside from his musical work, Professor Weeks has been an active member of the Ottawa Boat club, and was regent of the Royal Arcanum, a fraternal society, and his progressive spirit was an inspiration to all the members, resulting in the doubling of the membership in a short period.

"With such a record it can be seen at a glance that Professor Weeks has been a leading spirit in the musical circles here, as well as a factor in social and fraternal affairs. It might be added that he put forth no particular effort to secure the position of director of the large Methodist church at Duluth, for which, it is said, there were forty-five applicants. The expression here regarding his departure comes in one voice, and that is, it is a great loss to Ottawa.

MRS. HELENE B. WEEKS.

"Mrs. Weeks' departure will be equally regretted in musical and social circles. She has lived here almost her entire life, and was a student on the piano and organ of such eminent teachers as W. S. B. Mathews, William H. Sherwood, Emil Liebling and C. A. Havens. She has been organist in the Congregational, First Presbyterian and Baptist churches, occupying the latter position at the present time. She has been president and one of the leading members of the Amateur Musical club, was musical director of the Pleasant View college for several years and was re-elected at the last meeting of the trustees. She is a graduate of the Chicago musical college.

"The acceptance of Professor Weeks and wife of the Duluth position has made it impossible for Professor Weeks to accept a position as musical instructor at the state normal school, at Normal, Ill., which was tendered him recently.

"Both of them have been, for some years past, members of the Congregational church of this city."

GOOD BREAKFASTS.

Start the Day Right.

The breakfast is, perhaps, the most important meal of the day. Europeans usually eat a very light breakfast. Many Americans have stomach trouble because they eat too much or food of not the right sort for the morning meal. An ideal breakfast is a baked apple or some other fruit, a dish of Grape-Nuts Food with a little cream, and a cup of Postum Food Coffee.

Leave off all meat, hot biscuits, etc. Grape-Nuts and Postum both furnish the phosphate of potash together with other food elements that go to make up brain and nerve centers as well as muscle and tissue, and both can be digested by the stomach of an infant.

It is the part of wisdom nowadays to use food especially selected for nourishment and that can be easily digested. Ten days' trial of this breakfast and you will feel as though you had "cleaned house."

The exhilaration of bounding health is worth 100 times the small outlay of time and care in aranging such a breakfast.

Mrs. Riley, 125 Chestnut street, Camden, N. J., says she formerly breakfasted on chops, hot biscuits and coffee. "After such a meal I would have severe pains and they would last sometimes far into the night." She finally determined on a change in her diet and had for breakfast only Grape-Nuts Food and a little cream with Postum Food Coffee. She says: "In a very few days the intestinal trouble all disappeared. I have regained my old-time weight, lost the irritability and nervousness, and life takes on a new aspect.

"When I feel a little exhausted in the day I simply drop everything and stir a spoonful of Grape-Nuts in a little cream or hot milk, and in ten minutes I have regained my vigor and freshness."

Grape-Nuts Food is best when served just as it comes from the package without any cooking whatever. The food has already been cooked ten or twelve hours in the process of manufacturing it. When made up into puddings, pies and other desserts it does not hurt it to be cooked again, but when served simply as a breakfast food it should never be cooked. On the contrary, Postum Food Coffee absolutely must be boiled fifteen or twenty minutes before the food value and flavor can be brought out.

IS THROUGH.

Board of Review Is Hearing No More Complaints.

When Mayor Hugo, City Comptroller McCormick and Assessor Olson complete their deliberations, it is questionable if there will be found in the city three other men so well posted on the valuation of stocks. These gentlemen, who comprise the board of review, have been in conference all day over the stock question and arriving at some decision as to the valuation of the shares of stocks held by many of Duluth's purported investors. Three of these, John F. McCarthy, E. G. Chapman and S. Brown appeared before the board yesterday and appeared willing to be assessed at a reasonable valuation.

The board finished its work of listening to complaints, last evening, and the few taxpayers who were belated in appearing before that body to tell their troubles, had to be turned away today. The books must be turned over to the county auditor by 10 o'clock a. m. next Monday morning and during the interval the assessor will have plenty to do in getting them ready.

ESCAPED.

Parks Suffered Very Little From the Storms.

Park Commissioner B. Silberstein says that the park board has reason for congratulation because of the escape of the property under its charge with little or no damage during the recent storm. The improvements planned by the board are being carried out satisfactorily. The boulevard drive has been placed in better condition than ever before and the bridges have been repaired. There is no work going on at Lester park other than that of keeping the park in good order. The board has turned its attention to the new possession, Fairmont park, at West Duluth, and quite extensive work is being accomplished in the way of clearing up the grounds. Duluth people take less interest in the parks than the people outside. People coming here for a visit often ask the first to see the parks and the boulevard. Mr. Silberstein says that he recently had visiting him a friend from Frankfort-on-the-Main, who has traveled extensively in the United States, and who says that nowhere else in the country has he found a city that has the magnificent natural scenery possessed by the city of Duluth.

BANISHED.

Duke Lan and Prince Tuan Reach New Home.

Pekin, June 28.—Word has been received here of the arrival of Duke Lan and Prince Tuan at Uiumski, Turkestan, in which place of banishment they have been sentenced to reside. A Russian consul is stationed at Uiumski, and he will notify the Russian government should the banished Chinese leave that place.

MINISTER AT MUNICH.

St. Petersburg, June 28.—M. de Giers, the Russian minister at Pekin, has been appointed minister of Russia at Munich, Bavaria.

UNOFFICIAL WEIGHING.

Henley, England, June 28.—At an unofficial weighing this morning, the university of Pennsylvania crew totalled 1274 pounds, an average of 159 pounds. The Leanders average 173 pounds. The draw for stations occurs Saturday. Under the prevailing conditions there is a difference of two lengths in the stations.

COMMANDER SMITH DEAD.

Binghampton, N. Y., June 28.—Commander Frederick Robinson Smith, U. S. N., retired, is dead at his home in this city, aged 61 years. He was graduated from Annapolis in 1861, and served with distinction in the civil war. He was appointed commander in 1870.

PLAYING CRICKET.

Philadelphia, June 28.—The Canadian cricketers, who reached here yesterday, began a two-days' match with the Belmont eleven today, at Elmwood, this city. The Canadian eleven is captained by Maj. V. C. Straubenzie, of Kenston, while the Belmont's captain is C. Coates, Jr. The weather was clear and warm and the course was in first-class condition when play began, shortly before noon.

FAIR RATES.

What the Cattle Growers' Association Is Formed For.

Denver, June 28.—To secure fair rates of transportation for cattle and legislation beneficial to the cattle industry are the objects of the American Cattle Growers' association, which has been incorporated by F. L. Lusk, Joseph M. Carey and J. C. Leary. The directors for the first year are A. J. Nisbet, Alex. Bowie, H. H. Robinson, S. J. Gilmore, J. H. Howerie, Conrad Schaefer and J. A. Stimson.

The association is the outgrowth of the meeting held in this city in March, when 350 prominent cattle men from all over the West were present. The association, in a measure, excludes sheep men. The local offices are at the Denvery union stockyards.

MINERAL OUTPUT

Unprecedented Gains Are Made In United States Over 1899.

Coal Leads In Quantity, Value and Economic Importance.

Pig Iron Comes Second With Copper a Good Third.

New York, June 28.—The Engineering and Mining Journal in its issue today will publish the full estimates of metal and mineral output for the United States in 1900. The table shows that the total value at the place of production of the output was $1,365,608,583, as compared with $1,218,214,637 in 1899, a gain of $147,393,946 for the year.

Of these vast sums, which are without precedent, in the history of the mineral industry, ores and minerals contributed $672,090,416 in 1900 and $587,268,798 in 1899; metals, $524,432,533 in 1900 and $496,057,320 in 1899; secondary products, $72,720,695 in 1900 and $64,416,979 in 1899, while the value of metals smelted or refined from foreign material was $96,364,939 in 1900 and $70,471,540 in 1899.

The chief item of our great mineral production, in quantity, value and economic importance, was coal, the production of which in 1900 was 268,315,421 short tons, an increase of 16,210,044 tons, or 6 per cent over 1899.

Pig iron was second in order of values, as well as in economic importance. The total in 1900 was 13,533,265 long tons, or —including 255,977 tons of spiegeleizen and ferromanganese—a total of 13,789,242 tons, with an approximate value of $273,110,322. It is these two products—coal and iron—which we produce more abundantly and more cheaply than any other country in the world, that are giving the United States economic leadership of the world, and will enable the nation to hold that place.

In point of value copper comes third on the list, its production last year being 600,832,565 pounds with a value of $97,755,449. The increase over 1899 was comparatively small. Gold holds only the fifth place, with a total value of $78,159,674—less than one-fourth of the value of coal, or one-third that of pig iron. It was nearly approached in value by petroleum with a total of $74,246,582, and was exceeded by the clay products, with a total of $78,704,768. Few people would suppose that the varied clay products—brick, tile, pipe and the like—exceeded in their total values that of our large output of gold, but such is the fact. The production of silver had a market value of only $36,576,900. Building stone was rated at $41,400,500 last year.

AT WEST DULUTH

Miss Clara Stephenson and Rev. Brynolf Westerlund were married last night at the parsonage of the Swedish Lutheran church, 706 North Fifty-sixth avenue. Rev. C. Svenson, pastor of Elim church, performed the ceremony. The bride is a sister of Mrs. Svenson and has made her home in West Duluth since last fall. Rev. Westerlund has a pastorate in St. Paul, where they will begin their residence early in July.

THE COW NUISANCE.

Cows roaming around over lawns and gardens are making business brisk in Judge Stone's court. Last night a man drove a cow off his lawn and then tied the animal to his fence. Shortly afterward the owner and some of his friends appeared and released the beast. There was a war of words such as would not be used at a society function. As a result, warrants have been issued for the arrest of the ungrammatical persons.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

A wagon load of brick was stolen from the grounds of the Duluth Foundry and Machine company a few nights ago. Manager Foote thinks he has a good clue and that he will soon locate the brick and the thief.

A new suit of clothes neatly wrapped in a bundle, was picked up by William Kiltin this morning on the ground occupied by the circus last night.

West Duluth council No. 4, Modern Samaritans, will meet at its hall Monday night, and from thence will proceed in a body to Beta council chamber, Twenty-first avenue west. The lodge accepted an invitation from the West Enders to visit them. Several candidates are to be initiated.

The local branch of the W. C. T. U. is planning to hold its annual picnic July 18, at Oatka beach. It will be the twelfth event of the kind since the union was organized.

The Misses Heding and Miss Helena Smith, nieces of H. A. Schreck, arrived from Germany this week and are guests at the Schreck home.

John Cashin was at Cloquet yesterday and returned home today.

A party of friends surprised Mr. and Mrs. John Kramer at the home Wednesday evening. It was a happy reunion of friends. Mr. and Mrs. Kramer leave Saturday night for Minneapolis, where they will reside in future. Those in the party were: Mr. and Mrs. John Lingelbach, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Lauermann, Mrs. Jacob Kramer, Mrs. Devauney, Mrs. N. A. Willeson, John Heiden, Misses Day and Annie Lauermann.

The men of St. James' parish are planning to give a lawn social early in July.

Twenty young people are camping on Spirit island.

Several young boys have been caught in the act of stealing lumber. If this petty thieving continues it is probable that some of them will receive a stern lesson.

The merchants on Central avenue have lost interest in the sprinkling question. What they most desire now is that the weather man should adopt some new regulations.

The Senate club members are anticipating a good time at their banquet in the Palmer block tonight.

Anton Jensen, of McIntosh, Minn., is visiting today with his relatives, Mr. and Mrs. N. C. Hendricks. Mr. Jensen leaves tonight for Buffalo.

Miss Maggie Floathe returned to her home at Two Harbors today.

Oscar A. Berglund is home from a visit at Brainerd. While away he also attended the wedding of a brother at Pillager.

Miss Nannie Dunnegan, of St. Paul, is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Nittereau, on Fifty-third avenue.

Commissioner Meldahl has repaired nearly all the damage caused by Monday's storm. The washout at the bridge, on Grand and Sixty-seventh avenues, has been fixed up, and the bridge and approaches are in better condition than ever before.

George Sheperd and William Lambert will play with the Duluth Fashions at Ashland next Sunday.

William Blamey left last night for Cheyenne, Wyo., where he will take a position as engneer in a mine. Until quite recently Mr. Blamey has been employed at Mountain Iron. Mr. Blamey's family will go to Wyoming in a short time.

RARE HONOR

Conferred on Dr. Von Hollenben By Harvard.

Berlin, June 28.—Today's newspapers print long special dispatches regarding the conferring by Harvard university of the degree of LL.D. upon Dr. Von Holleben, the German ambassador at Washington, and the other honors paid him. The remarks of President Eliot are keenly appreciated here. The Vossische Zeitung points out the rare and high-grade character of the honor conferred upon Dr. Von Holleben, and the Frankfurter Zeitung also prints appreciative comments, dwelling upon solemn attendant circumstances. Official circles, including Emperor William, are also highly pleased.

BAD WEATHER

Caused Considerable Damage to German Yachts.

Kiel, June 28.—During the last few days the yachts taking part in the regatta here have suffered from squally winds, rough water and the low temperature. Prince Henry's Tilly and the yacht Odin broke their rudders and two other yachts were barely saved. Emperor William's Meteor has arrived here from England. His majesty intends to steer the Meteor in today's race from Kiel to Travemund.

HANNA FOR PRESIDENT

Mark Is Suspected of Being a Sure-Enough Candidate.

Politicians' Reading of the Columbus Convention Indications.

Almost Suffered Humiliation For Sake of Sweet Place.

Washington, June 28.—Is Mark Hanna a candidate for the presidency?

This question is being asked a good many times in political and official circles here. A good many observers think he is. They base their opinion upon recent events in Ohio. It did not escape the notice of the more alert onlookers that Mr. Hanna made peace with his old-time enemy, ex-Mayor McKisson, in the Cuyahoga county convention last week. Senator Hanna went out of his way to bury the hatchet and secure a truce. As a rule, he fights and has never changed his nature. But on this occasion he almost suffered humiliation for the sake of sweet peace.

Those who picked up their ears when they saw the redoubtable Hanna joining hands with his ancient enemy and accepting a ticket which that enemy had much the most to say about naming, felt that their suspicions were confirmed when they beheld Mr. Hanna's performance at the Republican state convention at Columbus. Here Mr. Hanna was not compelled to play second fiddle in the chorus. He was the leader of the orchestra. He had everything his own way. But apart from a wholesome sitting down upon Former Secretary of the Treasury Porter, who would not tote fair, Mr. Hanna again went in for harmony.

He wanted harmony and he got it. He nominated a ticket by acclamation, and for once the chief figure in Ohio politics has things in fine shape for the approaching campaign, with all the factions united in the bonds of common interest.

Those Washington observers who think Mr. Hanna has started for the White House bid us take notice of the manner in which the junior senator from Ohio patted the senior senator upon the back.

Two years ago, according to the prevailing notion, Mr. Foraker tried to stick a knife into Mr. Hanna's back. His closest friends did all in their power to defeat Hanna's senatorial aspirations, and Foraker declined to call them off. He said the campaign was over, so far as he was concerned, when the polls closed election day. Mr. Hanna had to make his fight alone. Worse, still, Foraker's strongest lieutenants were in the field against him.

Mark Hanna has never been noted as a forgiving person. Humility has never been in his line. He has some reputation as a punisher of his wicked foes. Yet he and Foraker stand at the platform at Columbus arm in arm. The resolutions praise both Hanna and Foraker, the latter a little more warmly. It was Hanna's convention through and through, yet Foraker was indorsed for re-election. He was commended by name for his services in connection with the Porto Rico legislation.

In all this the astute onlookers at the national capital perceive the fineness of Mr. Hanna's hand and the existence of a well-developed case of presidential ambition.

AUTOMOBILE RACE.

M. Fournier Is Considered the Favorite.

Paris, June 28.—The Herald's European edition prints the following on the chances of the contestants in the automobile races:

The first stage of the Paris-Berlin race has been won by M. Fournier, who covered the 456 kilometers in 6 hours, 28 minutes, 22 seconds, thus averaging seventy kilometers an hour.

The time does not compare favorably with M. Fournier's winning time of 85 kilometers an hour in the Paris-Bordeaux race, but the roads to Aix are not so good as to Bordeaux. Barring accidents M. Fournier is now considered the favorite, although Mm. De Knyf, Voight, Farman and others are close after him. He has the same Mars automobile as he had in the Paris-Bordeaux race.

The latest news received from the racers was from Cassel, where the two leaders, Fournier and Girardot came into collision, their machines then dashing into a crowd of spectators. One child was seriously injured.

Aix-La-Chappelle, June 28.—Altogether seventy-three motor cars completed the first stage of the automobile race between Paris and Berlin yesterday and started again at 5 o'clock this morning for Hanover, 276 miles distant. The racers started from here in the same order in which they arrived.

SPEEDY TRIAL

Will Be Arranged For Russell By Lords.

London, June 28.—At a special meeting of the house of lords today, a committee was appointed to arrange the procedure to bring Earl Russell, recently committed for trial at the Old Bailey on the charge of bigamy to a speedy trial by his peers. The committee includes the lord chancellor, Lord Halsbury; the lord privy seal, Lord Salisbury and twelve other peers.

SHANGHAI ALSO.

Shanghai, June 28.—The Tao Tai Sheng, at the request of Liu Kun Yi, visited all the consuls today and urged that, as the foreign forces were leaving Pekin, they ought also to evacuate Shanghai. The consuls are referring the matter to their respective governments.

VALUABLE COLT DEAD.

ABOUT BEEF.

British Soldiers In Africa Prefer the American Goods.

Washington, June 28.—In view of the temporary prohibition of American meat for military purposes in South Africa by the British government, Consul General Stowe, at Cape Town, has been making investigations with regard to the cause of the restriction, and has submitted the results to the state department. The British enlisted men, when questioned, pronounced the American article very satisfactory, and their officers stated that in many cases the men preferred the tinned meat to the poorer fresh article. At Pretoria a large stock of American meat was at hand, and no store or shop complained against it. In fact, the only complaints made of the American article arose from improper care of it after it had reached the Transvaal. It was found to be the practice at British military bases to use a layer of corned beef cases as a floor, and pile on top flour, meal and other commodities to protect the latter from ground moisture. But the cases of beef themselves suffered from the exposure, the tins becoming rusty and small holes letting in the air. In some cases after three months' exposure of this sort, the meat would be sent out to the troops, necessarily in bad shape.

Scald head is an eczema of the scalp—very severe sometimes, but it can be cured. Doan's Ointment quick and permanent in its results. At any drug store, 50 cents.

HANGED.

Existence of Two Bad Men Ended at Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala., June 28.—Frank Miller, a notorious safe blower, was hanged here today for the murder of Patrolman J. W. Adams, who was attempting to arrest him for burglary.

Miller's partner, Frank Duncan, was found guilty of killing Patrolman Kirkley in the same fight and sentenced to life imprisonment.

An hour after the Miller execution, Alonzo Williams, colored, was hanged on the same scaffold for murdering a fellow convict employed in the mines.

HOME-GROWN BEEF.

London, June 28.—The secretary to the admiralty, H. O. Arnold-Foster, intimated in the house of commons today that the admiralty contemplated stipulating that the navy be supplied with home-grown beef wherever proper slaughter arrangements were possible.

COINAGE STATEMENT.

Washington, June 28.—The forthcoming statement of the coinage executed at the mints of the United States for the fiscal year ending June 29, 1901, will show the total coinage to have been $136,340,781, as follows: Gold, $99,065,715; silver, $35,265,498; minor coins, $2,009,568.

FEAR FEUD.

Trouble Looked For Between Daniels Boys and Mine Guards.

Thacker, W. Va., June 28.—Quiet prevailed today in the coal fields of this section, where 2000 miners are on strike for the recognition of the union. Though there has been constant dread of hostilities between the strikers and guards on duty at the collieries, nothing of the sort appears probable, as both sides have apparently settled down for a long struggle.

Citizens of Thacker and Matewan, together with Sheriff Hatfield and other county officials, fear the next chapter of the strike will be the declaration of a feud between the Daniels boys of Kentucky and the mine guards. It is claimed the guards have first at the Daniels boys in the hills of Kentucky, opposite the mines, and that the former are certain to seek revenge.

Napoleon of Finance of Calumet Cannot Be Found.

Calumet—The representatives of four different jewelry firms were in the city looking for Isaac Arvonen, a jewelry dealer, who left some months ago for parts unknown. It is said Arvonan left unpaid bills amounting to nearly $9000, and that he not only forgot to pay his bills, but took the most valuable part of his stock with him.

The new $20,000 hospital of the Tamarack Mining company was formally opened this week, the ceremonies being attended by the medical staffs of all the mining companies hereabouts. The building is 50 by 90 on the ground and three stories in height, and has a large attic and adjoining building for the accommodation of nurses and for the preparation of food. The basement and first floor are of selected Lake Superior red sandstone and the upper two stories of frame. The interior finish is Georgia pine. The building contains emergency wards, operating rooms, dispensary, a sun veranda and many other conveniences afforded.

Marquette—The Upper Peninsula Veterans' association will hold its annual meeting in Marquette this year, the dates are August 22, 23, 24. President C. D. Blanchard has already outlined the program. The South Shore road is offering a fare of a rate and a fifth for the round trip and the same special rate will hold from all upper peninsula points on other lines. It is expected that there will be a representative turnout of the members of the several upper peninsula posts. The Women's Relief corps and the Spanish-American veterans will participate.

Sault Ste. Marie—Wednesday was the hottest day here in ten years, the official record at the United States weather bureau being 91 degrees as the maximum. The property in shaded thermometers soared to the hundred mark. The heat was rendered more uncomfortable by excessive humidity.

Menominee—This week the new steamer City of Green Bay, owned by the Maloney and Roulette Transportation company, established a new speed record out of Menominee, making seventeen miles in one hour, and is today acknowledged as being the swiftest boat plying on Green bay waters. The steamer made the trip to Sturgeon bay Sunday in one hour and thirty-seven minutes. She has powerful engines; a cylinder 24 by 30. The boat is about the size of the old steamer Welcome, and is making trips between Menominee, Sturgeon Bay and east shore points.

AMOUNT GROWING

Receipts From Vessel Tonnage Tax Rapidly Increasing.

Total For 1900 Twice That of the Previous Year.

County Gets One-Half of the Amount Collected.

The receipts by the state from the vessel tonnage for the past two years show the increase that has taken place in the vessels registered here and taxed in this state. In 1899 the total receipts from vessels taxed here were $3364.41, and in 1900 the receipts amounted to $7568.36, or more than twice what they were in 1899.

This increase is due to the fact that more vessel companies are taking advantage of the low taxation afforded in this state. Before the reduced tax rate went into effect, providing a nominal tax on the tonnage of the vessels enrolled here and having managing owners here, the taxes amounted to a very small sum, as few vessels were enrolled here. Now the city is close behind Cleveland, the largest port on the lakes in regard to the enrollment of vessels, and in a short time Duluth will have more vessels enrolled than any other port on the great lakes.

In addition to the taxes received from the vessel, Duluth gets a large amount of advertising out of it. Most of the largest type of vessels on the lakes now hail from Duluth, and below the name of the craft on the stern the name of this city appears in large, plain letters.

This county gets only half of the tax, however. Under the law providin for the low taxes the state is made the collection agency, and in accordance with its custom of clinging to all the money it can get its hands on, the state keeps half of the tonnage tax. This county's share of the collections for the last two years is $5466.38. County Treasurer Whipple this morning received the state auditor's draft on the state treasurer for that sum, and it will be added to the county's funds.

Not content with getting half the tax, the state holds on to the county's half until it is demanded. Treasurer Whipple happened to remember the other day that nothing had been heard from the state on the tonnage tax for some time, so he wrote down to find out if there was not something coming. The draft received this morning was in reply to that letter. Unless the money had been sent for, the state would probably have kept it and had the use of it until the end of time.

In making levies, etc., no calculations has been made for this money, so it will be so much clear gain to the county, and it will help out quite a little.

IS ARGUED.

Radcliffe & Willoughby Against Library Board Is Submitted.

Judge Dibell has under advisement the case of Radcliffe & Willoughby, the architects, against the city and the library board for services in preparing the first plans for the new library, which were disposed of when the appoint of the Carnegie gift was increased and new plans ordered. The amount is $1600.

The facts in the case were all stipulated, and the matter is before the court only on one question, that of whether the library board has the power to make such a contract without the express being authorized to do so by the city council. The architects claim that the board is an independent body, with full authority to make such a contract, while the city claims that it had no right to enter into a contract without the approval of the council. If the court decides that the board had such authority the claim will probably be paid.

When the claim came before the library board it offered the architects $750, which they refused to accept, and sued for the full amount, about $1600. John G. Williams is the attorney for the architects, and City Attorney Mitchell appeared for the city and the library board. A decision is expected shortly.

WEATHER IN JULY.

Data From Records For the Month.

The weather bureau has compiled from its records here data for the month of July covering a period of the last thirty years. The mean or normal temperature is 66 degrees, the warmest month being that of 1875, with an average of 71 degrees, while the coldest was that of 1871, it having an average of 61 degrees. The highest temperature was 99 degrees on July 1, 1883, and the lowest was 45 degrees on July 2, 1895.

The average precipitation for the month has been 3.72 inches, the greatest monthly rainfall being 10.42 inches in 1879 and the least 0.47 inches in 1875. The greatest amount of precipitation recorded in any twenty-four hours was 4.20 inches on July 2 and 3, 1897. The average number of clear days was 9, the average number of partly cloudy days 15, and cloudy days 7. The prevailing winds have been from the northeast and the highest velocity of the wind was 48 miles, from the northwest, on July 2, 1897.

Plat Is Filed.

A plat of the property to be condemned by the city for the purpose of establishing a new pumping station with which to supply the normal school with water has been filed in the office of the register of deeds, together with the documents showing the action of the council in the matter. The property to be condemned is lots 5 and 12, block 105, Endion, adjoining the old reservoir on the east. The lots are owned by Charles B. Dunn.

THE FOURTH.

Street Amusement Committee Arranges Program---All Decorate.

The street amusements committee for the Fourth of July, of which William Burgess is the chairman, has arranged, to some extent, for the amusements for the old time exhibition. On First street, between Third avenue west and Second avenue East, in the afternoon, from 2:30 until 5 o'clock, there will be foot races, bicycle races and ladies' races. A greased pole will be erected to give the youth of Duluth and the surrounding vicinity a chance to do some hustling, and there will also be a greased pig let loose among the populace. The committee intends to get a tight rope and trapeze performer to perform among the clouds over Superior street at the corner of First avenue west, and will ask every merchant and business house from Fifth avenue west to Second avenue east to decorate his building with bunting. The color scheme will be to decorate twenty-five feet in red, another twenty-five feet in blue and another in white. All of the crossings of the street and alleys will be decorated with bunting, and the "Welcome" at Fifth avenue west will be lighted up all day and night.

The members of the committee are: William Burgess, chairman; A. T. Park, secretary; P. J. Neff, George Powers and W. E. Kern.

New Ball Team.

A new baseball team is in the field after amateur scalps, and from the reputations of the players will probably get a good many before they quit. They will go under the name of the Duluth Grays, and are working for a game with the Board of Trade people for tomorrow afternoon. The team is composed chiefly of high school players and Y. M. C. A. men. Potter will be behind the bat, Cummings and Ailworth will twirl and Guy Cummings will hold down first. The pitchers will switch off to second and Peterson will play shortstop. Briggs will be on third, Weber and Berg in the north and south fields, and Capt. Congdon in center meadow. A game with Brainerd is practically arranged and they will play in a couple of weeks.

Notice.

There will be a meeting of the members of the Duluth Boat club tonight at 7:30 at the boat house, in the interest of the regatta to be held on the Fourth. All interested are requested to be present.

ARRAIGNED.

George Leissner's Hearing Is Set For Next Tuesday.

George C. Leissner, the wall paper department manager at the Glass Block store, who was arrested yesterday morning on the complaint of John Panton, was this morning arraigned in municipal court charged with embezzling $31.38 of monies belonging to the firm of Panton & White. The warrant was issued by County Attorney McClintock yesterday afternoon. When arraigned this morning Leissner entered a plea of not guilty, and his examination was set for next Tuesday. Judge Edson placed his bail figure at $250, but up to this noon Leissner had not procured any bondsman. The defendant has retained W. J. Barnes to look after his interests.

Mr. Panton said this morning that he has discovered another little irregularity in Leissner's dealings with the firm, and that he is having the matter looked up and put in shape to bring as a charge against the defendant in case he is not held to the grand jury on the charge preferred. Subpoenas have been issued for witnesses from Two Harbors, who are the alleged parties to whom a sale was made at the time that the defendant is charged with appropriating to his own use the money belonging to his employers.

Robert Davis was arraigned in municipal court this morning on two charges. The first was that of drunkenness, on Wednesday evening and Thursday morning. Davis is robust in appearance, but appearances are evidently deceitful, for he says he took but two drinks before breakfast and forgot everything that happened thereafter. He also forgot that while going up Sixth avenue west in his sleep walk that he swung on a small boy without any provocation and smashed, and smashed the lad a heavy blow in the face. The charge against him in this case was assault. Davis pleaded guilty to both charges and paid fines and costs aggregating $25.

James Stewart, the young man that was arrested for making rough house at the Sixth Avenue theater th other evening, this morning pleaded guilty and was fined $5 and costs, which he paid.

There was a goodsized grist of drunks lined up this morning to explain the reason of their downfall, and in several cases it was the old, old story of the "first time ever in court." Stillman Thornton and James Bell pleaded guilty and were released under suspended sentences, as both claimed to have work waiting them and would never again get drunk. Charles Terran pleaded guilty to the same charge and contributed $10 to the city treasury. John Gilmore and George Williams, two wanderers who sleep wherever they find a convenient barn, pleaded guilty of trespass and were released under suspended sentence.

The case of the state against three West End boys for stealing cloth from B. E. Wilberg, a tailor, was disposed of yesterday afternoon. The case against Edward Murphy and Patrick Hughes, two of the boys, was dismissed, and Howard Murphy was found guilty. He was fined the costs of the suit, amounting to $2.24.

GOMPERS ILL.

Labor Leader In Dangerous Condition at Washington Home.

Washington, June 28.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, is lying dangerously ill at his home in this city, suffering from concussion of the brain and a fracture of the skull. Mrs. Arthur C. Neville, of Green Bay, Wis., was elected a delegate to the convention of general federation of women's clubs at Los Angeles, Cal., which meets next year.

Mrs. Sarah Webb Maury, of Louisville, Ky., read a paper on "The Outdoor Art of Schools and Women's Clubs of Louisville," and Mrs. Herman J. Hall, of Chicago spoke upon the "Awakening of a City," referring to the recent work of Chicago along outdoor art lines.

SCANNELL INDICTED.

He Is Charged With Neglect of Duty.

New York, June 28.—Two indictments were returned by the grand jury today against Fire Commissioner John J. Scannell, charging him with neglect of duty. Another indictment was returned jointly charging Commissioner Scannell and William Marks with conspiracy. It is alleged that nearly all supplies for the fire department had been purchased through Marks.

SOLITARY REDSKIN.

Pays Mysterious Visits to Old Burying Ground.

Situated in what is known as "Paint Rock Bend," on Duck river, a short distance north of this place, can be found the burying and camping grounds of a camp of Indians that infested this county back in the early days of the first settlers, and here, as the farmer tills the soil, it is no uncommon thing for him to unearth the bones and ashes of many members of that restless savage tribe who have been sleeping so long with the murmuring waters of Duck river chanting their requiem, and whose last long sleep has been undisturbed only by the song of the farmer boy as he shouts to the lazy oxen, says the Bakerville, Tenn., correspondent of the Memphis Scimiter. No wild flowers bloom and thrive around the groves of these departed braves, nor no marble slab marks their resting place. Now and then a flint rock protrudes a short distance above the ground, indicating a grave, but all day the sun beats down upon these mounds that tell to the relic hunter where rest the bones of many red men who have gone to the "happy hunting ground."

From indications a large number of Indians were buried here, but just how many will never be known, as many of the graves have been opened and the bones removed.

The graveyard was first discovered by a farmer several years ago. While plowing in the field his plow came in contact with several large rocks, and upon investigation it was discovered that the rocks were imbedded several feet in the earth, and further that the field was full of them. He procured assistance and went to work removing the obstructions, and to his great surprise soon unearthed a skeleton, but as skeleton after skeleton was removed, no attention was paid to the matter, as it came to be a very common occurrence. It was known that this was once the camping ground of a tribe of Indians, and the people at once decided that their burying ground had been discovered, a decision which proved true. Hundreds of wagon loads of rocks were removed from the field and the bones cast aside to be turned under at plow time, and the farmer, in pursuing his daily duties, pays no more attention to the skeleton of an Indian than he would to the bones of a beast, so common are they. The graves are dug several feet deep and walled up with flint rock, and as many as four skeletons have been found in one grave.

Between each skeleton is a long, flat rock, which just fits the grave. Their mode of burying was very peculiar. It seems that when one died a grave was dug and walled up, his remains were then placed in the grave, a large flat rock laid on top of the corpse, and the hole filled with dirt. When another one died the remains were carried to the same grave, dirt removed and they were deposited on top of the first one, and a large rock placed thereon. This was kept up until as many as four had been planted in the same grave, and perhaps more, but of all the graves that have been unearthed four bodies have always been found. Earthen vessels of almost every kind fashioned by the tribe have been removed from the graves. Many of these vessels bear peculiar marks and diagrams, and no doubt would have brought a handsome sum from some relic gatherer, but they have been lost or thrown away. The soil is of a black color and loose, and the old Indian graveyard produces some of the finest corn that grows on Duck river.

About seventy-five yards from the burying ground is a mound 16 feet in circumference and 10 or 12 feet high. On top of this mound stands a lone white oak tree upon which is carved the following inscription:

"S. I. one mile from here."

The hand points direct at "Paint Rock," which is exactly the distance from this famous rock, as indicated above. No one has ever been able to interpret the meaning of these simple but strange words, but many people are of the opinion that the "S. I." means silver, and that it is buried somewhere near "Paint Rock."

The inscription on the tree corresponds in some instances with that on "Paint Rock," which has puzzled so many able and learned men, and which many believe was painted there by the Indians, but which tradition says is the work of DeSoto's band.

Several parties have dug into the mound but have failed to find anything. Several feet down fire coals were unearthed, but the task was given up as too great a one. Indian spikes of all shapes and sizes can be picked up in abundance around the mound. Hoes, hewn out of rocks, and other implements are also to be found. Periwinkle shells by the bushel are scattered over the ground. The periwinkles were caught in Duck river and used in making soup, and the shells, which are like unto that of a muscle, were cast aside.

Just across Duck river from this place was the camping ground of another tribe of Indians or Mound Builders. Here four mounds were thrown up, the largest of which is about sixteen feet high. No one has ever attempted to open these mounds, and it is not known what they contain.

About every five years an Indian suddenly appears in this section, remains a few days and then disappears as suddenly as he came. Whether they come in search of hidden treasure, or are seized with a desire to visit the camping ground of their ancestors is not known, and there is but little hopes of the great mystery surrounding "Paint Rock" ever being solved.

A RUSH FOR OIL.

"Speaking of oil stampedes," said a traveling man just in from 'Frisco, to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "a friend of mine was telling me the other day about an oil strike in Alaska which, for strenuousness while it lasted, double-discounted the Beaumont rush. He was with a small party of prospectors returning from Nome in a barkentine, which touched at Eskimo village at the mouth of the Osko-something-or-other river for fresh water. The entire tribe of fur-coated natives came down to the beach to inspect the white men. They all seemed to be enjoying themselves immensely, when, all at once, a duck-legged cuss brute rushed down a neighboring hill, howled 'Ki-yi' in several keys, and before you could bat an eye the entire outfit, men, women and children, were off down the coast at a rapid pace. The miners could not imagine what had terrified the little fellows, so a party followed on down to see the finish. When they rounded a point they ran against the whole tribe of Eskimos swarming like Lilliputs on the carcass of a huge whale. The fish had evidently been wounded by a whaler and had escaped only to die and be washed up on the Alaskan shore. The way those natives were hacking and hauling the blubber of that whale would have disgraced a Canal street bargain counter. The oil was spattering around like rain, and my friend particularly noticed one Alaskan belle who carefully selected a nice white lump of fat, which, with much coquetry, she used to swab her face like an elderdown powder puff. The men fought over the bits, swapped chunks and banged one another like the oiliest promoters of the land."

Powdered soapstone (called talcum) isn't fit for your face. It's foot powder. Satin-Skin is a genuine, pure complexion powder. 25c.

Wheat Market Starts Lower and Shows Little Spirit.

Weak Cables and Excellent Crop Prospects Cause Depression.

Argentine Shipments For the Week Show a Decrease.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 28.—The wheat market started out weak and lower this morning, and the market was dull and spiritless throughout the session. The main cause of the weakness at the opening was a decline at Liverpool, where wheat closed unchanged to ½d lower. The crop prospects were also reported to be excellent, and this had a bearish influence. The Argentine shipments showed a decrease, being 736,000 bus for the week against 888,000 bus last week and 2,235,000 bus last year. France was said to be a good buyer of wheat in New York today. The Modern Miller reports the weather in the winter wheat belt as ideal for harvesting. The crop is nearly all cut and a much larger percentage is being threshed than is usual at this time of the year, owing to the hot dry weather which has seasoned the grain rapidly. The yield is generally beyond expectations and the quality superb, says the Miller. Primary receipts of wheat were 437,500 bus, last year 415,000. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 287,000 bus. Stocks of wheat at Duluth are estimated to decrease 1,000,000 bus this week.

Receipts at Duluth and Minneapolis, 246 cars, against 247 last week and 194 last year. Chicago receipts, 42 cars, none of contract grade.

Trading in futures was dull on the Duluth board. September wheat opened 7c off at 66c, advanced to 66¾c at 9:40, reacted to 66⅝c at 11, and held steady at 66¾@66⅞c to the close, which was at 66¾c. A decline of 8c. Chicago declined 3¼-7/8c and Minneapolis, ½c.

Cash sales were 20,000 bus at July price. September has dropped 4c today and October, 1½c. The advance in the former option this week which was so marked evidently had the effect of causing the shorts to come in and with this interest eliminated the price has dropped almost as suddenly. There was nothing doing in other coarse grains.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 69¼c; to arrive, 69¾c; July, 69¾c; September, 67¼c. No. 1 northern, cash, 66¾c; to arrive, 66¾c. July 66¾c; September, 66¾c; August, 66¾c. No. 2 northern, 61½c. No. 3 spring, 57½c. Oats, 27¼@27c. Rye, 46¾c. Flax, cash, $1.88; September, $1.88; September, Northwestern, $1.42; October, $1.34½.

Car inspection—Wheat, 38; corn, 1; oats, 2; rye, 2; flax, 3. Receipts—Wheat, 36,881 bus; corn, 715 bus; oats, 2517 bus; flax, 12,697 bus. Shipments—Wheat, 258,355 bus.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Easiness Manifest In Wheat and Corn.

Chicago, June 28.—Under the influence of weak cables, wheat today opened easy. Excellent crop prospects brought out considerable long stuff. September opened ½c lower at 66⅞@67c, declined to 66⅜@66¾c and rallied to 67c on covering. Argentine shipments were 736,000 bus compared with 888,000 bus last week and 2,235,000 bus a year ago. Minneapolis and Duluth reported 246 cars against 247 last week and 194 a year ago. Local receipts were 42 cars, none of contract grade.

Later there was another run of commission house selling and the price dropped back to 66½c, but renewed covering caused a slight rally and the close was steady and ⅛@⅜c lower at 66¾c.

Favorable weather and sympathy with wheat caused uneasiness in corn but shorts covered on the decline. September opened 1⅛@⅜c lower at 44⅜@44½c, and advanced to 44¾c. Argentine shipments for the week were 952,000 bus compared with 1,352,000 bus last week and 768,000 bus a year ago. Local receipts were 132 cars, 18 of contract grade.

Steadines prevailed throughout in corn, and the close was unchanged at 44⅝c.

Oats were easy with wheat and corn, September opened unchanged at 26¾c and declined to 26½c. Receipts were 86 cars.

Provisions were steady but dull. Pork was a shade lower at $14.77½@14.80; lard 2½c lower at $8.67½ and ribs unchanged at $8.12½.

MARKET GOSSIP.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 307 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.:

Chicago, June 28.—The tone of the wheat market is heavy and prices dragging. All domestic weather conditions continue favorable. The movement is rapidly increasing. The Modern Miller says a much larger percentage is being threshed than usual at this time of the year, owing to the dry hot weather which has seasoned the grain rapidly. The yield is generally beyond expectations and the quality superb. Snow says winter wheat harvest confidms higher range of estimates, spring wheat five points higher than June and practically perfect. Broomhall cables the Argentine wheat market weak with very small demand for export. New York reports France a moderate buyer of wheat for export.

The tone of the corn market steady. The continued dry hot weather in the Southwest is a factor and that section is buying corn on it. There is a rumor that the Missouri crop report will be very bullish on corn. Snow says present condition of the crop not much above 85 and that only seven times in the past thirty-one years has the July condition been under 90 and then it was lower at harvest. No case on record where the corn with a poor start has wound up better than the start.

The oats market is quite steady. There has been a great improvement in cash demand for oats the past few days for export and sales from this market has been very heavy, largely to Boston. Snow says the present average of oats is lower than in June and the lowest since 1894. We think September oats should be bought. The price is not high and with the existing demand the market ought to have stability.

The provision market was weak and a shade lower. There is some falling off in cash demand also. Stocks are increasing. Receipts at primary markets 67,000 against 73,000.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

Yielding to the Money Rate Followed By a Rise.

An Active Demand Sprang Up From the Bears.

The Closing Was Dull and Strong at the Top.

New York, June 28.—The stock market reflected some feeling of relief in the opening dealings and gains predominated extending to 1⅜ in Atchison and a point in Metropolitan and New York, Chicago & St. Louis second preferred. The few declines were small. Reported buying for Berlin account helped the American department in London and was an influence here.

The market became dull immediately upon the announcement of the Marquand failure. Professional operators awaited the formal closing out of the firms contracts and as they embraced a large variety of the speculative leaders in which the house was interested prices commenced to rise on bidding up of the traders. The gains reached a point in the tractions.

The stimulus which prices received in buying for the suspended firm's account, was maintained after the operation ceased. The transactions in the forenoon were 20,000 shares of various stocks and $16,000 of bonds. Sales for their account were made of Bergen county gas at 30 and 32 compared with 10¼, the final price of Monday last. This stock recovered later to 46 in odd lot transactions.

The stability of the market after the "under the rule" transactions were finished encouraged the bull operators to bid up the western and Pacific stocks smartly causing an improved tone. Union Pacific reached 110 and there were substantial gains in the Atchisons, St. Paul, Southern Pacific, New Yorks, Rockies, Kansas & Texas preferred, Lackawanna, Chicago Terminal Transfer, Tobacco and Amalgamated Copper. At noon speculation had a good tone, though best prices for a few stocks were shaded. Bonds were dull and steady.

With the yielding of the money rate, after the accounts of the failed firm had been closed out, an active demand sprang up from the bears and prices rose with considerable strength. Atchison advanced 2⅜, Erie first preferred 2¼, St. Paul 2⅜, Illinois Central 2¼ and Louisville & Nashville, Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville and Denver & Rio Grande preferred 2 each. The general advance was a point better. Amongst the specialties Colorado Fuel rose 3¾. American Linseed preferred 3⅜, General Electric 3, Tennessee Coal 2½ and Twin City Rapid Transit 2¾. The closing was dull and strong at the top.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf gossip to Edwards, Wood & Co.—While the closing of the Seventh National bank is somewhat of a damper on speculation it is felt that the effect of it will soon pass off and that the most substantial interests in the street have taken advantage on the reaction to add to their holdings of such stocks as Atchison, Union Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Pacific and the Readings preparatory to a dull campaign in July, barring accident in the meantime. More than usual interest attaches to this week's bank statement because of the uncertainty whether last week's reflected loans made about ten days ago by the Pennsylvania Railway company. The writer is informed that these loans aggregated no less than $45,000,000. The earnings of Atchison and Reading for May make sentiment on these securities extremely bullish. Indications that Bertwind and his followers are accumulating the first named stock on a scale are not wanting. The same sort of buying is in evidence in the case of Reading common and second preferred, and is believed to be for Morgan-Keene interests. People close to the latter predict a 20 point raise in Reading second preferred before Autumn. Among the non-dividend paying stocks outside of junior Reading issues Southern Pacific continues to be regarded with the greatest favor and there is an impression, supported by strong circumstantial evidence that the Standard Oil and other inside interests are buying the stock which outsiders are selling on exaggerated reports of the amount of money needed for betterments.

• • •

New York—There is considerable apprehension felt as to the final outcome of yesterday's failure and until more details are made known and the affairs of Henry Marquand & Co. are satisfactorily cleared up the market will undoubtedly remain very sensitive and irregular. It is surprising to the street that the market did not have a serious break. With the money market in present shape it is not likely that any advance will be maintained. Further liquidation is looked for and a lower market is looked for temporarily and considerable stringency in the money market between now and the middle of July.

• • •

Town Topics—We believe that decline today will mark low point and that good stocks are a purchase for improvement during the coming month. On Monday banks will begin disbursements of over 100,000,000 dollars interest and dividends and probably will pay out large amounts. Reductions in international revenue tax will also become operative and this will have a tendency to further ease in money market.

• • •

Ennis & Stoppain—The suspension of a national bank for special causes should not have very much effect upon railroad or industrial values. The quotations of the banks of the country are substantial evidence that they are not only generally considered sound, but in a very strong position. We believe railroad and industrial stocks are very cheap at prevailing prices and that people with money should take advantage of all setbacks to secure them.

ANGERS THEM

Conflicting Tax Decisions Worrying Outside Owners of Property.

The decisions of the supreme court on the forfeited tax sale of 1899 have brought into the auditor's office an avalanche of letters in which irate property owners outside the city, who believe they are being trifled with, express their opinions in no uncertain language.

Outside owners of property are hardly to be blamed for getting mixed up about the matter, when there are local owners that have hard work to figure it out, with the auditor's office easy of access. Of course if everybody had paid taxes promptly every year there would have been no forfeited tax sale and no mix-up, but this was impossible in many cases. After the forfeited tax sale owners, who bought in their own property, or who purchased the title of those who did buy it in, got certificates from the auditor that their taxes were clean, and that there was nothing due on them, then came the decision of the supreme court that the sale was void, and this threw everything out of gear. The sales that were made were illegal, so it was supposed that the taxes had to be paid in spite of the settlement made by the sale.

But many outsiders, holding certificates that the taxes were paid, lost track of the subsequent proceedings, and the first thing they knew their property was advertised for sale at the forfeited tax sale now in progress.

This brought in the letters. Angry owners want to know what kind of a system this county has, and being wholly uninformed about the legal complications of the matter, blame the county officers for all of it. Meantime another supreme court decision comes along to the effect that where no returns have been made the taxes are cancelled and the property cannot be sold, and while this will reassure some of these angry correspondents, it probably will not serve to dispel the darkness that surrounds their viewpoint of the situation.

BULLETS FLEW.

Unknown Men Fire at a River Packet.

Louisville, June 28.—As the Louisville and Evansville mail steamer Tell City was backing out from Schooner Point, Ind., during the night, two unknown shanty boatmen fired on it with a rifle and a shot gun. Many of the shots passed through the pilot house and upper works of the boat, but no person was wounded. It is not known why they fired on the boat. Federal officers will investigate the matter.

Colorado, Utah and South Dakota Excursions.

June 18 to 30, the Northern Pacific railway (Duluth Short Line) will sell tickets to Denver, Colorado Springs, Pueblo, Co., Salt Lake City, Ogden, Utah, Hot Springs, Deadwood, Lead, S. D., and return, at one fare plus $2.00 for the round trip, good returning until Oct. 31. For tickets and full information, call at City Ticket office, 332 West Superior street, or Union depot.

NEWS OF THE LAKES

Keeper of Lighthouse at St. Helena Is Probably Drowned.

Believed to Have Been In Sailboat Which Capsized.

Not Much Tonnage at Chicago Held By Vessel Agents.

Mackinaw City, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—George Laggett, keeper of the light house on St. Helena, is supposed to have been drowned in a heavy squall off this point Tuesday afternoon. A sail boat was seen to capsize, but it sank before help could reach any occupants in it. It was learned today that Laggett left St. Helena that day for this place, and since that time he has not been heard from.

THE FREIGHT SITUATION.

Chicago, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—If a man had a boat he wanted to charter he could get 1⅜ cents on corn to Lake Erie today, but vessel agents did not seem to have much tonnage in hand. Nearly all the grain going forward is being taken to fill out cargoes.

DAINTY WAISTS FOR SUMMER WEAR

Pastel Colors Much Favored, But White Takes Precedence---Lace And Embroidery Extensively Used For Embellishment.

New York, June 25.—A noticeable feature of the season's styles are dainty waists worn with odd skirts, a combination that is both practical and charming. Jacket suits of linen duck, taffeta and similar lightweight materials call for contrasting bodices and in addition, all sorts of white wool skirts are worn in combination with waists of delicate cotton and linen fabrics.

Pale and pastel colors are much favored, but all white is extensively worn and may fairly be said to take precedence of everything else. By way of contrast it is trimmed with cream lace, and heavy appliques are seen upon delicate fabrics, but this means only gradation of shades and the waists still remain white. Linen batiste is much liked and is exceedingly effective over color. Pale tinted blues, pinks and greens are also worn, but the proportion of white to everything else is as eight to two or three. Blondes, brunettes and the multitude of brown-haired women who properly belong neither with the blonde or brunette type all find it becoming and the few whom it does not suit represent a minority so small as to be almost lost.

Materials are many. Batiste, lawn, both linen and cotton, mull, Swiss muslin and all the host of familiar washable fabrics are favored and in addition mercerized mull, silk gingham and silk mull. Many models close at the back. When such is not the case the closing is apt to be blind. In these dressy models few, if any, buttons are seen, lace and needlework hiding them from view. Sleeves are a feature and tucks run rampant. The liner the work and the more labor involved the handsomer and more fashionable the waist. It is a season of dainty workmanship, as well as material. The simplest material exquisitely made takes precedence of the most costly that shows signs of haste.

Fine French bodices are embroidered, the work done into the material itself. An exquisite model of fine sheer batiste shows a tucked yoke, with plain portion below, and a broad strip of needlework between. With this the sleeves are in bishop style, tucked in vertical groups with puffs at the wrists, and include embroidered cuffs. The effect is particularly dainty, but almost equally good results may be obtained by the use of applique. Hand embroidery is undoubtedly beautiful, but it is costly as well and can be indulged in lavishly only by the few. An exceedingly pretty waist that involves far less expert labor than the imported one one in of fine lawn laid in tiny tucks, with two rows of irregular lace applique, one at yoke depth, one midway between it and the waist. The sleeves are snug to the elbow, but form soft puffs just above, and combine with the lawn and the lace, which is cream guipure, in a most effective manner. Both models close at the back and as nearly invisible as possible. A dainty rival is made with the popular elbow sleeves. The yoke is all fine tucks. Below it the blouse is plain with three entre deux of point de Venise an dturns back at the front in tiny revers. The sleeves match the yoke but terminate in soft frills that are lace edged. Worn in contrast with a woollen skirt of either cream or white or with a suit of pique or duck nothing rettier, more attractive or more summerlike could be desired. This season comfort and fashion go hand in hand, and even the stocks are unlaced and are genuinely cool. As lovely a bodice as the most exacting woman could desire is made of sheer lawn tucked over its entire width, but as the material can be purchased ready for use, involves no great labor. The style is that of the plain waist closing at the back, with bishop sleeves. Novelty is obtained by three horizontal entre deux of Valenciennes lace, each two or two and a half inches wide, on the bodice and four in each sleeve and by the unlined lace cuffs and soft stock. The tucking beneath the lace is entirely cut away thus giving a transparent effect and the stock is lined only with plain lawn. As a matter of course the collar is not rigid nor unwrinkled, but its soft lines are vastly more becoming than the hard ones produced by a stiff foundation, beside being more in character with the lace. Simplicity in cut and style is found in all the better sort of waists and may fairly be said to be a distinguishing characteristic. Sailor models are greatly in favor and by simply removing the shield may be left open at the throat. A charming example is made of fine white lawn, the shield and stock being of renaissance lace, with motifs of the lace finishing each corner of the big sailor collar. A graceful design made on the same general lines, but slightly more dressy, includes the big collar and the removable shield, but is cut with elongated fronts that form ties and are knotted where the collar meets. While preferably all materials are of linen or cotton, this last is singularly effective in such thin white silks as India, with trimming of cream applique which can be laundered with success if proper care be taken.

For stout women, those to whom a stock, even of the unlined sort, becomes a trial, some beautiful surplice waists are shown that should win instant admiration. One in particular is of sheer Persian lawn. The fronts are in fine tucks at each shoulder that extend to yoke depth, then fall free to form soft folds, the backs tucked for their entire length. Round the neck and finishing each front is delicate French embroidery and forming an edge a frill of butter colored Valenciennes lace. The neck is open at the front to reveal the throat, but completed by a frill, lace edged, at the back, which is graduated to nothing as it passes the shoulder seams The sleeves are the simple bishop sort that are so desirable for warm days. Nothing more attractive could be imagined than the completed bodice, and nothing more becoming to the many women who possess full round throats that are snowy white. Stocks and high collars are smart and effective when worn by the slender sisterhood; but mean actual suffering to countless women who become simply charming to look upon as well as ideally comfortable when the stock is discarded. The fine needlework, which is the one element of excessive cost, and with entirely satisfactory effect. All the heavier sorts, point de Venise, guipure and Cluny, are much used in contrast with the delicate white materials and exceedingly satisfactory both as applique and en entre-deux, while Valenciennes and Mechlin have an almost equal following, so that ample opportunity and choice are offered. The surplice waist just describe is fully as desirable finished with applique of point de Venise or of Mechlin with soft frills of the lace at the throat and wrists. Nothing is more becoming than soft lace. The one drawback to the popular bishop sleeve is the somewhat hard line of the straight cuff. Edged with a fall of lace it becomes transformed, and, while equally smart, is softening and graceful as well. As has been noted earlier in the season, femininity is the keynote of the summer fashions and these laces are an important factor in achieving the desired result.

Tucks and yoke effects are admirable

WHITE LIBERTY SATIN.

A Handsome Blouse, Made By Hand, With Yoke of Valenciennes Insertion.

Hand-made blouse of white Liberty satin. Yoke of narrow Valenciennes insertion. Vest of tucked satin. Yoke and vest edged with hand-worked white insertion. From John Forsythe.

WHITE LIBERTY SATIN.

Even the Most Fastidious Will Vouch for the Correctness of This Waist.

The beauty of this waist is undeniable. The effect of the creamy satin is enhanced many times by the gayly embroidered Persian bands which form the neck and wrist bands and the decoration down the front.

and are combined in a hundred ways. One of the prettiest yet seen has a foundation of sheer white batiste with cream Mechlin lace and beading run with narrow black velvet ribbon. The deep, pointed yoke is of the lace. Below it the batiste is laid in groups that extend half way of its depth and form soft folds at the lower portion of the waist. Over the yoke is the beading, laid on to form an edge and to cross the foundation, forming diamonds of lace. The sleeves are novel and a feature. From the shoulders to the elbow they are of the batiste, tucked at the upper portion, forming soft puffs below, and from the elbows to the wrists they are of snug fitting lace crossed with beading to match the yoke. Sleeves are all-important elements of the season's gowns and are all things but plain and snug. For simple waists and gowns the bishop is the chosen model, but more elaborate designs are seen upon dressy bodices and show limitless variation. Some of the best are cut on bishop lines, then enhanced by tucks and lace, but fancy sorts abound and elbow lengths are much worn. A fascinating mull waist that is arranged in shirrs includes sleeves that are similarly drawn up round the upper arm and fall into deep frills at or below the elbows. An exquisite gown of point d'esprit shows the sleeves tucked for their entire length, overlapped at the wrists and separated slightly at the shoulders and finished with frills of lace that fall well over the hands. Parisian gowns show many unique combinations, but none more effective than black and white. A recent importation of white crepe de chine with black guipure includes sleeves that are tucked from shoulders to elbows, then left free to form puffs and caught again below the elbows, where they terminate in flaring roll-over cuffs of pale blue satin embroindered with lilies of the valley. Over the closely laid tucks of white are strips of the black guipure, in medallion pattern that leave diamonds of the white between, which finish when the tucks cease and are edged with a band of black velvet ribbon. Paquin is, or appears to be, much given to the looser sort. A favorite model is in bishop style with an opening at the outer portion that extends from wrist to elbow, through which falls an undersleeve of soft contrasting material. Each famous designer has some specialty. By their sleeves they might easily be known, but in selecting from the various models and novelties, study of personality is requisite to attain success. Odd effects are charming and unquestionably smart rightly used and rightly worn; but there is always a danger of becoming bizzare when the oddness is too pronounced.

Grass color parasols are made over color which shows through.

Panne satin, liberty satin and Louisine silk sashes, plain, with double hemstitched ends, or elaborately figured with field flowers and deeply fringed on the ends, are worn by girls of 8 or 10 years, with hair ribbon to match.

The old fashioned strap slipper has been reintroduced this spring for children's wear for dancing and full dress occasions.

Stockings of the finest white silk or lisle thread are worn with white gowns.

Jeweled roses in all colors are a Parisian fancy in hair ornaments.

Hair receivers made of linen and fashioned in cornucopia shape, with the aid of buttons, are among the novelties.

White voile, with hemstitched edge of colored batiste and embroidery above, in design of violets or rosebuds, is one of the newest materials.

The prettiest sleeve links are in the form of a lozenge.

Very large buttons are seen on the latest driving gloves.

In Paris lace mittens, with incrustations of embroidery and sometimes a little delicately appliqued gold thread, are introduced as a substitute for gloves with three-quarter sleeves.

One button gloves, usually of suede, are worn with fussy sleeves.

Buttons of smoked pearl, mother of pearl and imitation colored stones of various kinds now appear with an applique in the form of a delicate tracery in gilt, silver or aluminum.

Chantilly lace, very fine and gossamer like, veils the floral sprays and clusters on some of the daintiest creations of the milliner.

FROM GLOOM TO GLORY.

International Sunday School Lesson For June 30, 1901.

The first six lessons of the quarter were occupied with the account of the resurrection of Jesus and the evidence therefor. The women who rose early on that first day of the week to go to the tomb of Jesus little dreamed of what an eventful day was before them. At dawn they went out to do service to a dead body, but in its place found an empty tomb, with an angel in it, who told them that Jesus was risen. They hastened away to tell their disciples, who did not credit the report until two of their number had gone out and verified what the women had said. Even then, some of them disbelieved or doubted. They all demanded evidence indubitable before they would accept the reality of the event.

The first bit of direct evidence was given to Mary, who was standing by the tomb after the two disciples had gone away. Jesus himself appeared to her, and she recognized Him, addressing Him as "My Master." Then, "Mary Magdalene cometh and telleth the disciples, I have seen the Lord; and how He had said these things unto her."

While all this investigation was going on among the disciples, some of the guards, who had been set to watch the the tomb, went into the city and told the chief priests what had come to pass. Large hush money was given to the soldiers with the instruction, "Say ye, his disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept." The priests also promised to "fix" the governor in case the report came to his ears. So the soldiers went back stolidly to their task of lying with the same grace that they had no doubt performed many another job of infamy at the behest of authority or in response to the allurement of a bribe.

Just after the first report that the tomb was empty had come to the disciples, but before the story of the appearance to Mary had been heard by them, two of their number, not two of the apostles but two of the other disciples, started off for a walk to the village of Emmaus, which was about eight miles southwest from Jerusalom.

While on this walk, a stranger joined them and entered into their conversation. His discourse was exceedingly interesting, so much so, that when they arrived at the end of their journey they invited him to be their guest for the evening. While at supper the guest revealed the fact that he was none other than Jesus himself, about whose recent demise the disciples had been mourning and looking exceedingly sad. They said, "Did not our hearts burn within us while he talked with us by the way?" They hastened back to Jerusalem to tell the rest of the disciples what they had seen and heard, but before they could get a hearing, they had first to listen to the report of how, "The Lord is risen indeed, and hath appeared to Simon."

On that same evening, while the disciples were gathered together, Thomas being absent, and the doors being all shut for fear of the Jews, Jesus came and stood in their midst. He quieted their fears, and clearly identified himself to them as their former companion and master. They believed in him and in the fact of his resurrection. When one of them saw Thomas they told him what had occurred: but he was doubtful, and declared that he would not believe unless he received the same sort of evidence that had persuaded the rest of them. On the next Lord's day the disciples were again assembled together and Thomas with them. Jesus once more appeared in their midst and gave to Thomas the sort and certainty of evidence which he had said was essential to belief. Thomas exclaimed, "My Lord and my God!" Jesus said, "Because thou has seen me thou hast believed; blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed."

After this the disciples began to scatter to their dwelling places in various parts of the land. Seven disciples were together by the sea of Galilee. Peter suggested the idea that they go a fishing. The rest joined in with him, both those who had once followed that vocation for a livelihood and the others who were strangers to the sea. They toiled the night long, but took nothing. At last, in the gray of the early morning, one of their number recognized a man on the beach as Jesus, and Peter at once cast himself into the sea to go with all haste to his Master. There, by a fire of coals, on which the breakfast was prepared, the disciples were made to understand something of the meaning of the wonderful draught of fishes as well as the fact of the resurrection of the Lord. Thenceforth they were to go forth to do the work of Jesus, trusting him to care for them in his own way. This was one of the things essential for them to learn. The lesson of faith and the devotion of love were also taught to Peter on this occasion in a way that must have deeply impressed every one of the disciples. Jesus taught him that his love must express itself in practical service to His followers. After Jesus had indicated that he would have to suffer in His service, Peter was interested in knowing what would become of John. Jesus said very plainly that it was not Peter's business to know about John's future, but only to attend to his own life and work. These are two important lessons for every one who loves Jesus Christ. He must serve Him in the service of man, and he must be content to limit himself to a knowledge of his own duty instead of meddling in the affairs of other people.

The appointment which Jesus had made to meet his disciples in Galilee was faithfully kept by them. The eleven met him there and received the great commission to go into the world and preach the gospel to every creature. Some of them were still in doubt, but their doubts were fast disappearing in the fulness of the evidence that Jesus was actually risen from the dead.

All that we are told with reference to the events that transpired between the resurrection and the ascension is recorded to srow the evidence on which the early church based its belief in the rising from the dead of Jesus Christ. The disciples were persuaded of the fact against their expectations. Some of them were very stubborn against yielding to the evidence, but were finally persuaded because the evidence compelled belief. There is no historical fact any better attested than that Jesus died and was buried, and that he was seen alive again. Paul says, "That he appeared to Cephas; then to the twelve; then he appeared to above five hundred brethren at once, of whom the greater part remain until now, but some are fallen asleep; then he appeared to James; then to all the apostles; and last of all, as unto one born out of due time, he appeared to me also."

The lessons of the quarter have dealt also with the glorification of Christ. There was one morning which always remained radiant in the memory of the disciples. It was the time when Jesus taught them so sweetly and beautifuly of their work in the kingdom, opening their minds to understand the truth, nd bidding them await the fulfillment of the promise of the Father. He then led them out to a spot "over against Bethany," and lifted up his hands and blessed them. Then he was taken into heaven.

Some years later the beloved Apostle John was upon the island of Patmos and was worshipping on the Lord's day; while in an ecstasy of spiritual thought and feeling, he heard a great voice, and turning to see whence came the voice, he beheld Jesus standing in the garb and majesty of his kingly and priestly rule over the churches. He was glorious in majesty, and yet spoke with the same tender and personal interest in the churches that he had always shown toward the individual disciples. He declared that he was alive forevermore, and that he possessed the keys of death and of the abode of the dead. In the course of the visions which John saw on that occasion, there was revealed to him the glory of the New Jerusalem in which Jesus as the Lamb of God is the light, and where the redeemed abide in purity and righteousness.

Jesus ascended, now reigns on high and makes intercession for his people. This was taught in a lesson from the letter to the Hebrews, in which there was set forth the idea of the more excellent ministry of Christ, who makes access to the throne of God for each believer, so that each one is his own priest unto God. Christ's work is wrought out "Through the eternal spirit" in order that all the redeemed may "serve the living God."

One lesson has been omitted, according to their chronological order. The tenth lesson was on the appearance of Christ to Saul of Tarsus. Saul was persecuting the church, when Jesus arrested him on the road to Damascus and revealed himself as the risen One, and called Saul, the zealous Pharisee to become Paul the mighty apostle to the Gentiles. It was the conviction of the fact that Jesus was really risen that made the change in Saul's life. He obeyed the heavenly vision, and went to the work of learning and preaching the gospel of Jesus Christ with all the enthusiasm of his ardent soul. In a few years he was able to write the words, "I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me."

"If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above," were the words of admonition which Paul gave to a company of early Christians." The resurrection ought to have the significance of a new birth to spiritual life unto each one who trusts in Christ. Paul gives some very suggestive remarks on this question in the sixth chapter of Romans. Each believer ought to get up to the mount of vision with Christ in his aspirations after a higher life. The vision which John saw in Patmos revealed a new world and a new man to inhabit it. This is the true view of the power of Christ in the resurrection. The consummation of the Kingdom of God will mean the rebirth of all things that we see. Life itself will then be transfigured into the glory of perfect spirituality.

Paul indicates another important feature in the significance of the rusurrection of Christ. It is found in the fifteenth chapter of First Corinthians. Christ is the first fruits from the dead, but all those who live by his grace shall rise in his likeness. In Adam all die, but in Christ shall all be made alive "The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is of heaven. As is the earthy, such are they also that are earthy; and as is the heavenly, such are they also that are heavenly. And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly."

Pan-American Exposition

Buffalo, N. Y., May 1 to Nov. 1.

In its court settings, architectural, fountain and electrical effects, sculptural adornment, horticultural and floral embelishment, and color decorations this exposition will surpass all others.

To enjoy its charms, with the added attraction of Niagara Falls will be a most delightful privilege.

As the only double track railway from the West to Buffalo (meaning greater safety and dispatch in traveling) and by reason of its furnishing the most complete and frequent service of any line, the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern with its eight through trains daily, including the only daylight train, will prove the most desirable route for exposition travel.

In making it your choice you will travel well. It takes you through the richest and fairest portion of the Middle States, including the beautiful Western Reserve country with nearly 300 miles of ride along the picturesque south shore of Lake Erie.

All tickets over this route afford use of steamers either way between Cleveland and Buffalo, also stop at Chautauqua on return trip within limit of ticket.

DEATH

Hangs Over Him But He Still Stands High.

Anderson the Culprit Has Often Guarded the President.

A strange petition for pardon is before Governor Aycock of this state, says the Raleigh correspondent of the New York Press.

It is for a man who was sentenced to death seventeen years ago, who was taken out of prison by force and never has been caught, and who today is in the secret service of the United States and close to President McKinley under an assumed name.

The man is Waightstill Avery Anderson, and his wife, who has remained steady and true through all these years, during which she has not dared to tell his whereabouts, is the sister-in-law of United Stats Snator Pritchard of North Carolina.

In 1884 Anderson a pronounced Republican, was United States internal revenue officer in Caldwell county, N. C. Revenue officers were not objects of love there. Anderson, who was without fear and always ready to tackle anything, did not increase the affection of Caldwell County for the office. He took his duties as deputy collector seriously, and, since moonshiners were as thick as as the trees in the mountains, he led a busy and obnoxious life.

He had a brother-in-law, named Edward Ray. Their wives were the daughters of Jacob W. Bowman, of Mitchell county, an ex-Judge of the supreme court. In the spring of 1884 Ray and a man named Bailey got into a dispute over a valuable mica mine in Mitchell county. Bailey and his friends, by quick work, got possession of the mine and held it by occupation. When Ray discovered it he determined to "smoke them out." While Bailey and his laborers were at work Ray, who was a dashing dare-devil, built a fire in one of the shafts, expecting that the men would be forced out. But the smoke escaped through an air hole in the mine, and the only result was a bitterness that made both sides ready for violence of a more drastic sort.

Ray hurried to Bakersville, the county seat of Mitchell county, and called on his brother-in-law, Anderson, for aid. He responded unhesitatingly. When the two reached the mouth of the shaft, fighting began almost at once, and Ray was knocked down the shaft by Gebern Miller, one of Bailey's adherents. Miller fell with Ray. The two continued the fight at the bottom of the shaft, and when it was ended Miller was dead. In the meantime Anderson fought with another of Bailey's men, Ed Horton, and killed him. Then Ray and Anderson fled and hid until the excitement ended, when they gave themselves up, asserting that they had acted only in self-defense. They were jailed and a bill of indictment for murder was found against them in Mitchell county.

They had many friends there, and the prosecuting attorney moved for a change of venue to another county, on the plea that the state could not get an impartial trial in Mitchell county. The defendants tried to have the trial held in any county other than Caldwell, where the feeling against Anderson was so hostile that the weekly paper, published in Lenoir, the county seat, printed an appeal to the citizens to lynch the two men. Despite the efforts of their attorneys, Ray and Anderson were tried in Caldwell county, and Ray was declared guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. Anderson was found guilty of murder and sentenced to be hanged. On appeal the supreme court confirmed the sentences of the lower court, and the men were taken to the Asheville jail.

Becoming convinced that their fate was sealed, and all efforts to induce Governor Scales to pardon them having failed, their friends in Mitchell, Madison, Buncombe and other counties met secretly and determined to attempt a rescue. After a careful and elaborate planning, a band of 500 armed men were organized. They had the hidden aid of prominent men in Asheville, who believed that Ray and Anderson had been convicted largely because both were uncompromising Republicans. Through these citizens of Asheville the two prisoners were kept informed of the plans and were ready day and night for what was to happen.

Finally there came a night when a storm of uncommon fury raged. Wind, driving rain and intense darkness made it ideal for the desperate action. All Asheville was driven indoors, and the entire town seemed asleep, when suddenly mountaineers, armed with rifles, pistols and knives, came riding into town from every road that led to it. They galloped without opposition to the jail, where they gathered, 500 strong still in complete silence and without having alarmed a soul.

Quickly two men dismounted and tied the arms of a third man, whom they led boldly to the door of the prison. When the jailer responded to their imperative knock and looked out of the wicket he saw what he thought was a prisoner about to be delivered to him, and opened the door without hesitation or suspicion. Scarcely had he shot the bolts before the mountaineers crowded in. With rifle and revolver barrels pointed at his head from all directions he was helpless and, like a wise man, accepted the fact and obeyed the curt command to keep his mouth shut very tight indeed. In another instant he was bound and gagged and locked in a cell after the assailants had taken his keys. In five minutes more Ray and Anderson were riding through the cordon of the silent mounted men who had remained on guard outside of the jail, and in five minutes more the echoes of 2,000 hoofs were waking the mountain roads.

That was the last that the authorities ever learned of Edward Ray and Waightstill Avery Anderson. Many hundred men in North Carolina knew where they had fled and were in communication with them until they reached safety but to no man who was interested in hunting them was the secret ever breathed.

Ray's wife left North Carolina some time before his escape, and it was understood generally that she had gone to join her husband in his hiding place. But finally she returned to the state, and after a few years Peter C. Pritchard, then practicing law and politics simultaneously, brought suit for her for divorce in the superior court of Buncombe county. It was granted, and in 1892 she and Pritchard were married.

Anderson's wife remained in the state, and through all these years her faith in the man whom she has not seen since 1884 has not faltered. The boy whom he left a baby in his wife's arms on that day when he rode from Bakersville has grown into a fine young man. His other two children—girls—have grown to womanhood and can barely remember their father. His wife toiled bravely to make a living for them, and during the past four years she has been acting as postmistress for Bakersville, having been appointed to the post by President McKinley at the instance of Senator Pritchard.

In all these seventeen years the hatred felt in Caldwell county for Anderson and Ray has not died out. The relatives of Miller and Horton swear that they yet will capture the men who killed them, and that they shall taste Caldwell county justice. So it is that, although Anderson's relatives and friends have been in constant communication with him, they have had to do it secretly and with great precautions. Therefore, though his wife and he have corresponded through tried and trusted go-betweens, they have not dared to meet for fear of putting his enemies on his track.

He is living today under the name which he assumed when he fled. What that name is only his friends know. But under that name he has made such a reputation for himself in a Western state, not far from the Rocky Mountains, that in the last election he was elected sheriff of the county in which he lives by the biggest majority ever given there. And he is not only sheriff but he, and has been for years, one of the most fully trusted of the many trusted men in the mysterious and powerful secret service of the United States.

During many years, when robbers threatened the treasure of the mints on its way from the capital to the great cities, he was the captain of the band that delivered the gold safely at the place of destination. His last service of this character was when $20,000,000 of gold coin in kegs was taken from San Francisco to Washington. This was only a few years ago, and Anderson was in command of the 20 men who faithfully guarded this money across the continent.

During the Spanish American war, when the White House was more carefully guarded than before or since, the sandy-haired blue-eyed, fair-complexioned man, standing a little more than 6 feet in his shoes and as erect as an Indian, whom many saw when passing in front of the portico, was Waightstill Avery Anderson. And they who observed the man of the same description in citizen's clothes standing nearest President McKinley when he was in Chicago at the laying of the corner stone of the new postoffice building saw Waightstill Avery Anderson. In Canton during the campaign of last year, when President McKinley was there, the man in citizen's dress who had such a keen eye for everything that happened near the president was Waightstill Avery Anderson. Those who were in Washington on the recent inauguration day saw, among the men on horseback who were nearest the carriage that bore President McKinley and Senator Hanna and J. K. Jones to the capitol, a sandy-haired, tall man. That was Waightstill Avery Anderson. And if later they noticed the man who stood nearest to the president while he was delivering his address, that was Waightstill Avery Anderson. And on the day when the statue of Gen. John A. Logan was unveiled, of the six men who ranged themselves on either side of the carriage containing President McKinley one was Waightstill Avery Anderson.

And what of Edward Ray?

At one time he seemed to have passed into oblivion. No one seemed to know or care where he was. Most men thought that he had died somewhere, a fugitive and a homeless man.

Not long ago Senator Pritchard was to make an impassioned speech on a subject in which he was deeply interested. Washington knew that something uncommon was to be expected from him. On the day announced for his effort his friends, men and women, crowded the galleries of the United States senate. Directly opposite where Mrs. Pritchard sat, there stood a tall, sunburned man, with deep lines on his face. His form and features were striking enough to make him noticeable. Mrs. Pritchard looked at him curiously more than once. But she did not recognize the lover of her youth. The man looked at her long and earnestly. He stayed through the senator's speech. Then he disappeared and was not seen in Washington again.

But since then he has pined for a chance to visit his old home for only one day. Homesickness has conquered him, and in the midst of the luxury of one of the most beautiful houses in the City of Mexico Edward Ray craves his native mountain air. He has become a very rich man. His fortune has been gained in mining, and his money is piling up around him. It is understood that he was befriended by ex-Governor Alexander B. Shepard, of Washington, D. C., in these operations. He is married to a charming woman, and they have several children. When Gen. Matt W. Ransom of this state was minister to Mexico he had a letter to Ray (under his assumed name, of course), and the two became well acquainted. On more than one occasion the minister was the guest of Ray in his palace-like home. From a rollicking daredevil Ray has become an exemplary citizen.

The Honorable Alfonso C. Avery, the superior court judge who tried Ray and Anderson, has written a most urgent letter to Governor Aycock begging him to grant the pardon. Senator Prichard is intensely interested and has written a letter asking that the pardon be granted. Five of the jury who brought in the verdict of murder have signed the petition. There is a large list of signers from almost every county in the former Ninth congressional district asking for clemency.

Ordinarily such an application would not be considered, because Anderson is "in the woods." But Judge Avery and other leading lawyers have called the attention of Governor Aycock to precedents in the administration of Vance and other governors, where the applicants for pardon were "in the woods," and, notwithstanding, the pardons were granted, and the governor is giving it due consideration.

But bitter and strong protests are being filed against the pardon. The mother of the dead man, Horton, is implacable. She says her boy, who was as dear to her as Mrs. Anderson's husband is to her, was foully murdered, and her life has been one of blackness and despair ever since. She has written to Governor Aycock a touching and firm letter protesting against the pardon, and has aroused her friends to activity in her behalf.

Melvin E. Carter, of Asheville, who defended Anderson, died some years ago, and he left astatement that the conviction of Anderson was a great miscarriage of justice, and that he ought to be pardoned.

Conference Fails to Adjust Steel Scale.

Twenty Thousand Men Will Strike at Once.

Pittsburg, June 29.—The joint conference committee of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers and the American Sheet company and the American Steel Hoop company, which has been in session here, was unable to reach an agreement on the wage scale for the ensuing year and adjourned finally after a session of less than twenty minutes.

The Amalgamated association officials asked that the scale be signed for all the union mills, and the manufacturers presented a counter proposition refusing to sign for all the union mills.

The conference then broke up and President Shaffer at once issued a strike order. The strike will involve all the union sheet mills in the country, and about 20,000 skilled workmen.

When seen by a representative of the Associated Press, President Shaffer said: "The American Sheet Steel company signed the scale last year in all our mills except the Woods mill at McKeesport.

"During the year they took advantage of the conditions existing at the Scottdale and Saltsburg plants to lead the workmen from the organization, and now offer to sign the scale at the reduced number of union mills. The policy of the Amalgamated association under my administration has been conservative and for peace, but it is merely a matter of which side holds out the longest now."

When asked what the strike order meant, he said:

"It's a fight. They threw down the gauntlet and we took it up. That's what it means."

A shut down of the union plants of the American Sheet Steel company will involve nine of the largest sheet plants in the country. The company operates a total of twenty-four plants, but the largest of these are the organized ones. The Amalgamated association controls 65 per cent of the production of the company, and a long shut down of this portion of its plants would mean an inestimable loss with the present crush of orders.

Notwithstanding President Shaffer's order, it is thought another effort will be made next week to effect a settlement, as it is well known that neither side is anxious for a protracted shut down. The Amalgamated officials would not object to a suspension of two or three weeks, for the reason that the men are worked out with the steady run ever since the first of the year.

Pittsburg, June 29.—The bar iron wage conference between the officials of the Amalgamated association and representatives of the Republic Iron company and American Steel Hoop company reconvened at the Hotel Lincoln at 2 o'clock this afternoon. The session probably will continue until late tonight, as a determined effort is being made to reach an agreement.

None of the officials of either side would make a prediction as to the outcome of the conference. I. W. Jenks, of the American Steel Hoop company, admitted that a number of points in the scale had been agreed to, but they were subject to an agreement on the entire scale. It is believed that if a settlement is not made today or tonight that both sides will come to an agreement soon.

TUNNEL ROOF CAVED IN Pennsylvania Train Was Buried Beneath the Debris But Fortunately All the Passengers Escaped Without Serious Injury.

Baltimore, June 29.—The roof of the Union railroad tunnel in the eastern section of the city, used and controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad company, caved in early today. It is supposed a defect in the arch of the tunnel caused the accident.

A narrow escape from death or serious injury was experienced by the passengers and crew of an express train, which was caught by the falling debris in the tunnel.

The train was the regular north-bound express which leaves Union station at 1:08 o'clock in the morning, consisting of three baggage and express cars and three passenger coaches. As far as can be learned, the avalanche of earth and rocks caught the rear express car which was immediately in front of the passenger cars. The train was running slowly and the jar was not severe. The engineer quickly brought his train to a full stop and word was sent to the Union station. A yard engine drew the coaches back to Union station without the occupants being aware of the danger through which they had passed. The houses on each side seemed perilously close to the brink and should an further cave-in occur they will be precipitated into the cavity.

AMOUNTS TO NOTHING

The State Department Has Not Heard of the Flag Incident at Skaguay and Will Take No Action.

Washington, June 29.—The state department has not received any representation concerning the flag incident at Skagway, where much excitement is said to have been caused by the hauling down of a British customs ensign at that place.

The modus vivendi made on Oct. 20, 1899, between Secretary Hay and the British charge here, established a provisional line running some distance north of Skagway, the summit of the Chilkoot pass and of the White pass, being the two main trails in that locality. Reference to the official map indicates that Skagway is clearly within the American line according to this modus vivendi, also all tidewater of the Lynn canal. If a custom officer at Skagway uses the flag as a means of convenience of locating imports before they reach the wild region over which the actual provisional line runs, under such circumstances it is felt that some toleration should be shown on both sides. For the present no official attention will be given the incident as it is not before the department in any form.

PRISONERS.

Boers at Bermuda Seem to Be a Cheerful Lot.

Hamilton, Bermuda, June 29.—The British transport Armenian, which arrived in these waters yesterday, brought 930 Boer prisoners. She anchored in the sound, half a mile west of Darrell's island. The gunboats Medway and Medina, as guardships, are anchored on either side of the transport.

Crowds of people in boats sailed around the transport yesterday. Only government officials are allowed on board. The Boers, from bearded men of 70 to youths of 17, swarmed on the forward deck, laughed and lifted or waved their hats to the passers by. Several of the prisoners inquired eagerly for fruit, tobacco and grog. They say they have no cause to complain of their treatment.

The sound today is alive with craft carrying stores and workmen to the islands where the camps are being prepared to receive the Boers.

NOT SUFFICIENT.

Evidence Offered For Warrant For Seventh National.

New York, June 29.—United States Commissioner Shields said today that the evidence submitted by certain persons looking to the prosecution of officers of the Seventh National bank was not sufficient to justify him in issuing a warrant. The attorneys for the applicants for the warrant were given until next Monday to present additional evidence.

PENSIONS GRANTED.

BRITISH DECLINE

In Matter of Sports England Has Dropped Far Behind.

Horse Racing Especially Has Been Going to the Bad.

Blue Book Shows Interesting Boer Correspondence With Roberts.

London, June 29.—The Sporting Times in today's issue, again bewails the decline of British sports in several directions. It says:

"There can be little doubt that for a considerable number of years horse racing in England has been going to the bad, but this decay we believe, is being arrested. Our system had degenerated into the theory that the race horse is a rare exotic. We had got into the bad system with our racers that we seem to be drifting into with our yachts. Lipton may be getting a good advertisement with the Shamrock, but whether he is doing yachting any good is another matter. The vessels are unfit for any use or purpose whatever, and while they are capable of doing a great rate of speed over short, easy courses, they cannot carry their own rigging over a long one. They are equal to the 5-furlong bursts that for so many years we pandered to in horse racing. The art of training and riding a horse in a long distance race was almost lost and everything on the English turf had become artificial. The result of all this treatment is that we can now barely hold our own against the foreigner. We ought to endeavor to produce more horses of the American stamp, that are not exhausted for months by a single effort."

A blue book was issued this morning giving the correspondence between Lord Roberts and the Boer authorities on the subject of the destruction of property. Its contents are generally known. The presidents of the Transvaal and Orange Free State, Feb. 3, 1900, protested against "the destruction and devastation of farms by barbarians, encouraged by British officers and by white brigands, contrary to the usages of war."

Later, Gens. Botha and DeWet made similar complaints of the "Godless barbarities and atrocities of the British and their robber patrols."

Lord Roberts replied in a similar vein to all the protests, declaring that the British did not encourage the barbarians, but that the burning of farm buildings was necessitated by treacherous shooting of the British from farm houses and the wrecking of trains and accusing the Boers of wanton destruction and guerilla tactics which he was compelled to repress by exceptional measures always employed by civilized nations in like circumstances.

A blue book on India just issued, shows that £18,390,000 was expended for the relief of famine sufferers during the year 1899-1900.

The mortality from the plague for the five years ending March, 1901, was nearly 900,000.

The census completed in March, 1901, shows that the increase in population during the past ten years was only five to six millions, instead of the normal nineteen millions. The loss represents deaths from famine and the deaths in consequence of the famine.

REORGANIZE.

Prospects of Continuance of the Seventh National Bank.

New York, June 29.—The Times says: At a conference of a number of the leading stockholders of the Seventh National bank, held at the Waldorf-Astoria last night, it was decided to reorganize the bank, which closed its doors Thursday, and to continue business, provided such action met with the approval of the stockholders as a body.

It was decided to send out a statement outlining the details of the plan of the proposed reorganization and calling upon stockholders for an assessment of 100 per cent upon their holdings.

William Nelson Cromwell, counsel for the bank made this statement last night: "The investigations are being conducted at the bank, one by its counsel and the present administration to determine on actual verities, its condition through experts; the other by the national bank examiner and receiver, Mr. Raynor. The present administration is not thoroughly familiar with the affairs of the bank. In such circumstances it is idle to suppose that anyone would venture a forecast as to its future, what may fall to the lot of the stockholders and how the depositors will fare. We are proceeding in our investigation with our own experts.

BROKE CRANKSHAFT.

Furst Bismarck Was Delayed Slightly on Trip.

New York, June 29.—The Hamburg-American line steamer Furst Bismarck arrived today from Hamburg, Southampton and Cherbourg about two hours behind her usual time of arrival, the delay being caused by the breaking of the crankshaft of the starboard engine at 5 a. m, June 25. The steamer's position at the time was Lat. 44.10, Long. 40.50. The accident will not delay the steamer from sailing on her regular trip next Thursday, July 4. Fine weather and a smooth sea prevailed at the time of the accident. The Bismarck brought 269 cabin and 321 steerage passengers.

DASTARDLY

Fast Express on Pennsylvania Ditched.

Deliberate Attempt at Train Wrecking.

Pittsburg, June 29.—The Southwestern express on the Pennsylvania road, known as train No. 21, was ditched at the East End Siding, two miles east of Greensburg, Pa., at an early hour this omrning. Only three passengers were hurt and their injuries were not of a serious nature. Their names are: Louise Hullton, Brooklyn; J. J. Harbison, Louisville, Ky., H. B. Lloyd, Cincinnati. The other passengers escaped with a shaking up and the injured were able to continue on their way.

It is thought that the accident was a deliberate attempt at train wrecking and a searching investigation will be made. The switch had been turned and the lock broken, but the engine, express and combination baggage cars got over safely. The last truck of the first sleeper jumped the track and the four sleepers following were thrown over against the embankment. The passengers were transferred to another train and brought to this city.

TRAVESTY OF JUSTICE

The Military Court Composed of Volunteer Officers Reiterates Its Acquittal of Contractor Harold M. Pitt.

Manilla, June 29.—The military court composed of volunteer officers which, June 26, acquitted Harold M. Pitt, manager of Evans & Co., government contractors, on charges of improperly purchasing government stores, which verdict Provost Marshal Davis ordered to be reconsidered has reiterated its acquittal of Pitt. The latter's ignorance of the law and the uncertain testimony of Capt. Barrows were given as reasons for Pitt's non-conviction. The volunteer officers who composed the court which tried Pitt complete their service June 30.

Gen. Davis, who, when he ordered the reconsiderstion of the first verdict considered that Pitt was convicted on his own admissions, now characterizes the verdict as a travesty of justice.

SUFFRAGE IN ALABAMA

Restrictions and Conditions For Voting Proposed to Constitutional Convention as a Part of the Constitution.

Montgomery, Ala., June 29.—A suffrage and elections article for the proposed new constitution was submitted to the constitutional convention today. It provides that, to vote at any election, a citizen shall have resided in the state at least two years, county one year and precinct or ward three months preceding the election, and he shall have been duly registered and shall have paid all poll taxes due. Following are the male citizens, who are citizens of the United States, 21 years old or upwards, qualified to register prior to Jan. 1, 1903: All who have honorably served in the land or naval forces of the United States in the war of 1812 or in the war with Mexico or in any war with the Indians, or in the civil war between the states, or who honorably served in the land or naval forces of the Confederate states; lawful descendants of persons above mentioned; all others of good character and who understood the duties of citizenship and the obligations of the elective franchise.

After Jan. 1, 1903, the following persons and no others, shall be qualified to register as electors:

"Those who can, unless prevented by physical disability, read and write any article of the constitution of the United States in the English language and who, being physically able to work, have been regularly engaged in some lawful occupation or business, trade or calling for twelve months next preceding the time they offer to register.

"The owner in good faith in his own right, or the husband of a woman who is the owner of forty acres of land in the state, upon which they reside, or the husband of any woman who is the owner in her own right, of real estate in Alabama, of the value of $300 or more, or the owner, or the husband of a woman who is owner in her own right of personal property assessed at $300 or more; provided, that all taxes due by him for the year next preceding shall have been paid."

Following are the persons disqualified both from registering and from voting: All idiots and insane persons, those who shall be disqualified from voting at the time of the ratification of this constitution, and those who shall have been convicted of treason, murder, arson, embezzlement, malfeasance in office, larceny, obtaining property or money under false pretenses, perjury, subordination of perjury, robbery, assault with intent to rob, forgery, bribery, assault and battery on the wife, bigamy, living in adultery, receiving stolen property, sodomy, incest, rape, miscegenation, crime against nature, or any crime punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary, or of any infamous crime or crimes involving moral turpitude; also persons who shall have been convicted as vagrants or tramps, and any person who shall sell or offer to sell his vote or the vote of another, or who shall buy or offer to buy the vote of another, in any election by the people or in any primary election or to procure the nomination or election of any person to any office or who shall suborn any witness or registrar to secure the registration of any person as an elector. A poll tax of $1.50 and county registration boards are provided for.

MUCH GLASS.

New Jersey Factories Will Close Best Season In History.

Millville, N. J., June 29.—The glass factories throughout Southern New Jersey will close with the end of this month after one of the most successful seasons in the history of the industry. The plants in this city, which are the largest in the East were compelled to work overtime to get out all their orders before closing for the summer. The demand has been greater than the supply and many large orders for foreign buyers have not been filled and are left over until next winter.

ON SUNDAY

Regiments at Presidio Will Be Mustered Out.

San Francisco, June 29.—It is the intention of the military authorities to muster out all the remaining regiments at the Presidio on Sunday. Four thousand soldiers are expected to purchase tickets to the East and South and a special staff of clerks has been ordered to be on hand for the occasion. Special trains will await the soldiers at the Oakland Mole and they will be able to start East as late as 11 p. m.

IMPORTANT CHANGES.

San Francisco, June 29.—The Call says: "It is now generally believed that some important changes are about to be made in the accounting department of the Southern Pacific Railway company. Several officials in the auditing branch of the service have received letters requiring their appearance at Omaha. They left last evening, among them being E. E. Holton, the auditor.

WILL FIX IT.

King's Oath at Coronation to Be Modified.

London, June 29.—The report of the select committee of the house of lords appointed to consider the accession declaration of the sovereign, in regard to transubstantiation, finds that the language can be advantageously modified without diminishing its efficacy as security for the maintenance of the rotestant succession. The form of declaration suggested by the committee does not contain phrases relative to idolatry, etc., which are so objectionable to Roman Catholics.

STRUCK BY TRAIN.

Demented Woman Loses Her Life at Cleveland.

Cleveland, June 29.—The head and left arm of Mrs. A. T. Taylor, of 46 Euclid avenue, were found early today on the Wheeling & Lake Erie railway trestle at Brookside Park. The body was later discovered in a pool near this trestle. The woman's mind was affected and she wandered away from home while demented.

BOWEN ABOARD.

Liverpool, June 29.—The Cunard line steamer Campania, which sails from Liverpool today for New York, will have among her passengers Herbert W. Bowen, United States minister designated to Venezuela.

BRINGS SUIT.

McCarthy Bros. & Co. After the Weare Commission Company.

McCarthy Bros. & Co. have begun suit in district court against the Weare Commission company to recover $5611.25 alleged to be due on a trade in Northern Pacific stock made by the plaintiff through the company's local office in Duluth this spring. In its answer the company claims that it is not responsible for the debt, because it was a gambling contract and a bucket shop transaction.

Besides the suit in the district court the matter is before the board of trade arbitration company, and the company has been summoned to appear July 3 and arbitrate the matter according to the rules of the board. The trouble is an outcome of the flurry in Northern Pacific some weeks ago. The company is a prominent Chicago concern, and for some time it had offices in Duluth in charge of George Rupley. As a result of the trouble both of the local offices were closed and the company drew out of the Duluth field.

Several claimants against the company settled for 50 cents on the dollar, but the plaintiffs in this case refused to make any settlement. They did offer to arbitrate the matter before the board arbitration committee, but the company is understood to have refused to do this.

The complaint in the case was filed in district court yesterday afternoon, and it recites that between Feb. 1 and May 10 there were mutual financial dealings between the parties by which there was a balance due the plaintiffs of $5611.25 on the latter date.

The answer of the company has not yet been filed, but it has been served on John S. McCarthy, the local member of the plaintiff firm, and it is alleged in it that the transactions referred to were not reported to the company by the local manager. It is claimed that though Mr. Rupley was manager of the local branch, he was also in business on his own account, and that the dealings were with him personally. It is further alleged that the transactions were gambling deals of a bucket shop nature, and not subject to recover under the law.

As to this Mr. McCarthy says the deal was an investment, and no gamble or bucket shop trade. The Weare Commission company is represented locally by J. L. Washburn and W. D. Bailey.

IN MICHIGAN.

Shipments of Lumber From Menominee Were Very Heavy.

Menominee—During the five months in the winter of 1900-'01 the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Wisconsin & Michigan railroads brought 48,000,000 feet of logs into the twin Cities, for which the Menomines companies paid nearly $100,000 freight. John Porterfield, the expert scaler employed by the St. Paul road, is authority for these figures. The St. Paul road hauled 31,000,000 feet of logs, and the Wisconsin & Michigan road 15,000,000 feet, the St. Paul shipments making 1600 carloads and those of the other road 1000. On an average the St. Paul is bringing thirty carloads into the twin cities daily, most of them for A. Spies, the Bay Shore Lumber company, the A. W. Clark Lumber company, and the John Schroeder Lumber company.

Iron Mountain—The St. Paul passenger train from the north due at Iron Mountain at 11:32 a. m., did not arrive until 3 p. m. The delay was caused by the entire train, locomotive and four coaches, jumping the track at Sawyear's lake between Channing and Floodwood. New steel had just been laid there and it is thought that the bolts were not tightened as they should be, or that the rails spread.

Perronville—LaBranche Bros., the sawmill operators of Faunus, it is reported, have closed a deal for the purchase of the sawmill, shingle mill, timber holdings, buildings, etc., at Perronville, Menominee county. This means they have practically purchased the town as Mr. Perron was nearly "the whole thing" there. The new firm has purchased several thousand acres of valuable timber land and will stock their mill for ten years or more. A new dam will be built across Ten Mile creek at Perronville, and another several miles further up the stream, which will enable the new purchasers to float their logs.

Sault Ste. Marie—David Rogers, a passenger on the schooner John B. Wilbor, in tow of the steamer Worthington, was instantly killed at the Soo Tuesday evening about 7 o'clock. Rogers, who was working his passage on the schooner, attempted to jump from her to the wall of the south pier, at the head of the canal, in order to take a line. He miscalculated the distance and fell in the water just as the schooner swung against the pier. The starboard fender streak of the vessel struck his head and crushed it against the timbers of the pier. As the boat swung away the body sank to the bottom of the canal. Death must have been instantaneous. The dead man was about 50 years of age and was known to be unmarried. A friend named Fletcher thinks he was alone in the world. A letter from a Detroit friend was found in his pocket and to the writer of this news of Roger's death was sent.

A DISTRESSED MOTHER.

Her Son Sent to Training School.

Charles Tumpchock, a 13-year-old boy residing with his mother at 471 Garfield avenue, was tried in municipal court yesterday on the charge of stealing scrap iron from the Northern Pacific Railway company. The lad was found guilty and was sentenced to spend the remainder of his boyhood days in the state training school at Red Wing. This is not the first offense committed by the boy and the court decided that the influences of the school would be the best thing for him during the next few years. After the sentence, and as the officers started to lead the lad to the station, the mother created a scene by throwing her arms about the boy and pleading in the Polish language, unintelligible to the officers. She could not understand English and it was impossible for the officers to convince her that the boy was not being taken to a dungeon somewhere. They had to finally take the boy from his mother by main force, the latter lingering about the station for several hours afterward in a hysterical condition.

FOURTH OF JULY CELEBRATION

Complete Details of the Program For the Holiday In Duluth.

All of the arrangements for Duluth's mammoth Fourth of July celebration have been about completed and the various committees will report to the general committee early Monday morning, giving detailed programs. The full program will be arranged and printed in the form of regulation circus dodgers, and these will be distributed around the city and throughout the vicinity. All of the members of the committees have been working hard for the success of the affair, and that it will be a success no one can doubt, as more favorable indications have never been shown in any former display. All of the people of Duluth are interested in the occasion, and many of their friends and relatives will doubtless take advantage of the low rates offered by the railroads to visit in the city during the five days. Many strangers will be in town, and it will do the community much good in a patriotic way. Everyone will have a chance to get out and let his blood tingle as he listens to the strains of "Yankee Doodle" and the "Star Spangled Banner" and hear the fireworks pop. There will be more patriotism in Duluth that day than there has been for a long time, and a good many citizens will find that they are regulation kids again. The committees have done their work well and the thanks of all are due them.

The committee on publicity and transportation has been busy posting and billing the various towns from here to Halifax. The railroads have been very courteous in extending passes to the billposters, and have permitted the committee to paste up their bills as far as they wish. Every postable place has been posted, and there are mighty few people in Duluth and surrounding vicinity who are not cognizant of the fact that Duluth is going to make some smoke on that day.

The following rates have been secured: Round trip from all of the Mesaba range towns, good from the 3rd until the 6th; round trip from Tower, $2.25. A special train will be run from Ely at 5 o'clock Thursday morning, returning the same evening, on which the rate will be $2.50. The patriots can come from the Iron Range and get back safely for the price of one fare. Houghton, Hancock and the rest of the south shore towns have been posted by Capt. Singer, who has given rates on his boats and expects to bring in from 300 to 350 people from that locality. He has also covered the north shore district and expects to bring in about 300 people from that section. Between 10,000 and 15,000 people are expected to be in the city for the four days of the celebration.

All of the newspapers in the surrounding locality print details of the glorification today, and the railroad rates, etc., will be given fully. It was probably owing to the fact that most of the papers are so close that some of the people in the smaller cities had not heard fully concerning the rates. The Herald received a letter from an Eveleth citizen yesterday stating that no rates had been made from that place, but the rate from all of the Mesaba range towns is the same, $2.

THE GRAND PARADE.

Magnificent Demonstration With Thousands In Line.

The committee in charge of the great parade met last evening and settled all but a few of the details of the great parade which is to take place on the morning of the Fourth. This will be the greatest ever seen in Duluth and thousands of people will be in line. There will be five bands, the greatest aggregation of music ever seen in Duluth at one time. The labor unions, fraternal societies, school children and in fact all of the people of the city have entered into the plans for the parade with good spirit and its success is certain.

Maj. Resche has been selected for grand marshal of the parade and will have a large number of aides. The committee is anxious that every society and body which takes part will have one representative mounted and in the full uniform or regalia of his organization, to act as an aide to Marshal Resche.

Superior street at the time of the parade must be cleared of all vehicles. The parade will occupy the full street, under the arrangement that has been made, and if the street is blocked with rigs it will be interfered with. Then, too, the presence of horses will be dangerous, and the safety of the people taking part demands that the street be cleared to the curb line. The police will enforce this, and it behooves everyone to observe the order that will be carried out.

Another regulation which Mayor Hugo will promulgate and enforce to the strict letter is that there shall be no shooting of firecrackers or any explosives along the line of march during the parade. Accidents will be hard to avert unless this order is strictly complied with. There will be a large number of children in the parade, and they must be protected from danger.

The committee has decided also that it will be best to allow no advertisements in the parade. Some of the business houses of the city had decided to enter floats and other methods of advertising, but the committee has decided that it will only make confusion and cause jealousy to allow this. Societies and organizations will be allowed to have floats, however.

The parade will move at 10 o'clock sharp. Maj. Resche announces that this will be observed if there are only two people on hand to start. It is absolutely necessary, in view of the program which must be carried out.

The order of march which has been decided upon is as follows:

FIRST DIVISION.
Platoon of Police.
Chief Marshal and Staff.
Third Regiment Band.
Company C, M. N. G.
Company A, M. N. G.
Soldiers of All Nations. Company C's
Grand Military Pageant of Nations.
SECOND DIVISION.
Boys' Drum Corps.
Boys' Brigade in Uniform.
School Children.
THIRD DIVISION.
Band.
Labor Unions.
FOURTH DIVISION.
Band.
Fraternal Societies.
Mayor, City Officials, Aldermen and Visitors.
Hon. R. G. Evans, of Minneapolis, Orator of the Day.
L. C. Harris, Reader of Declaration of Independence.
SIXTH DIVISION.
Band.
Knights Templar.
Masons.
Grand Master of Masons Gideon S. Ives, of St. Peter.
Members of Grand Lodge of Masons of Minnesota.

The order in which the fraternal societies will march will be decided by lot. The Trades and Labor assembly will decide the order of march of the different labor unions. The Ely Finnish Temperance society, being the guest of the city, will of course have the place of honor.

The parade will form on First street with the first division resting on Third avenue east. The point of concentration for each division will be announced later. The school children will form on East Second street, opposite the high school building.

The line of march will be as follows: Down Third avenue east to Superior street. West on Superior street, passing city hall, where Mayor Hugo and the city officials will review the parade, afterward joining in. West on lower side of Superior street to Eighth avenue west; countermarch there and return to Lake avenue or upper side of Superior street; north on Lake avenue to Second street, west to First avenue west, site of the library building.

The arrangement of the line of march is such that the parade will be visible to all persons taking part in it.

The health department will organize a Red Cross service to act during the parade. Water will be provided along the line of march and any persons who may become faint or suffer any indisposition will be taken care of. It is not anticipated that there will be anything of this kind for the line of march is not very long, but as a precautionary measure it is deemed excellent.

AT THE LIBRARY BUILDING.

The Exercises of Laying the Corner Stone.

As there is a regular ceremony for the laying of corner stones always used by the Masons, it will be employed in this case. After the procession arrives at the library building the Masons, who will be at the rear, will drop out and take charge of the affair. "America" will be sung by a chorus of 100 male and female voices taken from the high school and St. Paul's church choir, under the badership of A. F. M. Custance.

The grand master, ex-Lieutenant-Governor Gideon S. Ives, will have charge of the ceremony, and a musical program will be given during the laying of the stone. A male chorus, "Our Country, Flag and Heroes," will be sung by the Svea Glee club and several selections will be played by the orchestra while the contents of the casket are being read, and the casket covered, after which the grand master will take the trowel and place the plaster upon the base. The stone will be lowered into place by degrees, verses of music being sung by the Scottish Rite quartet during each interval. The water, grain and oil will be scattered over the stone while "God of Our Fathers" is sung by the chorus. L. C. Harris will read the Declaration of Independence, after which the orator of the day, Hon. R. G. Evans, of Minneapolis, United States district attorney, will be introduced. At the close of the oration, "The Star Spangled Banner" will be sung by Miss Anna Firrell and chorus, and after the singing of a doxology the crowd will disperse.

The cornerstone will be on the northeast corner of the building, three feet long and twenty inches wide, and the inscription will be in raised letters, as follows:

By the
MASONIC FRATERNITY.
July 4, A. L. 5901.
G. S. IVES, M. W. G. M.

A copper casket will be placed at the bottom of the cornerstone, and its contents will be as follows: History of the public library, catalogue of books now in the library, plans of the library, photograph of Andrew Carnegie, program of cornerstone-laying, copies of the current newspapers of the city, list of city officials and aldermen, names of the library board, various Masonic grand lodge reports, views of the present city of Duluth, Proctor Knott's speech on Duluth, and other matters pertaining to Duluth's library.

AT DRIVING PARK.

Program of Races and Balloon Ascension.

For the afternoon any number of amusements will be provided. The chief place of attraction will probably be the driving park, where the committee on amusements has provided for a fine program of races and sports.

There will be three horse races, a 3-minute race, 2:30 race and free-for-all. It is possible that it may be found advisable to change the 2:30 race to a 2:27 class. In the first two races the purse will be $200 each and in the free-for-all it will be $250.

It will be necessary to charge a small admission to the grounds to pay the purses. Privileges have also been sold and there will be refreshments sold on the grounds.

The committee has had ten applications for privileges for games of chance, but has turned down every proposition of that kind instantly. Applications for the privilege of selling liquor on the grounds have also been made in large numbers, but were not considered for a moment. The committee is determined to have nothing on the grounds that will be at all objectionable and to make the place one to which every man can take his family or his best girl.

There promises to be a fine field of horses for the races and the string will include a number from abroad. The committee is determined that the races will be strictly on their merits, with the best horse winning and no juggling. The judges, starter and other officials of the track have not all been selected as yet.

During the heats of horse races there are always long waits that are tiresome and the committee has endeavored to find relief from this feature and thinks it has. The Herald newsboys have offered to enter a series of contests of an original nature and, it goes without saying, amusing, too, and the committee has decided to accept. The boys will be in charge of A. C. Pearson, circulator of The Herald, who is a past grand master of the art of handling a crowd of newsboys. The following program has been arranged and speaks for itself:

First event—Fast dressing race. Each boy to take off his hat, coat, vest and shoes. All to turn their backs to their clothes, which will be mixed up in one big bundle and at the word "go" will dress. The first boy apeparing at the judge's stand in his own clothes will win.

Second event—Animal race. Boys to start on all fours and put palm of hands on the ground at every step. First boy crossing the line gets first prize.

Third event—Leap frog race. Boys to be paired off. Each pair to start at command jumping over each other. No one allowed to run after the jump. First pair crossing the line wins.

Fourth event—Bun eating contest. Twenty buns soaked in blueberry juice or black molasses to be suspended from a horizontal line. Twenty boys to compete, each to have his hands tied behind his back. The first boy through eating the bun to which he is assigned wins the prize.

Fifth event—Three-legged race. Boys to be paired off and the right leg of one to be tied to the left leg of the other. First pair crossing the line to win.

Sixth event—Hopping race. Each boy to hop on one foot and first crossing the line wins.

Seventh event—One hundred-yard dash.

Another feature of the entertainment at the riving park will be a big balloon ascension. A contract has been made with the T. I. Case Balloon company for an ascension, and it is to come regardless of the state of the weather.

STREET AMUSEMENTS.

Fine Program Arranged For the Afternoon.

The street amusements committee for the Fourth of July, of which William Burgess is the chairman, has arranged for the amusements for the old time exhibition. On First street, between Third avenue west and Second avenue east, in the afternoon, from 2:30 until 5 o'clock, there will be foot races, bicycle races and ladies' races. A greased pole will be erected to give the youth of Duluth and the surrounding vicinity a chance to do some hustling, and there will also be a greased pig let loose among the populace. The committee will get a tight rope and trapeze performer to perform among the clouds over Superior street, at the corner of First avenue west, and every merchant and business house from Fifth avenue west to Second avenue east will decorate his building with bunting. The color scheme will be to decorate twenty-five feet in red, another twenty-five feet in blue, and another in white. All of the crossings of the street and alleys will be decorated with bunting, and the "Welcome" at Fifth avenue west will be lighted up all day and night.

FIREWORKS DISPLAY.

Magnificent Exhibition Arranged For the Evening.

Fireworks is the principal accompaniment of the Fourth, and the committee has provided a display that probably has never been equalled before in this part of the country. Five thousand dollars to spend on fireworks may seem to some like burning money, but to have a Fourth of July celebration there must be fireworks, and if the celebration is going to be a big one there must be lots of them. Therefore the fireworks committee has gone ahead and gotten together an aggregation of Roman candles, cannon crackers and red lights that would do credit to any city. The fireworks committee has received communications from nearly all of the prominent manufacturers of pyrotechnical displays in the country, and has chosen "Paine's Prize Program 'X-X-X' with special alterations for Duluth," as the outfit is headed. Paine is probably the best known of all of the fireworks' makers in the world, and the program provided leaves one nothing to wish for.

The exhibition, which will be held on London road, at Thirteenth avenue east, where the big Hill celebration was held some years ago, will open about 8:30 p. m. with a signal salute of thirteen immense guns in mid air, produced by the simultaneous discharge of thirteen extra large cannon salute rockets. The whole city will be lighted up with red and green fires, and two monster meteoric balloons, carrying magnesium light, will flood the entire neighborhood with dazzling brilliancy, finishing with a string of jewels 100 feet long, constantly changing color as they float through space.

Over three hours will be consumed in the fireworks part of the program, which will be as varied as it is beautiful. Pigeons will fly and bombshells will go off. There will be a revolving fountain, and a 10 by 12-foot George Washington will smile benignantly on his sons and daughters.

One of the displays is that which Mark Twain has called "the aerial sleigh bells," and is Paine's specialty. There will be plenty of Rayonet tourbillons, if anyone knows what they are, salvoes of 24-inch shells, hanging chain rockets, poppies in the cornfield, asterod rockets and magnificent aerial bouquets. Gardens filled with pansies, lilies and roses will delight the eye, while 40-pound batteries of gigantic saudssions will at least make themselves heard.

Paine's aerial novelties, hanging gardens, willow trees, peacock plumes, national streamers, electric stars and 6 and 8-pound rockets will all come in a bunch about the middle of the display, and the star spangled banner will wave twenty by thirty feet over the land of the free and the homes of the brave.

Among other novelties that are not seen every Saturday afternoon are salvoes of 6-pound chromatic rockets, pleiades or floating stars, cracker mines, bombshells, liquid fire, cometic rain, prismatic jewels and varigated stars in a sufficient quantitiy for everyone to say A-h-h-h-h-h-h! to his or her heart's content and go home and dream of nigger chasers and illuminated snakes until they think they have the dilerium of tremens. Such are the pyrotechnics that will help the eagle scream on the glorious Fourth.

Mr. Kugler says that the display is not going to be spoiled under any conditions if he can help it, and if it should happen to rain on the Fourth the illumination will be set off the day after.

MAKES A RAISE.

Board of Review Finds Some Property.

The board of review has made a substantial raise in the value of assessable property this year, the increased assessment of eight persons being $235,000. This increased assessment is on their stocks, bonds and cash above that which they first returned to the assessor. The apportionment of the increase was as follows: A. D. Thomson, $50,000; F. R. Webber, $50,000; A. Ammerman, $50,000; George C. Howe, $25,000; Harry Roberts, $25,000; Mrs. Belle R. Dunn, $20,000; Mrs. S. G. Chapman, $10,000; S. R. Payne, $5000. The above named persons were summoned to appear before the board of review and list their holdings, but none of them appeared and the board fixed the amounts as near right as they could estimate without further information from the holders.

Adds Two Men.

The regular monthly meeting of the board of fire commissioners was held last evening and it was decided to add two men to the department. One of the men will go with truck No. 3 and the second, a pipeman, will join the West Duluth force. With the additional man West Duluth will now have twelve men in its department. The contract for feed for three months was awarded to the Stone-Ordean-Wells company. The prices are 31½ cents for oats, $10.50 for hay, $12 for timothy, $7.50 for straw, $14 for bran and $26 for oil feed.

Chief Black reported a total of sixteen fire alarms during the month of June, involving a loss of $8137 and covered by $62,100 insurance.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

CHANGE IN CURVES

Duluth-Superior Traction Company Is Making Some Changes.

Board of Public Works Doubtful at First Glance.

Will Consent If Property Owners Do Not Object.

Director Luther Mendenhall and Manager Herbert Warren, of the Duluth-Superior Traction company, have had a conference with the board of public works regarding the proposed improvements to be made by the street railway company in the way of "Y's" and curves in various parts of the system in this city. The company a few days ago filed with the board plans for a "Y" at Third avenue west and another at Eighth avenue west. Permission was also asked to straighten the tracks at Eighth avenue west and thereby do away with the reverse curve at that point, which necessarily means a reduction of the speed of the cars whenever they approach Eighth avenue west, besides the danger of a collision on the curve with cars going in opposite directions.

No further action was taken by the board than to visit the locality of the proposed improvements in company with the officials of the traction company, who explained in detail what they wanted to do. When the request for the new curve at Third avenue west was made members of the board of public works were inclined to look with disfavor on the idea of running the cars closer to the curb or cutting down the latter, but they have been assured by the company officials that the owners of the property on the north and the south corners of the avenue and Superior street have interposed no objection to the trucks running closer to the curb by some four feet and it is not likely that an objection will be made by the board. The street railway company desires to, as far as possible, lengthen the radius of all the curves on the system, particularly at the foot of the hills and thus make travel correspondingly safer for the public. The curve at Third avenue west and Superior street has always been a source of annoyance and whenever a car has come down the grade at more than the usual rate of speed it has left the track at the corner, a car in one instance running into and nearly demolishing the starter's stand. At the present time the street railway company is widening out curves at the foot of Garfield avenue and at the corner of Main street and Lamborn avenue in West Superior. The heavy rails are being used in every instance.

The only objection made by the board of public works in viewing the proposed plans of the street railway company was in regard to the straightening of the reverse curve at Eighth avenue west. Members of the board think that according to the plans, the tracks would run too close to the curb, and the company is at present revising the plans to eliminate this feature. There will be another meeting of the board next Wednesday at which time the matter will probably be settled.

It is reposed to use the Y at Eighth avenue west until West Superior street is opened up. During the past few weeks the frequent opening of the interstate bridge has played havoc with the interstate car service and there is hardly a day that the cars are not hindered to such an extent that from three to six cars are bunched at one point. With the necessity of running the cars clear through to the Ys at the terminal points of the interstate run, the company has found it next to impossible to get the cars back on their regular running time and the wrath of the prospective passenger who has been waiting on a corner for nearly an hour for the "next car" has been kindled to white heat when a car dashes past without stopping in the attempt to get back on its running time. The average person is bound to get indignant at this even though there is another car two blocks behind.

There have been a few instances where the new interstate double-truck cars have jumped the track and it has been fully demonstrated that it is a far more difficult job to get one of them back on the rails than one of the older and lighter cars.

EXCURSION.

Big One From the Copper Country In August.

Three years ago some very successful excursions were run from the copper country into Duluth. Many people from that section of the country were brought into the city and the merchants of Duluth received a good deal of their patronage that would not have otherwise been secured. The announcement that the South Shore railroad will take up these excursions again, will be received with general delight among the business public of Duluth. General Agent Adson said yesterday that the first excursion would leave Calumet and Marquette and the intermediate points on the night train of Aug. 1. This excursion will bring into the city a chance to visit and will be an advertisement for Duluth if the weather is good.

The Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul and the Northwestern roads have been requested by the South Shore to join with them in the excursion, the Milwaukee covering the Iron Mountain and the north and the Northwestern from Gogebic range points, Bessemer, Ironwood and Hurley.

It is expected that the roads will combine, and if they do it will bring several thousand people into the city during the summer.

A Model Village.

It is rumored that a $1,000,000 village will be founded in New York state, in connection with a large shoe factory. The prime movers being a couple of philanthropists who desire to make the lot of their employes happy. Anything that adds to happiness should be endorsed, and that is why Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which cures diseases of the stomach, liver and bowels, has received the hearty endorsement of the American people and has a record of fifty years of cures to its credit. Use the Bitters for dyspepsia, indigestion, biliousness and constipation. It never fails to effect a speedy and permanent cure. It is also an excellent tonic. If you feel worn and nervous, it is just what you need to build you up.

During the storm of last evening lightning struck a house near the corner of Second street and Twenty-eighth avenue west and took off the entire upper portion of the roof, the debris falling within a radius of 200 feet. None of the occupants of the house were injured.

Contractor M. P. Doyle arrived this morning from Iron River, Wis., where he is working on a logging contract of about 800,000 feet of logs for the Alexander-Edgar Lumber company. Mr. Doyle expects to finish up by July 10. He says that the rivers in the vicinity of Iron River are clear up to the top of their banks and that it is very wet in the woods.

The following births were reported at the health office this morning: To Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Graff, of 207 West Ninth street, a boy; to Mr. and Mrs. Aleck Jensen, of Sixtieth avenue west, a boy; to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Polski, of 201 East Seventh street, a boy.

Thomas Lowry, of Minneapolis, is expected to visit the head of the lakes Monday. It is said that he is coming for the purpose of arranging a definite settlement with the municipal government of Superior in the street railway controversy.

Dr. L. G. Herbert, of Michigan, a member of the board of directors of the Anti-Saloon League of that state, will speak at the Second Presbyterian church tomorrow evening at 7:45 o'clock.

Linemen in the employ of the street railway company were severely shocked by lightning last evening at Twenty-fourth avenue west. While at work on the wire lightning ran along the metal. Two of the men were stunned but revived in a few minutes.

Children's day exercises will be held at the Christian church at 11 o'clock tomorrow morning. The regular church service will begin at 10:30 o'clock.

The new headgear of the members of the city police department arrived today and the men are well pleased with the new caps. These will be worn for the first time during the parade on the Fourth of July.

A number of Duluth people formed an excursion party to Ely and vicinity, leaving Duluth last Wednesday and returning Friday. They reported a fine time, spent in visiting mines and camps, fishing, etc.

Marriage licenses have been issued to William P. Harvey and Ann T. Morrison, and to Roman S. Doyas and May Sheldon.

The ladies of the Lester Park literary club closed their year's work with a picnic at Lester, Wednesday afternoon. Supper was served on the bridge, which was gaily decorated in the class colors, red, white and blue; over fifty were present.

MUST ACCEPT IT.

Foresters Cannot Cut B. Barnham Off.

The local court of the United Order of Foresters will have to accept the insurance premium of B. Barnham and continue his insurance policy in force, according to a writ of mandamus issued by Judge Dibell this morning.

Barnham was a member of the local court of Foresters, and he moved to Hibbing and engaged in the saloon business there. On this ground the order refused to accept his insurance premium and refused him out of the order. This was in accordance with the rules of the order, which provide that saloonkeepers shall not be admitted to membership. The rules do not provide, however, that members who become saloon men may be discharged, and on this ground and the further ground that Barnham had been given no hearing and had had no charges filed against him, Judge Dibell decided in his favor in the mandamus proceedings begun by him some time ago.

'PRINCE OF LIARS'

Tonight, Sixth Avenue Theater.

Window Decorations.

Many of the large stores have novel features in the way of window display of decorations for the Fourth of July. One of the large windows of the Prelmuth store presents a beautiful sight, the decorations being entirely of the national colors, flags and bunting tastefully hung and draped about columns wound with the same material. In one of the windows of the Glass Block store is a fine representation of a battleship, with its guns pointing grimly from turrets and port holes. About the battleship are draped flags and bunting.

Rain or shine, dance at O-at-ka this evening.

Superior Damaged.

Superior suffered considerable damage as a result of last night's storm. The sewers could not carry away the water and many store basements along Tower avenue were flooded. Lightning struck the steeple of the Sacred Heart church and demolished the large cross. The notorious house recently occupied by the murdered Wallace Honeycombe, and the three persons now under arrest charged with the crime was shattered by lightning. The house was vacant at the time as the late occupants are residing in the county jail.

Positively no postponement of any events at O-at-ka.

To Meet Officials.

City Engineer Patton left today for the Twin Cities where he is to meet with the representatives of the railroad companies on Monday to secure the companies' signatures to the agreement to pay the proportionate cost of the foot bridge over the railroads, from Michigan street to Railroad street at Tenth avenue west. The Northern Pacific company has already signed the agreement and Mr. Patton expects to get the signatures of the Great Northern and the Union Depot companies. The contract for the erection of the bridge was let about a week ago.

NEW LINE COMING

Great Western System Is Planning to Reach Duluth.

Purchase of Red Wing Road Step In This Direction.

The System Is Not In the Railroad Combination.

Duluth is likely to have a new road to add to its railroad facilities. The Great Western system is planning to extend to the head of the lakes, and if it comes it will prove a large addition to the railroad system of this section. The road is outside of the great combinations that have been made, and in order to hold its own it is practically necessary for it to get into this city.

No official announcement to this effect has been made, but there is excellent authority for stating that the ambitious Maple Leaf route, which is fast developing as a big factor in Kansas and Southwestern territory, feels the need of a direct line with water outlet. The recent purchase of the Duluth, Red Wing & Southern is said to be a step towards this end.

The latter, which is now in operation between Red Wing and Rochester, was constructed with the expectation of being put through to the head of the lakes on teh north and to Sioux City in the southwest. General surveys were made to Superior and Duluth, all of the proposed routes passing through New Richmond, and that town, as well as many others in Northwestern Wisconsin, expected great things. Some cities even went so far as to take the preliminary steps towards issuing bonds and granting righte-of-way to assist the project.

No action will be taken immediately by the Great Western looking to a consummation of the plans of the promoters of the original enterprise, but it is known that the Wisconsin towns which were so stirred when the Red Wing line was built are quite as anxious now to have a through route. The fact that the Great Wesetrn is fast increasing its grain and produce business in Kansas territory is a growing factor in the Chicago business, and must certainly be reckoned with in all Northwestern matters, renders a Duluth extension more urgent.

Third Regiment band, O-at-ka, Sunday afternoon, 3 to 5. Free concert.

CONFIRMATION.

Class of Fifty at St. Anthony's Church.

The holy sacrament of confirmation will be administered to a class of fifty by Bishop McGolrick at St. Anthony's German Catholic church tomorrow morning during solemn high mass, which begins at 10:30 o'clock. The pastor, Rev. F. S. Kosmeri, will be the celebrant of the mass, and Rev. Charles Cannan, O. S. B., will be deacon of the mass, and Rev. James Hogan will be subdeacon. In the evening vespers and sermon will be held at 7:30 o'clock, with a renewal of baptismal vows by the confirmants. The mass will be sung by the male choir of St. Anthony's church, with Ed Kremer as director and R. Biebeger as organist. Bishop McGolrick will preach.

The Special Term.

The following cases were disposed of in this morning's special term of district court: In the matter of the receivership of the Loper & Rumery Lumber company, order discharging W. D. Williams, receiver; G. W. Eschler et al., against Hans Juveland, order allowing costs, etc.; Thomas N. Carter against E. B. Addison et al., order making additional parties defendant; George Lautenschlager against Belle M. Spear et al., order substituting Katherine Lautenschlager as plaintiff and dismissing case; Franciscka Nowak against Maryanna Grabowski, order appointing W. R. Spencer guardian ad litem for infant defendants; Mary F. Marvin against the city of Duluth, motion to correct final decree granted; in the matter of the assignment of James Billings, order authorizing assignee to execute quit claim deed to John M. McClintock to properly in section 25-59-15.

Sustains Demurrer.

Judge Dibell has filed an order sustaining the demurrer in the case of Thomas J. McKeon against the American Bonding and Trust company, the surety on the bond of the late George F. Chester, former clerk of the district court. The suit is to recover $1000 cash bail deposited in the cases against Dell Poole and Henry Poole, two range men accused of assault. One is in the penitentiary, and the other, Henry Poole, has been released, but the bail money went with other funds in the hands of the clerk. The plaintiff has twenty days in which to amend his complaint if he desires.

Park Point Pavilion

At O-at-ka beach is making a strong bid for public patronage. Manager Alexander has arranged to give two grand free concerts every Sunday. Flaaten's Third regiment band will appear in a choice program from 3 to 5 p. m., and as an extra inducement for pleasure-seekers to visit this popular resort, Professor Perboner's famous ladies' orchestra in concert from 7:30 to 9 p. m. Electric lights have been placed on docks, and in addition to 10-minute car service, the ferry will take the large scow each trip during the busy hours, so as to avoid all possible chance of overcrowding.

BLEW UP THE DAM

Settlers Make Trouble For the Cloquet Lumber Company.

Work Spoiled Just as Enough Water Is Secured.

No Arrests Have as Yet Followed the Act.

For the third time the dam of the Cloquet Lumber company, at Cedar Island lake, has been blown up by the settlers who claim the lands from which the logs held back by the dam were taken. The successful attempt to blow up the dam was made yesterday, and it is said that the armed guards that the company had on watch were overpowered before the work was done.

The act is rather serious, because it destroys the company's chances of getting out the logs for a time. Ever since the spring break-up, back in April, the company has been waiting for the dam to accumulate enough water to float out the large quantity of logs that have been cut ready to be floated to the mills at Cloquet. The settlers have sworn that the logs should never leave the land, and the two former attempts on the dam were part of the efforts to prevent their removal. The recent rains gradually filled up the dam until the necessary amount of water was obtained, and as the waters raised everybody acquainted with the situation expected trouble.

It came about as soon as the necessary depth of water did. Yesterday the settlers turned out in force and after overcoming the guards the dam was blown up and the water released.

Details of the trouble are rather meager, but it is said that no one was hurt. So far as known no arrests have been made and no warrants have been sworn out.

HILL RELEASED.

Can Spend Fourth Where He Pleases.

William Hill, who has been serving a sentence of ninety days in the county jail since April 30, will be able to spend the Fourth as he will, owing to Judge Dibell's decision in the habeas corpus proceedings through which Hill sought his liberty. The court grants the writ, and orders the sheriff to release the prisoner, who thus escapes serving nearly half of his sentence.

The writ was granted on the ground of defects in the mittimus, which was made out by a Mesaba range justice of the peace in rather a unique manner.

TO BEGIN MONDAY.

Forfeited Tax Sale to Move Then.

The forfeited tax sale will begin Monday morning at 10 o'clock in earnest, and from then on the property on the lists will be sold as rapidly as possible. Owing to the delay in getting the corrected lists completed, the sale has been proceeding through the week just to observe the requirements of the law. This morning the sale occupied a few minutes before adjournment, and, contrary to the rule during the week, the state did not get one of the pieces of property offered. There were buyers for every lot put up, and in several cases there was a little competition and the property brought a little more than the minimum of 50 per cent of the taxes. It is not expected that much more than that will be done on any of the property.

WEATHER FIGURES

Rainfall In June Is Almost Up to High Mark.

Street Railway Traffic Badly Hindered By the Storm.

Big Engine Put Out of Action By the Flood.

Contrary to general belief the rainfall at 5 o'clock last night was not as heavy as has been experienced before in Duluth, although in the last shower of the day 1.13 inches of rain fell in less than an hour. The total fall for twenty-four hours, from midnight Thursday until the same hour last night, was 3.25, remarkably heavy even for the lake region.

At 5 o'clock p. m. yesterday the velocity of the wind was thirty miles an hour, although the great sheets of water coming with it made the wind's force appear greater.

In twelve minutes, between 4:55 and 5:07 p. m., .93 of rain fell, which, at the same rate of precipitation, would be 4.65 inches an hour.

The greatest record for rainfall of which there is any account was on Aug. 8, 1897, when 1.26 of water fell upon Duluth in fifteen minutes. At that time 1.09 was recorded in ten minutes. The register also shows .75 in five minutes, the last being an average of nine inches an hour. From this it appears that the rainfall was nearly twice as heavy during the storm of Aug. 8 as it was last night. It is only in the last few years that the local office has been able to register the actual amount of rain falling within a given time. The automatic machine at the office registers the fall and time as well.

In July, 1897, between the hours of midnight on the 2nd and 3rd, the fall of rain was 4.20 inches. That was also the twenty-four hour record. This is the record for any day and month in thirty-one years.

The precipitation this month bids fair to equal that of any June on record. Without allowing for rainfall today and tomorrow, the record shows that the rainfall is 4.78 inches above normal, teh total for twenty-eight days being 9.09 inches. Showers were predicted for this afternoon and a few more points will make this June go down in history as the equal of any in the amount of moisture falling.

TRAFFIC HINDERED.

Street Railway Power Sadly Depleted.

The street railway company is having its troubles as the result of last night's storm. Since 5 o'clock last night the big engine at the power house on Eleventh avenue west has been out of action. Water coming down the hill washed gravel into the pipes that drain the engine room, and the flood caused the stoppage of the motive power in the cars in Duluth. At 5 p. m. yesterday, when the office buildings and stores were commencing to empty their hundreds of car passengers, the street railway company could not move a car, and there were no wheels turning until an hour later. On account of the storm there was an unusually large number of people who were anxious to board a street car. Suuperior street was lined with people waiting patiently, and also impatiently, for the cars that would not come. After the accident to the large engine, the company started its reserve force, the smaller engines. At 6 o'clock the cars were pressed to win number, but gradually increasing and the crowds were moved to their homes.

About half the usual number of cars are running today. None of the large double truck cars of the Interstate line have been taken out of the barn, as they use up too much of the meager amount of power obtainable. Since last night no cars have made trips on the Lake avenue or East Fourth street lines. There is a 20-minute service on the West Duluth and Fond du Lac lines and the cars in the early hours of the day and also at noon, were crowded. This afternoon the shoppers are out, and standing-room is considered a privilege. The company started their large engine this afternoon. There was a tedious delay waiting for the great belt to dry. Tonight it is expected that the cars will be running on all lines on schedule time.

MISS GOOD.

Lecture on Improvement Work at the High School.

Secretary Thomas E. Hill announces that Miss Jessie Good, of the National Improvement league, will lecture at the Assembly room of the high school, next Monday evening. The lecture is illustrated with stereopticon views from all over the country where civic improvements have been accomplished. The lecture is free to all, and for the benefit of the Duluth Improvement association.

The children are invited to attend, and it is hoped that Miss Good will address a large audience. She is continually on the road, speaking daily in the larger cities and before chautauquas, and has a choice collection of views for use i nthe stereoptican.

TO BE DEDICATED.

St. John's Episcopal Church at Lakeside.

Tomorrow morning Bishop Morrison will dedicate the new St. John's Episcopal church at Lakeside. He will preach and administer the rite of confirmation. Evening services will also be held and a sermon preached by Bishop Morrison at 7:45. The church is on the street car line on Grand avenue near Fifty-first avenue east. These are the first services to be held. Rev. E. E. Johnson is the pastor.

AT WEST DULUTH

The Storm Does Great Damage to the Streets.

Several Blocks of Paving Carried Away By Flood.

Repairing of Damage Will Be Expensive--- Other News.

Last evening Jupiter Pluvius evidently tried to establish a new record in West Duluth. Although the storm was not accompanied with as destructive lightning nor as heavy rainfall as the one of Monday, more damage was wrought. The paving on the avenues descending from the hill was greatly damaged yesterday. It was loosened by the water Monday and yesterday when the torrents came tearing down again, hundreds of feet of paving blocks were carried away on the crest of the flood and great holes were torn in the streets.

Fifty-ninth avenue suffered the greatest damage and two entire blocks were washed away and the cedar piled in a heap on Grand avenue. At one time it is estimated that the water was two feet deep on Grand avenue between Fifty-ninth and Fifty-fifth avenues. Pedestrians were taken across the miniature river in wagons. The paving on Central avenue is heavily damaged and almost entirely obliterated for a distance of five blocks from the Missabe tracks south towards the fire hall. Four blocks of Grand avenue were closed to traffic until noon today. The approach to the bridge between Forty-ninth and Fiftieth avenues is washed out and in one place there is a hole fifteen feet deep. A large force of men and teams were engaged in repairing the damage this morning, filling the holes with brush and clearing paving blocks from the streets.

Some of the tenants in Mitchell & McClure's cottages were alarmed by the rising water and sought refuge on higher ground. In some of the houses water covered the floors.

When the storm was at its worst a Bay View car left the track, but no one was injured. It was caused by a washout.

Mrs. Hary Langdon was attending a meeting of the Lady Maccabees, and thinking only of the three little children at home alone, rushed through the blinding rain to her home six blocks away. She collapsed in the door yard and was carried into the house by Mr. Langdon, who was just returning from work. A physician was called and found Mrs. Langdon in a dead faint caused by her exertion and excitement. Today she has not recovered her strength and it is feared serious illness may result.

One of the large windows of Brown Mallough & Sons's store was blown in. Awnings in front of several of the stores were twisted and rent asunder.

This morning the street railway company was not operating the full number of cars, and there is a 20-minute service, owing to damage at the power house. One of the early cars this morning is reported to have carried 126 passengers at one time.

LOVE LAUGHS ONCE MORE.

A romance was ended by marriage in Judge Stone's court yesterday, when the justice united Miss Elizabeth M. Schulte and George Rohr in the bonds of matrimony. It is said that the parents of the bride objected to the attentions of young Rohr and to their marriage. Rohr secured a license to wed some days ago, and yesterday he and Miss Schuhe were in Duluth with the intention of being made one and wife. They were followed by an angry brother of the young woman. Rohr appealed to a policeman to intercept the male relative, and while the brother argued with the officer, the pursued couple boarded a car and came to West Duluth, where Judge Stone made them happy. Two policemen were the only spectators. Mr. Rohr wanted witnesses to the ceremony, and one of the gallant officers gave the bride away while the other acted as best man. Mr. and Mrs. Rohr were heartily congratulated and departed happy on their way for a visit in Wisconsin.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Upham arrived in West Duluth yesterday from Brownton, Minn. Mr. Upham and Miss Savage were united in marriage at that place last Tuesday. They will reside at the corner of Fifty-second avenue and Ramsey street. Mr. Upham is employed as pharmacist at Nygren's City Drug store.

The Senate club's banquet at their rooms last night was the success that had been anticipated. After a literary program an elaborate luncheon was served. The event was exclusively for members.

Mrs. M. C. Murray was taken to the Women's hospital yesterday where she will submit to an operation.

There is a celebration planned for Zenith Park July 4.

The L. O. T. M. have postponed the picnic until after July 4 on account of inclement weather.

Mrs. J. A. Kirkwood, her son James and daughter Helen, are home after a visit in Carlton.

Mrs. E. W. Sewrney, of Wadena street, had occasion to use an ax yesterday, and while so doing she severed a toe and gashed her foot.

The annual ball by the L. O. T. M., at Great Eastern hall last night, was a success notwithstanding the storm.

The ladies of Westminster Presbyterian church give a social at the florists this afternoon.

The West Duluth Bird store is establishing a branch at Elschen Bros.

A good time is promised for outing parties at Zenith Park tomorrow. Steamer Mary Mann meets cars at Sixty-first avenue.

NOTICE!

St. James Court No. 614 C. O. F.

All members are requested to meet at Catholic Association Hall at 3 p. m. Sunday to join in the parade to the laying of the corner stone of the Polish Catholic church.

COMMITTEE.

To Ely For a Visit.

Senator Moses E. Clapp, accompanied by his daughter, Mis Kathrina, arrived in Duluth this morning. They left at 3 o'clock for Ely where they will remain over Sunday with friends. Senator Clapp refused to discuss politic or business. He said to a reporter: "There is no politics or business connected with my trip. Myself and daughter are out on a little tour for recreation. We will spend Sunday at Ely." The senator was greeted by many friends while in the city, and local politicians looked him up, but the storm and crops were favorite subjects with Mr. Clapp.

TO BE CLOSED

Woodland Line to Shut Down Tomorrow Night.

Tomorrow night is the time fixed by the Duluth-Superior Traction company for the suspension of the service on the Woodland line and from present appearances the Woodlanders will ride home tomorrow and walk in Monday morning.

So far as it is known there have been no negotiations whatever between the owners of the Woodland line and the traction company, and there are no assurances of anything in the immediate future. There is no reason to believe that the traction company is not serious in its threats of shuting off the Woodland service, and the residents of the suburbs out that way will be up against the problem of what they are to do Monday morning.

FOR ANOTHER WEEK.

Major Winner and Wife To Remain.

The announcement of the re-engagement of Maj Winner and wife, by M. S. Burrows, will be received with a great deal of pleasure by the children, as well as the older people of the city. They will be here next week although it is the first time in years that they have been away from their summer home in the Adirondacks on the Fourth. Mr. Burrows is enthusiastic over the coming celebration and at considerable expense to himself has induced the celebrated little couple to stay, so that all visiting children will have a chance to visit with them. In spite of the inclement weather, great crowds have come out to see them during the past week, and they seem to have caught on, in Duluth.

WRONG NAME

Prevents B. B. Inman's Release From Heavy Debt.

An interesting decision involving a bankruptcy discharge was handed down by Judge Dibell this morning in the case of A. W. Priest against B. B. Inman, to recover $3000 on six promissory notes of $500 each. The defendant in answer to the suit set up his discharge from bankruptcy under the bankruptcy act, but the defendant claimed that his notes were not affected by that, because he had never had notice of the bankruptcy proceedings.

In the schedule of liabilities presented by Mr. Inman in the proceedings in bankruptcy he included this claim, but he gave the claimant's name as "A. E. Priest" instead of "A. W. Priest," and his address as Kankakee, Wis., instead of Kaukauna, Wis. The court holds that this error was sufficient, owing to the fact that Priest never got notice of the proceedings, to except the claim from the discharge, and judgment for $3000, with interest from 1895, is granted. In a memorandum Judge Dibell says that the decision does not affect the validity of the discharge, but its scope.

Has Been Successful.

Miss Alma Anderon, of Seattle, Wash., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Rust at 1432 London road. Many Duluth people will remember Miss Anderson as having been at the head of the cloak department with I. Freimuth a few years ago. She is now owner of the Monod hospital at Seattle, Wash., and is on her way from a trans-continental trip of two months. In her travels, she has visited San Francisco, Los Angeles, Mexico, St. Louis, Chicago, Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, New York, Buffalo, Niagara Falls, Montreal, Toronto and Detroit. On her return trip, she will visit Minneapolis, Winnipeg, Glacier, and Vancouver. She has been phenomenally successful in her hospital work.

The Elks' Excursion.

If the Elks take the Third Regiment band of thirty pieces with them to their annual convention at Milwaukee in July it will be one of the best advertisements that Duluth ever had. To enable them to do this they are going to give a moonlight excursion on the palatial steamer Peerless next Tuesday night, the boat leaving the foot of Fifth avenue dock at 8 o'clock sharp. The excursion promises to be a most delightful one. Excursions given by the Elks always are and an enjoyable ride of thirty miles down the lake with music, dancing and refreshments will be the order. Only desirable people will be allowed on the boat, so that a most delightful time will doubtless be had.

Dancing tonight at O-at-ka.

Soaked the Carpets.

The heavy rain storm of yesterday afternoon caused considerable damage to Panton & White's carpet and drapery department. The sewer of the roof was clogged, causing the roof to become so filled with water that it was unable to sustain the heavy pressure, and the water soaked through the roof, flooding the above named department.

Today and Monday they will be busy ascertaining the loss, and next Wednesday they expect to have things in shape to sell off the water soaked goods at great sacrifices.

Mueller Case Again.

An order was issued in probate court this morning for the taking of testimony in Germany in the estate of Johann Mueller, whose property is tied up in a maze of litigation not only over the title, but over the heirship. August Beck, of Karlsruhe, Baden, Germany, is to take the testimony of several claimants that live there. His hearing to begin July 29. Carl Schulze, of Duluth, is to translate the interrogatories into German for the convenience of the German commissioner, and on the return of the depositions some one is to be appointed to translate them into English.

PEARCE MANAGER.

Appointed By President Mellen to Northern Pacific.

St. Paul, June 29.—President C. S. Mellen of the Northern Pacific today announced the appointment of W. G. Pearce as general manager of the company, to take effect at midnight tomorrow.

Mr. Pearce before coming East was agent, having been placed in charge of the office on the retirement of Mr. Kendrick a month ago.

Mr. Pearce before coming East was assistant to the president, with headquarters in Tacoma.

Thomas Cooper, at present Western land agent for the company, is appointed to succeed Mr. Pearce as assistant to the president. His headquarters will be at Seattle.

The Palsied, Deaf and Blind Restored by DR. MITCHELL

A Remarkable Story.

We give in detail the story told by a well-known Minnesota lady in restoration to health by Dr. Mitchell. While it may seem almost increditable, it is nevertheless true, and is vouched for by the lady herself, her relatives and neighbors. This almost miraculous cure can be easily substantiated by addressing Dr. Mitchell, who will give her address.

This lady says: "I was pronounced a helpless case after using medicine for ten years. I was placed in the insane asylum by two physicians as incurable, they said I had nervous insanity resulting from trouble of a private nature. After many months of suffering I was taken out and placed under Dr. Mitchell's treatment. In one month my reason was practically restored, and in four months I was perfectly restored to health and doing the housework for a family of seven on a large farm. When Dr. Mitchell took my case I weighed 100 pounds. I weigh now 163 pounds. Dr. Mitchell I know has restored me to health by his skill and treatment."

This is only one of thousands cured by Dr. Mitchell during the past ten years. Why do you suffer when you can consult the greatest magnetic physician in the world any week day between the hours of 9 a. m. and 7:30 p. m. Consultation free. Take no thought of anything else until you have called upon this great healer and obtained his advice.

SLEW HIM

A Deceived Woman Accomplished Her Revenge at Last.

Her Husband Looked on And Encouraged Her Efforts.

On a frozen trail of the north, Dick Beals was shot to death by Mrs. Thomas Herndon, while her husband stood by and prayed that her woman's hand would not fail at the trigger.

The tragic tale has just come out of the sea-clad Yukon basin, says the San Francisco Examiner. It is the story of a husband who for three years tirelessly searched the highways and byways of the continent, looking for the man who had robbed him of his wife. A chance clew led him over the ice and snow into the Klondike.

There at last Herndon ran down the couple and discovered the extent of Dick Beal's duplicity. He found his broken-hearted wife in the cabin of friends, and from her own lips the forgiving husband heard that it was only after Beals had by false proof convinced her that her absent husband was dead that she had consented to marry him and travel with him to a promised new home in the West.

It was not the kind of meeting, nor the end that Herndon had planned. For years he had persistently searched for the couple, grimly determined that they should pay the penalty for their deceit and his dishonor. The discovery that his wife was guiltless only turned his thoughts with redoubled fury to the man who had wrecked both their lives.

From all sides Herndon heard stories of Beals' brutality and shameless profligacy, that fired his wrath. Long before Beals brought her to the Klondike he had tired of the woman whom he had schemed so hard to possess. In that far country, away from all restraining influences, Beals flaunted his bold acts flagrantly, and resorted to all sorts of fiendish devices to torture her. She stood it all until the drinkerazed man told her that Herndon was dead, and that his own marriage to her was merely a mock ceremony.

Half stunned she had staggered to the Peterson cabin near by, and there Herndon found her, and together they determined to make Beals suffer a double meed of vengeance.

After confessing his deceit to Mrs. Herndon, Beals had gone to the cabin of his partner, Jeff Alexander, and demanded his share of the clean-up from their claim. Alexander tried to argue with the liquor-frenzied man, and refused to give him anything until he was sober. In the heat of the dispute, Beals drew his revolver and shot his partner. Without stopping to see how badly Alexander was hurt he seized their whole store of dust from the box under one corner of the cabin, jammed it into the wallet about his waist, and started. He had a vague idea that he must flee the country in order to escape the penalty for the murder and robbery. This idea took definite shape when, passing up one of the streets, he saw Joe Andrews' dog team drawn up before the North Star saloon. The sled was loaded with provisions; evidently Andrews had come to town to replenish his cabin stock, and was inside "pegging up" before he started on his homeward trip. Beals knew the merits of the team; he had hired it more than once. He coolly swung the leader into the traces, got the "barkies" moving and was soon making his way with them through the outskirts of the town. Several men saw him handling the team, but concluded that he rented it from Andrews.

Andrews ran upon one of these men when, some two hours later, he stumbled out of the North Star, whip in hand, ready to journey home. An active search through Beals' haunts revealed that he had robbed and only slightly wounded his partner. It didn't take those hard-headed miners long to put two and two together. But Beals had now five hours' start, and one of the best dog teams in the country to boot. They reasoned that he was striking for either St. Michael or Nome. Andrews started in pursuit.

Matters were in this condition when the Herndons were ready for the man hunt. A few hours after Andrews left they, too, were headed over the snow and ice to reach Beals. At Anvil they overtook Andrews, who had broken his leg. Before the accident, however, Andrews had followed Beals far enough on the St. Michael trail to discover the point where Beals swung off in the direction of of the "eighty-mile cut off" to save 300 miles on the trail up the coast to Nome.

Beals had used every artifice at his command to hide his tracks and leave the impression that he had crossed the ice on the river and continued down stream, but hawk-eyed Andrews was too crafty a snowtracker to be caught by such tricks, and he hurried back to Anvil to outfit for swifter pursuit.

Here the Herdons found him, chafing under delay, and he joyfully turned over his fresh team and outfit to these new pursuers. Herndon and Andrews both tried to make Mrs. Herndon give up the chase, but she was obdurate and nerved with the strength of outraged womanhood. So the Herndons set out again, and in order to avoid carrying too heavy a pack they took only enough provisions to carry them to the cabin of Chas. McKeon, where they could outfit again after the long run on the coast. Seventeen miles out of Anvil they came to the place where Beals had swung into the "eighty-mile cut off" trail. There were no signs on that lonely trail; to turn off meant to get lost, to court death. There were only two ways to travel it, to go forward or to turn back. If his enemy's heart failed him and he turned back Herndon was there to confront him and take his revenge. If he pressed forward Herndon knew he could overtake him, for his team was the fresher.

The Herndons made rapid headway over the snowfields. Their first setback was when they came to the giant bowlder, which Anderson warned them ran up sheer 300 feet, just off the trail, and for miles around was the landmark of McKeon's cabin. But search as they might they could discover no cabin.

Their provisions were almost gone, and with no chance to replenish their store they could not continue the pursuit. Without provisions it was almost hopeless for them to try to return to Anvil. In vain Herndon's eyes rolled over the surrounding leagues of snow, eagerly hoping for some sign of a cabin. It was Mrs. Herndon who finally suggested that the cabin might be buried in one of giant hummocks of snow.

Herndon started to dig on the spot where Andrews had described the location of the cabin. Presently his heart gave a cabin.

McKeon was huddled up in his bunk —dead. His pitiful story was only too plainly written in his surroundings. He thump. He had struck a log, and a little later he had broken in the door of the had fallen sick and had reached a stage where he was too weak to help himself. Then the blizzard had raged about his cabin, had frozen the impoverished blood and had finally entombed him in the snow-buried cabin.

Herndon could do nothing but leave a note for chance travelers in spring who could bury the bones when the ground was thawed. He hurriedly made up his provision pack and with redoubled energy he and his wife started again in pursuit.

The next afternoon his roving eyes discovered the signs where Beals had swung off the trail to the northeast, evidently aiming to strike the coast above Stuart's. The crafty man was taking no chances on being caught at Stuart's, or of leaving any tidings to pursuers that he had been there and was on his way up the coast.

A little later they came upon Beals' camp of the day before. There they found that the rations for his dogs were evidently short, for the hungry animals had eaten most of their walrus hide harness during the night. Bits of blanket and canvas were strewn about showing how Beals had contrived to mend it.

They knew that Beals was being driven hard, and they realized that he would find no succor in the desolate, lonely country he had selected to cross rather than face the danger of being stopped at Stuart's.

Now that their quarry was almost at hand, they pushed on with almost reckless impatience that was almost their undoing. In crossing a small stream Herndon slipped and fell through a hole in the ice into the water. Without thinking of the consequences he removed his mittens in order to ring water from his clothing. His left hand was frozen stiff in the cold air and the right one was almost useless. But he gritted his teeth and bent to the pursuit more resolutely than ever.

Next morning far over a long stretch of snow they caught sight of some moving black objects. Presently the objects dropped out of sight behind a ridge of snow—another dip in the snow and they loomed into sight again. The man ahead was having trouble with his badly harnessed dog team.

On the next rise the man stopped to mend the weak harness and casually looking back he saw the figures of pursuers, black on the white field. He whipped out his revolver and prepared to make his last stand.

They came closer—so close that they were within 50 paces. Each knew there must be no mistake in that first pistol fire.

Then Dick Beals recognized the Herndons—the man and the woman against who he had aimed the deadliest sin. He shook like the craven thing he was at heart, and his bullet flew wild. Herndon's did not ring much truer, for the half-frozen hand was unsteady. The bullet plowed through Beals' leg. He swung half around, then caught himself unsteadily and blazed away, the bullets singing wildly through the air.

There were three quick, sharp reports. Beals toppled over; then Mrs. Herndon dropped a smoking revolver.

Her woman's hand had fired the fatal shot. She had audited their account with the brute. Somewhere on the steeps far above the "eighty-mile cut-off" they left the body.

The Herndon's managed to get the stolen team to Nome, where some miners agreed to return it to Andrews at Anvil. They told them how Beals had paid for his crimes with his unworthy life. Since the Herndons left Nome no word from them has reached the sympathetic Klondikers, who hold that they were justified in killing Beals. The wronged husband and wife have disappeared. They have probably gone to some distant land where they can patch together their broken lives.

HEAVY LOSS

Terrific Rainfall Causes Great Damage.

Lake Avenue Alone Will Need $10,000.

Another terrific electrical storm visited the head of the lakes yesterday afternoon shortly after 4 o'clock and lasting a little over an hour. Although not of long duration an immense volume of water fell and more reports of damage about the city are beginning to come in. The storm was preceded by a dense fog and came on swiftly, and it grew so dark within a few minutes that it was necesary to turn on the light in the buildings and in the street cars. One of the features not often seen here was a heavy thunderstorm beginning in a dense fog. This was the second heavy storm for the week, and in many instances the damage done by the storm of last Monday was being repaired and the torrents of water yesterday afternoon undid all the repair work attempted, in most cases making the damage greater than it had been before.

The storm demoralized the telephone service, shadow of the street car service for some time, burst sewers and flooded basements all over the city. It is doubtful if there has been an instance before in the history of the head of the lake where so much water fell in the same length of time. The amount of water running over the surface yesterday was all the more noticeable from the fact that the ground was completely saturated from the heavy rain of Monday and all the water that fell began to run off instead of being taken up by the earth. Last night the water in the bay was higher than it has been at any time this spring, and at the interstate bridge there was a current so strong from the St. Louis river that the ferry boats slowed down appreciably when they struck it on the way to West Superior.

The report of the weather bureau office indicates that 3.25 inches of rain fell during the day and about 2 inches in twenty minutes.

On every avenue in the city there was a torrent of water rushing down the hill to Superior street and most of the gravel that has been spread on the avenues could be found at the foot of the hill after the storm. Some rigs were caught out on the avenue during the storm and instances are reported where the swift water nearly swept the horses off their feet on the slippery roads. There was a terrible torrent in all the little creeks which after the storm were roaring like mountain streams.

The avenues most affected by the storm were Lake avenue and First avenue east. The gravel on Lake avenue was washed by the torrent on to the street railway tracks at both Superior and Second streets and at these points cars were either stuck in the mud or derailed. Many citizens with shovels went to the aid of the cars and at Lake avenue and Superior streets foremost among the rescuers with a shovel was B. Silberstein. Men were kept at work until well in the evening shoveling the mud at Superior street and Second street off the street car tracks.

On Fifth avenue below Michigan street the water cut out the pavement and foundation of the street leaving a deep gutter through the avenue to the railroad tracks below. Much gravel was washed into the Union depot train sheds again yesterday afternoon, and in that portion of the building where the carriages stand the water was over knee deep.

The railroad tracks below First avenue west were again flooded with water, mud and timber from the break in the sewer below Michigan street, which was made on Monday. The water rushed down the sewer to the break and out with such force that it dashed into the air like a geyser, higher than a box car. The tracks were covered with sand and debris to a depth of three inches last night.

All day there have been received at the office of the board of public works complaints of damages done in various parts of the city by the storm. Some of the damage occurred in districts that suffered from Monday's storm and in other sections it was the direct result of yesterday afternoon's storm. The total of the damage done is piling up at an alarming rate and members of the board of works will declare that from the reports already in the indications are that more damage has been done this week to the streets and sewers of the city than was done at the time of the cloudburst in 1897. Estimates on the work of the storms this week, by the city officers are not below $20,000 and in some cases it is as high as $25,000.

C. W. Wilson, of the board of public works, inspected Lake avenue last evening after the storm, and says that while the damage done below Third street was considerable, from Third street to Eighth street the avenue is a complete wreck and is impassable. He estimates that it will take about $10,000 alone to put Lake avenue back to its condition before the storm last Monday. The big brick sewer between the above named streets is broken down and in it are stones that are hard to remove. The stone gutters are gone and the roadway washed out.

The sewers are broken at Fifteenth avenue east, First avenue east, First avenue west and Twenty-first avenue east. Scores of sewers are plugged up with timbers, stones and gravel for a distance of many yards. The board is directing its first efforts to getting the sewers in condition as soon as possible for the reason that if another storm comes on with the sewers in their present condition, private property will be flooded worse than ever and thousands of dollars of damage will be done to property as yet unaffected by the storms.

The work of taking back and spreading on First avenue east the gravel that was washed down by the storm of Monday, was finished yesterday. This morning all the gravel is back at the foot of the avenue and in the sewer, this is the case with several of the other avenues. The members of the board state that there is no other alternative for them but to keep on repairing the avenues with gravel. It was suggested that crushed stone might prove effective, but the board says it would be washed away as easily as the gravel in the unusual forces such as the city has been visited with. The only thing that will stand the storm will be a substantial pavement of some heavy material.

Spectators that saw the water come out of the break in the First avenue west sewer say that at times the water spouted fifty feet in the air. The water shot across the Northern Pacific tracks in such volume that it washed over flat cars and carried away the gravel with which some of the cars were loaded. Yesterday morning the company had a large force of men shoveling the gravel and debris back on the cars preparatory to hauling it away.

It will take some time to clean up the railroad yards in the vicinity of First avenue west. The storm of Monday did a great deal of damage and the storm of yesterday afternoon put water below the train sheds in the way of washouts. The repair work there was completed yesterday before the storm and it is claimed that the storm did no damage other than the flooding of the train shed.

The damage to the Superior street pavement from Third avenue west to Fourth avenue east, in fact to a point far beyond, is considerable and a large amount of repair work will be necessary to put the pavement back into condition. How this will be accomplished is a puzzler to the board of public works for the fund that is available for street repair work is being drawn on to the limit in the regular routine repair work on the streets and with the increased damage to the pavements it is a question as to what can be done. No other fund is available for the repair work; there has been less sentiment expressedd in favor of repaving Superior street from Third avenue east to Tenth avenue east now that repairs will be necessary and many believe that it would be but little short of folly to put a large amount of money into repair work at this time. They hold that the street should be repaved before these points as the cost of repaving would be directly assessable against the abutting property and there is practically no fund available for the repair work.

Complaints are being made by the score of basements filled entirely or in part with water. In the business house localities of the city the flooded basements will mean the greatest loss on account of the damage to goods stored in the basements.

A BONAPARTE'S HOME.

Memories of a Joseph, Ex-King of Spain.

The old house known as the hunting box at Bonaparte lake, Watertown, which was built by the former king of Spain, Joseph Bonaparte, is being torn down, says the New York Sun. hTe fact recalls the story of the stay of Joseph Bonaparte in this country and also that of the daughter of this exiled king, who sleeps in an unmarked grave, in the quiet country churchyard nestling back amid the hills of the town of Antwerp in Jefferson county. There are few persons living who remember the Comte de Survilliers, as the exile called himself; while the old brick mansion of the Benton family, allied to him by the marriage of Col. Z. H. Benton with the ex-king's daughter, contains many souvenirs of Joseph Bonaparte. Col. Benton, who accompanied his wife to France and was, with her, received ot the court of Napoleon III, never tired of relating anecdotes of his royal father-in-law.

When Joseph Bonaparte escaped from Spain upon the decline of Napoleon's power, he took along with him some of the Spanish crown jewels and many kegs of gold from the vaults of the Spanish treasury. After Waterloo he went to Bordeaux, intending to sail for America disguised as a merchant and calling himself M. Bouchard. There he met James Leray, who, for $80,000, sold him a tract of land in Northern New York, including the township of Diana in Lewis county and the townships of Wilna and Philadelphia and parts of Theresa and Antwerp in Jefferson county, 150,000 acres in all. Joseph sailed for America with Jacob Mazzi, his huge Hungarian bodyguard; Louis Maillard, his secretary; Louis Martel, his valet, and four old French grenadiers, on July 25, 1815.

The party landed in New York city on Aug. 28. Later, Joseph Bonaparte purchased the estate on the banks of the Delaware just below Bordentown, where he lived for some years and later he took up his residence on a farm just below the city of Philadelphia and installed as the mistress of the villa which he built there the daughter of a Philadelphia family, Annette Savage, of whom he always spoke with affection and respect as the "beautiful Quaker girl." Here a daughter was born who died in early infancy. He returned for a brief period to the estate at Point Breeze, Bordentown, when the second daughter was born. It was after this that he decided to visit his estate in Northern New York.

In June, 1822, there arrived at the Natural Bridge, at the headwaters of the Indian river, in the then unbroken wilderness of the city the flooded basements will of the public works a party of axemen and a small army of the woodsmen and laborers. In one coach rode Joseph Bonaparte with Annette Savage, and their young daughter, Charlotte; in another Joseph's secretary, valet and his wife's French maid, while the third bore eight small Bonapartists, who stooped each kegs and the four old grenadiers. Jacob, the giant Hungarian bodyguard, had died a few months before and been buried beneath a clump of Norway pines at Point Breeze. The family had come through the forest from Houseville, Lewis county, where Joseph drank New England rum with everybody, and had been preceded by a gang of woodsmen, who chopped roads and built low bridges for them as they proceeded.

At Natural Bridge Joseph laid out a village, to which the compass himself and chaining out the streets 100 feet wide. Here he built as a residence a strong block house, which, with its massive walls and concealed portholes, is still standing. The lower floor was occupied by the old French grenadiers, to guard him against the Bourbon or Spanish emissaries, who he always fancied were on his track. A number of French refugees joined him. Hunting lodges were built on the lakes in the town of Diana, and soon the exking built there an imposing villa which was called the White House and in which hospitality was dispensed. Tradition says that many plots were laid there to rescue Napoleon from St. Helena and to establish him in a forest empire in those northern wilds until another blow could be ventured in France.

In 1830 Joseph Bonaparte returned to Europe for good. His possessions were sold out, 20,000 acres situated around Lake Bonaparte eventually falling into the hands of Col. Z. H. Benton.

After the ex-king returned to France his "American wife," as she was called, Annette Savage, married Joseph de la Follie, a young Frenchman of good family who had come among the refugees in Ily who had come among the refugees in Northern New York. The family resided for a time at Watertown. Two other daughters were born to her and she assisted in the support of the family by keeping a small store.

Charlotte de la Follie, as the daughter of Joseph was called, had grown up to be a handsome and accomolished young woman, when about 1839, she met Col. Zebulon Hoyle Benton. He was the son of Dr. Abner Benton and was a singularly ambitious and daring character. He had the face and bearing of a French marquis of the old school, was a fine horseman, a charming talker, distinguished in dress and courteous in manner. He had been a slave dealer at Louisville, Ky., a military officer in a Western territory and was then the owner of the Rossie lead mines. The romantic origin of Charlotte de la Follie charmed him as much as the girl herself. They were married, and with him she saw many vicissitudes, for he was a daring speculator and mining promoter and one day was rich and the next day without a cent. Four children were born to them, of whom two reside in Philadelphia, one in Honolulu and the other in Italy.

The manner in which this family came to be received at the court of Napoleon as kinsmen has never been published. Dr. Charles Benton, a brother of Col. Z. H. Benton, who practiced medicine at Ogdensburg, N. Y., and whose son, Dr. John Benton, has succeeded him there, was a college mate at Jefferson college, Philadelphia, of Dr. John de Haven White, the precepter of the famous Dr. Thomas W. Evans, of Paris. It happened that Josiah Randall, father of Representative S. J. Randall, called on Dr. Evans in Paris with a letter of introduction from Dr. White and was presented by Dr. Evans to the emperor. Mr. Randal told the emperor that he had known Joseph Bonaparte intimately.

Napoleon III appeared greatly interested. On is return he told the episode to Dr. White. These facts were told by Dr. white to Mrs. Benton, who at that time lived at Philadelphia. She obtained a letter of introduction from him to Dr. Evans.

Armed with this letter Col. and Mrs. Benton sold out their belongings, and in the winter of 1869-70 went with their children to Paris. They were kindly received by Dr. Evans and made guests of his family. He stated Mrs. Benton's right to recognition as a Bonaparte to the emperor, who made an appointment to receive her at the Tuileries. Immediately upon entering Napoleon III said;

"I recognize you as a Napoleon."

A decree was recorded by the emperor legitimizing the union of Joseph and Annette Savage and Mrs. Benton was received as the first cousin of the emperor. Her youngest son was placed in the French military academy. The daughter Josephine, was a maid of honor to the empress.

After the Franco-Prussian war Mrs. Benton returned to Watertown. After supporting herself by teaching music in Watertown and Utica Mrs. Benton died in humble lodgings at Richfield Springs ten years ago, and in the midst of a driving snowstorm on Christmas Day, 1891, was laid to rest in the cemetery of the Presbyterian church at Oxbow, N. Y., only four persons standing beside the gave of this daughter of a king.

MADE THEM HAPPY.

If there is one class which follows the doings of the industrial world with more fidelity than another it is the lunkheads, says the New York Tribune. Nothing escapes their eyes or their tongues; discussion is as the breath of their nostrils; and the word capitalist is sweet to their lips. It may well be imagined that during the recent operations in Wall street the men engaged therein came in for some free handling among the habitues of the established order. In general, the attitude of the true Socialist and the non-revolutionary anarchist toward the recent Wall street operations was one of amusement. With those who, although at present peaceable, believe that the time is coming when force will be used to change the social system, the feeling approached gratification. Such doings played into their hands; the country was having its eyes opened to the condition of the industrial world. Such men are altogether pleased at experiments in social innovations, such as co-operative colonies and similar "veneering of rotten wood." These things are trifling beside what they want to do; and the healing of a few wrongs, in their opinion, will only delay the day when the whole great injustice shall be righted. It is rather agreeable than otherwise to them to see things going from bad to worse. Such "outrages," they trust, will bring recruits to the socialistic or anarchistic camp, and so hasten the "great day" for which they wait.

Individual millionaires who are prominent before the public come in for their share of criticism, which is of a frank sort, although not too bitter. These radicals believe absolutely that the money given in charity by philanthropic men of enormous wealth was stolen from the people. Morgan, Hill, Schiff and company they do not hesitate to brand as "crooks," although they admit such men are "crooks" of genius. But the brand of "crookedness" is essentially the same as that of the pickpocket, they assert. "Do you suppose," said one of them, "that the boy who steals your handkerchief wouldn't rather steal your bank account if he could? Only at present the work is divided, and the boy steals one and the big operators steal the other. The same opinion, or approximately the same, holds good throughout the socialist camp, in regard to Mr. Carnegie. They do not forget the Homestead strike; they say that he has killed men not only at that time, but in his workshops as well, and observe that when men get through working in his factories they haven't much time to spend in his libraries. But they generally grant him a measure of sincerity. Mr. Schiff, whose benefactions to the poor of New York are many, is also held to be sincere, but there are not many good words for him, for all that. Large employers of labor who figure prominently as philanthropists are rather lauched at by those who know how the men, women and children in their employ are treated.

Of all the great millionaire philanthropists there is only one who comes in for abuse at all times and from all these people. That one is Mr. Rockefeller. So far as can be found he is friendless among workingmen of a socialistic turn.

A MURDERER

Hard Work to Get Rid of One at Monaco.

King Finally Gave Him a Pension and He Departed.

There is a little kingdom on the shore of the Mediterranean sea, between France and Italy. The name of this kingdom is Monaco, says the New York Post. Its population is smaller than that of a big village, amounting to about 7000 people, and there is not even as much as an acre of land to a soul. But there is a real kinglet in this little kingdom by the sea; and the kinglet has everything—a palace, a court, ministers, archbishops, generals and also an army. Not a big army, just sixty men, but an army, nevertheless. The kinglet's income is very insignificant. To be sure, there is a tax on tobacco, on wine and on brandy, as everywhere else, and the people there drink and smoke, yet their number is so small that the kinglet would not have enough to support himself, his court and his officials, if he did not have a special source of income. The special income is from the gambling establishment in his kingdom—from roulette. People gamble, lose or win, and the proprietor gains all the time. And out of these gains the proprietor pays the kinglet big sums of money. He pays big sums of money, because this is the only gambling establishment that remains in Europe. Before, there used to be such gambling establishments in the domain of each of the German princes, but they were prohibited some time ago. The reason why they were prohibited was they used to bring about many disagrecable consequences. Someone would come there to gamble, would lose everything—his own and sometimes other people's money as well—and then he would either drown or shoot himself for grief. The Germans prohibited this in the domain of their princes, but there was nobody to prohibit it in Monaco. So it remains there.

And since then all those bent upon gambling go there. There they lose their money, and in the meantime the kinglet gains. You cannot easily make marble palaces by honest labor. The little czar of Monaco knows well that this is a wicked business, but what shall he do? He must live. To live on the income from brandy and wine is not much better, he thinks. So the kinglet lives, reigns, grabs money and conducts affairs in his palace just as the real, great kings do.

There is the same pomp at the coronation; the kinglet awards medals, reviews parades, has councils and laws and courts of justice, the same as real kings, only on a small scale.

One day, about five years ago, a murder took place in the land of this kinglet. The people of that kingdom are a peaceful lot, and such a thing never happened there before. The judges assembled, investigated and tried the case. There were judges, and prosecutors, and jurymen, and lawyers. They tried the case, and condemned the man to capital punishment—to death by the guillotine. Very well. The decree was presented to the kinglet. The kinglet read the sentence and confirmed it. The murderer should be put to death. But there was one trouble—the kingdom had neither the guillotine nor the executioner to behead the criminal.

The ministers began to think what to do, and they soon decided to inquire of the French government whether it could furnish for a certain time the necessary machinery and executioner to behead a criminal, and how much the thing would cost. A letter was forwarded to the French government. In a week they received an answer, saying that the machine and the executioner could be had for the sum of 16,000 francs. This was reported to the kinglet. The kinglet thought the matter over, considered it carefully. Sixteen thousand francs! "The rascal," he said, "isn't worth so much!" Could it not be done more cheaply? Sixteen thousand francs! This meant to burden each inhabitant with a tax of a little over two francs. It was too much. They might rebel. A meeting was called to decide what to do.

At the meeting it was decided to write to the king of Italy. The French government was a republic; it had no respect for kings; but the king of Italy was, after all, one of their own. He might, therefore, quote a lower rate. The letter was forwarded, and 'an answer came immediately. The Italian government wrote that it would send both the machine and the executioner with pleasure, and that it would cost in all 12,000 francs. Cheaper, but dear, nevertheless! The rascal was not worth even as much as 12,000 francs. This would again mean to assess the people a little less than 2 francs each.

Again a session was held. The ministers thought, considered the matter carefully. Perhaps it could be done in a less expensive way. Perhaps some of the soldiers would undertake to behead the murderer. A general was summoned.

"Isn't there a soldier in your army who would cut a rascal's head off?" he was asked. "Anyway, they are supposed to kill people in time of war! That's what a soldier is trained for!"

The general spoke to the soldiers, but none of them would undertake to do it. "No," they said; "we can't do this, nor were we taught to do it."

What was to be done? Again they thought and thought, called special sessions, committees, commissions. Then they changed their minds, and decided to substitute life imprisonment for capital punishment. The king would thus show his mercy, and at the same time the expense would not be so large. The king was satisfied, and the matter was settled. But here was another trouble—there was no permanent prison in the land where the prisoner might be kept for a lifetime. There were some small rooms, where prisoners were held for a short while, but there was no solid prison to keep one forever. A place was found in the end. The fellow was imprisoned. A guard was stationed to watch him.

The guard watched him, and used to go to the kitchen of the kinglet to get food for the prisoner. The fellow was there six months—a year.

At the end of the year the kinglet began to go over his accounts, and noticed a new expense; and not a small expense it was that went to maintain the prisoner. A special guard and food! It cost him 600 francs during the year. And the fellow was young, healthy; he would live another fifty years. Just think of how much that would amount to! Too expensive. It could not remain so. The kinglet summoned the ministers and told them: "Think of some plan by which we can punish that rascal more cheaply. He costs us entirely too much."

The Columbia

West Superior.

The ministers assembled and cudgelled their heads over the matter. One of them said: "I believe it were a good idea to discharge the guard." Said another: "But the prisoner would run away!" "Let him go!" said the first.

This was reported to the king. He, too, was satisfied. The guard was discharged. Now they wondered what the prisoner would do. They saw that when the dinner hour arrived the criminal came out, looked around for the guard, and not finding him, went to the kitchen of the king to get something to eat. He took everything they gave him there, went back to the prison, closed the door behind him, and stayed there. The next day he did the same. He went for his food, came back—but did not go away!

What now? Again they thought.

"Let us rather tell him plainly," they said, "that we don't want him there any longer. Let him go."

Very well. The minister of justice summoned the prisoner and said to him:

"Why don't you go away? There is no one to watch you there. You may freely leave the prison, and the king won't feel insulted."

"The king wouldn't feel insulted, but I have no place to go. Where shall I go? You have disgraced me by the sentence; nobody will have anything to do with me now; I am retired from everything now. You did not treat me properly. It was wrong to act so. You condemned me to capital punishment. Very well. You should have killed me—but you didn't. That is first. Then you sentenced me to imprisonment for life, and put a guard to bring me food. Then you removed the guard. That is second. Still I was satisfied—I didn't protest. I went for food myself. Now you tell me, 'Go!' Now; you may say what you please, I will not go anywhere."

Again a meeting was called. What was to be done? He would not go away. They thought and thought.

"We must allow him a pension," they finally decided. "Without this you cannot get rid of him." This was reported to the king.

"We cannot help it," he said; "we must get rid of him in some way."

They allowed the prisoner 600 francs a year, and notified him of their decision.

"Well," he said, "if you promise to pay me regularly I will go."

It was decided. He received 200 francs in advance, bid them all good-by, and left the domain of the kinglet. He settled down somewhere in the neighborhood, bought some land, began to cultivate a vegetable garden, and lived in clover.

He goes regularly for his pension. Getting it, he steps into the gambling house and puts up two or three francs. Sometimes he wins, sometimes he loses. Then he returns to his house and leads a life of peace and happiness. It was fortunate for the man that he did not commit the crime in a land where they are not too stingy either to cut one's head off or to maintain permanent prisons.

SECULAR SHOTS AT PULPIT

Washington Post: Dowie may appear flighty at times, but he never forgets to take up a collection.

Chicago Post: Bishop Potter pleads for the exercise of common sense in China. As this is not overworked even at home it is not surprising that it should be forgotten abroad.

Indianapolis Press: The charlatan, Dowie, declares that there is a conspiracy hatching to send him to the insane asylum. The conspirators could very easily make out a case.

Buffalo Express: Certain clergymen and other good people of Denver have been elected to answer a charge of contempt of court because of criticisms on the court's decision in liquor cases. It appears to be a case of failing to realize that good morals are not always good law.

New York Herald: There is an old refectory in Italy whose walls were adorned with a magnificent picture. Some vandal covered up the picture with whitewash. Clean off the whitewash and you will find the picture. Do the same with Christianity and you will find something worth while.

Brooklyn Eagle: Toledo is to have a church trust. All the religious organizations are to unite to keep dishonest men out of office and enforce wise laws. Unless the various societies devote all their time to quarreling among themselves this will be the best trust that ever was and even Kansas and Texas cannot complain.

Nashville American: Men are not attracted to church by mere lecturers on social and civil topics. The more intelligent of them do not care to hear sensational preaching. Why should the minister attempt to imitate or compete with the platform lecturer, the stump speaker or the stereopticon showman? If the word of God, the message of Christ, is not to be preached from the pulpit, where shall it be preached?

Louisville Courier Journal: "Elijah" Dowie, who announces that the doctors have formed a conspiracy to kidnap him, should be specific enough to fix the date when the kidnapping is to come off instead of asking his followers to sit up o' nights indefinitely to protect him. Even a one-horse prophet ought to be able to do that. But if the doctors should kidnap Dowie what could they do to him worse than he has done to some of his poor dupes whom he has sent to their graves?

BLASTS FROM RAM'S HORN.

He who submits is not subdued.
Perfect praise proceeds only from pure lips.
The tonicst 400 would never furnish Gideon's 300.
Nothing is more irritable to the restless than rest.
The policy man doesn't always get the premiums.
Prejudice masquerades as principle that it may slay it.
It is not wise to consume all mud because some contains diamonds.
He who compounds with the devil is likely to be impounded by him.
The merit that leads great souls to emulation leads little ones to envy.
The success of your ministry does not depend on the strength of your misery.
When God shuts the door in your face it is to force you to find the other door.

GOOD OLD-TIME RELIGION.

The good old-time religion that we have
In Bowerville—
That is the kind that suits me, an' the kind that always will
There ain't no new that isn't free—the same as heavenly grace—
But then I sort o' claim a seat up in the "Amen" place.
And it is good to hear the way the old-time stanzas ring
When Parson Brown lines out the hymn an' says: "Arise and sing."

The good, old-time religion, an' the old-time music, too,
It sets your soul a-singin' 'fore the verse is half-way through.
There ain't no high-priced singer, who seems too good fer earth,
A-warblin' just enough to give the folks their money's worth.
The congregation sings the song—it may not off the key—
But still the old-time praise an' song is good enough fer me.

The good old-fashioned heaven is the one I want to see.
No fine spun "mental theory" can fill the bill fer me.
I'm livin' right, an' doin' right, an' prayin' right, as well,
An' hope that I, an all the rest, will miss the old-time hell.
Some people call it "sheol," or some word that means the same,
But I'm old-fashioned 'nough to cling to its old-fashioned name.

The good old-time religion—the new kinds are too strange.
But thank the Lord that heaven hasn't suffered any change.
We still believe that heaven is our home up in the skies,
An' it is still old-fashioned when we call it "Paradise."
We've got new streets, an' 'lectric lights, an' water works, but still
We've got old-time religion in the church at Bowerville.

TRUST IDEA IN CHURCHES.

Philadelphia Bulletin: Not long ago it was announced that all the Protestant churches in Toledo had joined their forces in a union for more practical and efficient work. This consolidation was not intended to operate as a disclimination either for or against any particular denomination in that thriving American city. Each church retained its own liberty of action, subject only to the mutual understanding that wasteful duplication of effort and all that savored of unfriendly rivalry should be avoided so far as possible. An advisory council was created, in which every organization represented had the same number of delegates and the same weight in voting on any disputed question that might arise.

This policy was widely commented on as the formation of a church "trust," and although such a description was exaggerated, the promoters of the scheme undoubtedly had in mind the manifold advantages in economy and effectiveness which have followed the organization of combinations in business. That their example will not be without imitators is shown by the statement that the churches of the New York town of Troy, one of the busiest of the minor manufacturing centers of the Eastern states, have inaugurated a movement of the same sort; and it is not unlikely that the idea will spread in other communities of moderate size.

Whether it will prove practicable in the long run is a question which only time can answer. It is highly improbable that it will ever be successfully applied to great cities like Philadelphia, New York or Chicago, in which the population is made up of so many diverse elements and in which there are many churches whose numerical strength and influence would naturally make their members reluctant to join a federation in which congress, as in the United States senate, the smallest and weakest units have a voice equal to the others.

Nevertheless, the workings of the experiment promise to be worth noting. Every layman who is familiar with the conditions existing in the typical American town has observed the tendency to erect more church buildings than were needed to accommodate the worshipers and to maintain denominational rivalries which were not in accord with the doctrine of brotherly love. If the new movement helps to lessen this friction and to concentrate church energies in useful channels it may prove of solid value.

DECISIONS

By Supreme Court and Circuit Court at St. Paul.

St. Paul, June 29.—The decision of the supreme court in Carver vs. Crookston Lumber company, appellant, will not make the Crookston surveyor generalship more lucrative. It holds that where a contract was made requiring that logs be scaled by the surveyor general of the Minneapolis district, the scale books of the latter are admissable as evidence. The opinion is by Chief Justice Start. The decision of the Polk county court in favor of the Carvers is sustained.

These decisions were filed by the supreme court.

The Farnsworth Loan and Realty company, appellant, vs. the Commonwealth Title Insurance and Trust company, respondent. Hennepin county. Judgment affirmed. Brown, J.

Daniel Esterberg, appellant, vs. Robert W. Matthews, respondent. Ramsey county. Order reversed and new trial granted. Start, C. J.

George Goulet, appellant, vs. Joseph Dubreuille and Marie Dubreuille, his wife, respondents. Morrison county. Order reversed. Collins, J.

Harry F. Towle, respondent, vs. St. Paul Fermanent Loan company et al., defendants; St. Paul Permanent Loan company, appellant. Ramsey county. Order affirmed. Collins, J.

J. P. Smith, respondent, vs. James Kistler, Hennepin county. Judgment affirmed. Lovely, J.

The Stearns county district court is reversed in a decision handed down by Justice Brown, and the old dam across the Sauk river at Cold Springs will not be removed. The summer resort business of P. H. Kray and Jacob Friedman will be allowed to flourish, all because the dam has stood for more than forty years, and the present land owners in the vicinity have adjusted their holdings with references to its continued existence.

In the federal court the government won the dead and down case against William Sauntry, Albert Tezier and Fred Pennington, getting a jury verdict of $2716.50 today. The jury deliberated three hours. The jury had submitted to them special findings in regard to whether or not the defendants cut the timber in a portion of section 28. The defendants claimed that this portion was cut by a man named Geraghty, and the jury sustained this statement. The defendants were sued for timber trespass in Douglas county, Wis., and accused of cutting over 800,000 feet of timber on government lands.

The jury which tried the suit of Nels Olson against the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie Railway company returned into court with a sealed verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $15,000. It was in this case that one of the witnesses for the plaintiff acknowledged perjuring himself, and he is now occupying a cell in the county jail., Olson, the plaintiff, was a brakeman in defendant's employ, and had his arm crushed while making a coupling at Enderlin, N. D. He claimed that while he was in the act of making the coupling that the engine backed down against one of the cars without giving any signal of its approach. He sued for $20,000.

DUN'S REVIEW

Bank Failure Not Caused By General Business Conditions.

New York, June 26.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly review of trade says:

It does not follow because bad banking methods have caused one of the smaller New York banks to close its doors, with attendant circumstances that create discussion in Wall street, that general business is in any way affected by or at all responsible for the trouble. The country is undeniably prosperous with respect to an abundant harvest to supply all our needs and increasing European deficiencies. The situation is viewed with confidence. A few more labor disturbances have arisen, but others have been settled, notably the dispute over the tin plate scale. Some disagreements in the coal regions at times assume a threatening apect, but the troubles have been local and do not affect the mining industry. Reports from the country speak of a continued active movement of merchandise at the jobbing trade and embracing nearly all lines.

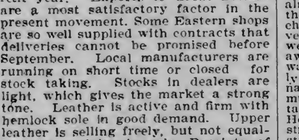
The fiscal year closes with conditions in the iron and steel industry in marked contrast to the situation at the corresponding date in 1900. Quotations were then receding rapidly without stimulating activity, idleness was the rule at furnaces and mills and wage scales were under serious discussion with employers and labor organizations and far apart in their views. This year difficulty is experienced in stopping machinery longer enough to make necessary repairs. Prices are well maintained and steady without unreasonable inflation, while a successful season makes it possible for many concerns to avoid controversy by voluntarily reducing hours or advancing wages and evidences of serious disagreement are the exception. Construction proceeds at an unprecedented pace so that structural material, builders' hardware and kindred goods find ready purchasers. Railway facilities are inadequate to handle expanding traffic and shops are crowded with orders for new freight cars and other equipment.

Footwear forwardings from Boston averaged over 10,000 cases weekly for two months, raising the total for the half year to 2,358,521 cases, according to weekly records of the Shoe and Leather Reporter. The largest previous total for the corresponding month was in 1900 and fell 154,151 cases short of the current year. Exports to Great Britain are a most satisfactory factor in the present movement. Some Eastern shops are so well supplied with contracts that deliveries cannot be promised before September. Local manufacturers are running on short time or closed for stock taking. Stocks in dealers are light, which gives the market a strong tone. Leather is active and firm with hemlock sole in good demand. Upper leather is selling freely, but not equaling the activity in sole. Receipts of imported dry hides are light and prices well sustained, while slaughter hides at Chicago have made further advances and holders are inclined to wait for still better terms.

Wheat prospects are further improved throughout the entire producing region. More satisfactory to the producer than evidences of a banner yield is the failure of quotations to show commensurate decline, for there is good profit at present prices. Foreign needs continue the sustaining influences, in four weeks Atlantic exports, flour included aggregating 13,693,000 bus. against 1,980,076 last year, and 8,324,628 in 1899, while Pacific exports were 3,565,460 bushels, compared with 2,753,978 in 1900, and 2,445,740 two years ago. Corn is supported by reports of injury and receipts are less than half last year's, but the export movement is equally unsatisfactory.

Wheels at textile mills are no longer generally idle. Improvement in all branches of this industry has come with a rush and manufacturers are making up some earlier losses. Gains are more conspicuous in the woolen goods division because depression had lasted longer and been more severe. As the raw material gradually sought a lower level, mills restricted purchases in anticipation of better terms except where orders for goods were secured. The clothing trade is now seeking men's wear woolens and worsteds, and buyers find stocks light. Values have not yet hardened, but there is little thought of lower prices either for goods or raw wool. In knit goods jobbers are taking stock, after which activity is expected. Last week's gain in cotton goods has been held and there is more business than at any time this season. Prices are still unsatisfactory, especially in view of the further rise in raw material. Many reports of injury to growing cotton tend to advance prices in the face of heavy receipts on the old crop.

Failures for the week numbered 204 in the United States, against 207 last year, and 23 in Canada, against 21 last year.



"DEAR GIRL."

Had Her Picture In His Watch Beside His Wife's.

Detroit, Mich., June 29.—Homer C. Millen, a millionaire manufacturer of Rochester, N. Y., who has taken up a residence in Michigan for the sake of getting a divorce, when in court was given a surprise. Mrs. Millen and the two sisters of the plaintiff entered, having just reached here from Syracuse, N. Y. He thought she was not going to contest his suit. It was a paralyzer for Millen, as his own relatives will testify against him.

He accussed his wife of being insanely jealous, saying he had to be careful how he spoke to the hired girls in the house, and that in one month they had eight cooks. Millen was put on the stand, and then it came out that his stenographer, May Chase, was the cause of the trouble. He admitted writing to her many letters, calling her his "Dear girl," "My dear wife," etc., and that he had the girl's photograph pasted in his watch by the side of his wife's.

BAD STORMS

Do Great Damage In Vicinity of the Twin Cities.

St. Paul, June 29.—Heavy storms with more or less damage are reported all over this section yesterday afternoon and the loss will run well up into the thousands, while a number of people have been injured and many head of livestock killed. The worst storm was that which passed through a large district south of New Richmond, Wis. It was a genuine tornado and did much damage to farm property, although fortunately no lives were lost. On a smaller scale is resembled the tornado which swept over and destroyed the greater portion of New Richmond two years ago. Over a dozen farmers have already reported the loss of part or all of their buildings, windmills, livestock, machinery, etc., and the loss there will be very heavy. In some cases the buildings were crushed down and in others swept away by the wind, while flood damage was elsewhere reported. Rainfall of nearly four inches is reported there. A tornado is also reported to have caused much loss about Star Prairie, some distance to the north of New Richmond. Hector, Minn., reports all crops destroyed, six miles north of there by a destructive hail storm. Bird Island and Montevideo, Minn., both suffered considerably. In these two cities the storm was very threatening but only minor damage was done.

Minneapolis, June 29.—With all the accompanying phenomena of a tornado, except the funnel shaped cloud, a heavy electrical, wind and rain storm swept over this city at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The streets were filled with anxious crowds watching the clouds and when the storm finally broke the only wonder is that more were not injured. The dead:

HOLLY BENNETT, killed by live wire.

Injured: Dell Eck, shocked by live wire, at first reported dead. Mrs. Moorey, leg broken, shoulder dislocated. The Home laundry, where Mrs. Moorey was injured, was totally wrecked.

The storm levelled part of the canvas enclosure of the Pawnee Bill, Wild West show and several people were injured, none seriously. Scores of window lights were broken throughout the business district, in some cases the force being from within as in a tornado.

One of the grain tanks being built by the Pioneer Steel Elevator company in Southeast Minneapolis was tilted from its foundation and collapsed like an empty glove. The workmen barely escaped.

MURDERED A RIVAL.

Mother and Daughter on Trial In Kentucky.

Somerset, Ky., June 29.—Nancy Hunnelley and Phoebe King, mother and daughter, are on trial in the Pulaski circuit court for the murder of Epsey Sellers, near Flat Rock, Ky., nearly one year ago.

Nancy Hunnelley's husband had, it was alleged, been paying attention to Epsey Sellers. Mrs. Hunnelley became jealous, and she is alleged to have sent her boy with a decoy note to Mrs. Sellers, who was waylaid by Nancy Hunnelley and her daughter, Phoebe King, beaten with clubs, shot and killed. The daughter is alleged to have held Epsey Sellers, while her mother shot and beat her to death.

After the murder Mrs. Hunnelley left the state and was only captured about one month ago in Virginia, where she and her son had been in hiding. Mrs. Hunnelley is rather good looking, and her daughter, Phoebe King, is quite a beauty and a belle in her vicinity.

Mother and daughter are still in jail, bail having been refused by Judge Morrow to Phoebe King several months ago. It will take several days to select a jury and try the case.

CHEMICAL ANALYSIS.

Reveals That "Peruna is Calculated to Tone Up the System, Restore the Functions and Procure Health."

SO SAYS PROF. L. J. MILLER, CHEMIST.

Prof. L. J. Miller, late Professor of Chemistry and Botany of the High School of Ypsilanti, Mich., writes from 3327 N. Clark Street, Chicago, Ill., as follows:

"As several of my friends have spoken to me of the favorable results obtained through the use of Peruna, especially in cases of catarrh I examined it most thoroughly to learn its contents.

"I found it composed of extracts of herbs and barks of most valuable medicinal qualities combined with other ingredients, delicately balanced, calculated to tone up the system, restore the functions and procure health.

"I consider Peruna one of the most skillfully and scientifically prepared medicines, which the public can use with safety and success."—Prof. L. J. Miller.

"Builds Up the System."

Hon. Joseph H. Ridgeway, Secretary of the American Anti-Treat Society, writes the following letter from the Grand Central Hotel, St. Paul, Minn.:

"It is with great pleasure that I endorse Peruna as an honest medicine, competent to do all it claims. I have used it several times and know of nothing that cures so completely, and at the same time builds up the system.

Joseph Ridgeday.

"I have recommended it to a number of my friends and always feel that I do them a service for I know how satisfactorily the results invariably are. I only wish every family had a bottle—it would save much sickness and doctor bills."—Joseph H. Ridgeway.

"Feel Better Than for Five Years."

Mr. James B. Taylor, Roberts, Ind., writes:

"I am at the present time entirely well. I can eat anything I ever could. I took five bottles of Peruna, and feel better now than I have for five years. I have doctored with other doctors off and on for fifteen years, so I can recommend your medicine very highly for stomach troubles. I take great pleasure in thanking you for your free advice and Peruna."—James B. Taylor.

"I Enjoy My Meals as I Used to."

Mr. J. W. Pritchard, Wolf Lake, Ind., writes:

"I am pleased to say that I have been cured of catarrh of the stomach by Peruna. I could hardly eat anything that agreed with me. Before I would get half through my meal my stomach would fill with gas causing me much distress and unpleasant feelings for an hour or two after each meal. But, thanks to your Peruna, I am now completely cured, and can eat anything I want to without any of the distressing symptoms. I can now enjoy my meals as I used to do, and it is all due to Dr. Hartman and his wonderful medicine, Peruna.

"It has been one year since I was cured, and I am all O. K. yet, so I know I am cured."—J. W. Pritchard.

Dyspepsia is a very common phase of summer catarrh. A remedy that will cure catarrh of one location will cure it anywhere. Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. That it is a prompt and permanent cure for catarrh of the stomach the above letters testify.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

IN COPPER DISTRICT

Plans of Amalgamated Company Are of Peculiar Interest.

Belief That It Will Consolidate Several Lake Properties.

Adventure Has Another Carload of Copper Ready to Ship.

Houghton, Mich., June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The overshadowing interest in the copper industry is the Amalgamated Copper company and its intentions. There seems little reason to doubt the intention of the Amalgamated company to cut a much wider swath in the lake district than has heretofore been the case. The Amalgamated is practically a Standard Oil concern, and it was in the Arcadian mine, of this district, that Standard Oil people first invested in copper mines. The Arcadian was not the success that had been hoped, and the Amalgamated company, when organized, devoted its attention to Montana mines, where the complications of politics, mining law and personal animosities have kept the company pretty busy without enlarging its scope. It is generally thought in this district that the Amalgamated people—which may or may not mean the Amalgamated company—are heavily interested in the Isle Royale mine, and it is quite certain that control of the Trimountain mine was secured by the Standard Oil people, or those very closely affiliated with them, last March. There is also good ground for believing that the same people are behind the proposed consolidation of the Baltic, Trimountain and Copper Range companies, the latter including a half ownership in the Champion mine. To round out this proposed consolidation the Atlantic and St. Mary's Land company should be included. Such a consolidation would result in the formation of a company of almost unlimited resources in the way of developed and developing mines, with mineral lands of enormous value held in reserve.

It would not be surprising were the Tamarack and Osceola mines to be added eventually to the Standard Oil group. The present management of the mines named is connected quite closely with the Amalgamated company, through the recent Montana mining deals, and perhaps otherwise. Of the other great producing mines of the district, Calumet & Hecla, Quincy and Wolverine, it may be said that control could not easily be secured, even by so powerful a corporation as the Amalgamated company, unless at prices that would appear dizzy compared with their present values. The shares of these corporations are owned by thousands of different holders, and were mostly bought for permanent investment purposes, hence could not be easily secured.

The Wyandot people, who are now confining their work to diamond drill borings, have cut a conglomerate, believed to be No. 3, which underlies the Baltic lode at the three mines opened on that bed.

The Adventure mine has another carload of copper ready for shipment. This is mass and barrel copper secured in opening work. Owing to the seven parallel cupriferous beds opened by the Adventure within a distance of less than 1000 feet, a tremendous amount of stamp rock is now available for milling purposes. The Adventure is a strong local favorite, and the heavy assessment of $6 per share recently levied has had the effect of sending the stock up, rather than of depressing it.

No. 5 shaft of the Tamarack will be ready for production next fall, by which time eight levels will be opened, allowing sixteen stopes in a lode running about twenty feet in width. The rock in No. 5 is certainly above the average of the other workings, and may be safely set down as averaging somewhere between 2 and 3 per cent—the determination of the exact percentage requiring the test of actual milling for a protracted period. No. 5 Tamarack will eventually become the deepest shaft in the world, now lacking about 150 feet of holding that position. It is being equipped on a scale corresponding to its depth and the great expectations based upon its working. It will double the production of the mine when in full working order, and will place the Tamarack as a producer in the place occupied by the Calumet & Hecla a little more than ten years ago.

On July 1 James MacNaughton will assume the position of superintendent of the Calumet & Hecla, succeeding both S. D. Warriner, the former superintendent, and S. B. Whiting, the general manager, the last named title being abolished. A number of important changes are likely to occur as a result of the change of local management, which is generally held to be the signal for a considerable change in policy.

The Mohawk has about 350 barrels of mohawkite at the mine, ready for shipment. This peculiar mineral, which carries practically two-thirds of its weight in native copper and 28 per cent in arsenic, is also rich in nickel and averages about twenty ounces of silver to the ton, beside containing a small percentage of antimony and cobalt. The barrels average 1500 pounds in weight, and the value of the mineral is about 10 cents per pound, making each barrel worth about $150. The smelter now building, especially for the reduction of this mineral, near Hackensack, N. J., will soon be in commission, and will smelt a minimum of 100 tons per month, with a maximum capacity of about 180 tons monthly. The mine has about 5000 tons of mohawkite, worth approximately $1,000,000, in sight above the third level.

The great value of the mohawkite seam in the mohawkite mine will lead to greater attention being given the fissure veins crossing the copper belts transversely. These fissures are fairly frequent in Ontonagon county, of occasional occurrence in Houghton county, and very common in Keweenaw county. As a rule they carry native copper in a decomposed rock matrice, but occasionally contain copper ores. The old Mendota mine, near Keweenaw Point, was rich in fissure veins carrying ores of copper. A fissure vein of chalcocite, or "copper glance," was found last fall at the Champion mine, and what is apparently a narrow fissure of mohawkite ore has been observed in the Baltic. At the Sheldon & Columbian mine, in the eastern part of this city, a fissure vein of whitenyite was cut in opening a new street. Domeykite has also been discovered on the same property, as well as stibio-domeykite, which is merely a form of domeykite (an arsenide of copper) containing a small proportion of antimony, a metal having a great affinity for arsenic.

The foundations for the new mills of the Wolverine and Mohawk mines are completed. The mills will be in commission some time next spring.

The Belt mine, held under option by R. C. Pryor, of Houghton, is being unwatered and will be reopened. It is understood that N. F. Leopold, of Chicago, who promoted the Arcadian and Isle Royale companies, is behind the Belt deal, and proposes giving the mine a thorough test before any attempt is made to reorganize the property and float its shares. The Belt is in a good neighborhood, being located close to the Mass and Adventure mines, but has been given a black eye in the past by the most culpable mismanagement. The mine was working, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say that the shareholders were "worked" by an English corporation some fifteen years ago. This unfortunate company managed to expend $1,250,000 on the property, and for this expenditure secured actual underground openings of less than a quarter of a mile. It is needless to say that the experiment proved a flat failure, as there is not an amygdaloid mine in the district, not even the Quincy or Wolverine, that could possibly make money on such limited openings.

M. R. Goldsworthy, of Hancock, holds options on the Hancock mine, in the western part of Hancock, supplemented by options on the mineral rights underlying 220 acres of adjoining lands, and is now negotiating with Eastern capitalists with a view to reorganizing and reopening the mine, which has been a considerable producer in past years. The property lies next south and west of the Quincy.

TO CURE HER SON.

A Credulous Woman Gave a Gypsy $600.

Indianapolis, June 29.—Frederick W. Brink and his wife, aged Germans, have been despoiled of $600 by a gypsy woman. They have a son under treatment in the Central Indiana Insane asylum. This was discovered by the gypsy, and calling at the Brink home she said she could cure him by the aid of supernatural powers. Mrs. Brink was carried away by the proposition, and acting under instructions she produced $600, which the gypsy rolled up in flannel, and, pretending to hand it back, instructed Mrs. Brink to place it in the cellar, to remain undisturbed until her return. The gypsy failed to come back, and then Mrs. Brink discovered that she had been duped out of $600. Mrs. Brink had been visiting clairvoyants and trance mediums for several years, hopeful of benefiting her son, and this made her an easy prey.

Of the Future Centers In Great Industrial Struggle.

Race Between England, Germany and the United States.

Suffering From Obstacles Which Hinder Their Free Movement.

From The Herald Washington Bureau.

Washington, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—The following has been received from Consul Mahin, of Reichenberg: Under the title of "The Struggle for Industrial Supremacy," Dr. Alexander Von Penez makes a noteworthy contribution to the Munich Allgemeine Zeitung. "Not China and not the Transvaal war," he declares, "but the race between the great industrial countries—England, Germany and the United States—forms to coolly-calculating politicians the foremost, weightiest and most enduring interest of the future. Slowly has England grown commercially, more rapidly has Germany risen after gaining political unity and establishing the protective system, but like a storm is the forward movement of the United States."

After reviewing the progress of England and Germany in commerce and manufactures, Dr. Von Peez passes to the United States, "rising in the new world with sinister rapidity." He says:

"Its nationality has its roots in Germanic traits. It received, either from its Celtic mixture or as a characteristic of American soil, its qualities of unrest, assertiveness and unexpectedness in action. The American has had the good luck, besides, to draw to himself from his two competitors a share of their own skill and of their own acquisitions, through emigration from Germany and England. From the combination of all these qualities has resulted the undoubted superiority of a mighty land, stretching from ocean to ocean, full of coal and iron and treasures of the soil, inhabited by a trained, numerous and daring people, spiritually and morally undistracted, and ardently devoted to their various pursuits. The three competing countries now suffer from obstacles which hinder their free movement. Germany has China, England the Transvaal, America the Philippines. From appearances, the United States will be the first to throw off its burden. After that country shall be free from the Philippine war, its industrial advance upon Europe will be fully manifested."

After enumerating a variety of manufactured wares which our country is sending to different parts of the world, Dr. Von Peez exclaims:

"And with all this, the United States has not yet unbuckled one piece of the almost impenetrable armor in which she is incased, while demanding open doors of others everywhere. Our opportunity comes with the commercial treaties. What should first be done in defense is to follow the example, in regard to tariffs and trade treaties, which the United States has set for us. At the European seashore (England is included herein), a tariff should be established counter to that of the Union, while the European nations should arrange tariffs touching each other which would not materially differ from those now existing. But only the restoration of the tripartite imperial alliance would offer those guaranties which are requisite in a matter of such great importance. It is probable that the yet powerful but much threatened Great Britain would not remain far from such a union.

"What will the United States do? That is her affair. We only follow her example. Perhaps she will propose an understanding. But what says Ranke? 'It is not in the nature of predominant forces to restrict themselves; boundaries must be established for them.' A people so young, acute and rich in future possibilities as the citizens of the Union will find boundaries to their aspirations only when they see that attempts at further conquest will be met with vigorous resistance."

Conditions in the Samoan islands since the transfer of Tutuila and Mauna to the United States and Savaii and Upolu to the German government is the subject of a report by the British consul located in the islands, a copy of which has just been received by the treasury bureau of statistics. The report is as follows:

"The islands of Savaii and Upolu were annexed by Germany on March 1, 1900. Shortly afterwards, on April 17, the United States took possession of Tutuila and Manua. The only export for many years has been copra amounting to, in 1897, £45,000; 1898, £80,000; 1899, £90,000; 1900, £46,000. Copra, largely used for the manufacture of soap and candles, etc., goes to the United Kingdom, France, Germany, Russia, Italy and the United States, principally to the United Kingdom and Germany. One of the first acts of the governor was to protect the natives by enforcing fair weights; he is now endeavoring to induce them to make a better article.

"At the present time cacao is engaging much attention here. At a distance of two or three miles from the sea it grows almost wild, and can be cultivated with success everywhere in Samoa, except perhaps on the summit of the mountains, where the climate will probably be too cold. The quality is good. Mr. Carruthers' cacao fetched lately the highest price in the London market. The governor is introducing plants of the celebrated Soconusco variety from Mexico. Cacao planting should draw the attention of home capitalists. The great drawback is that leases from the natives for a longer period than ten years are not likely to be confirmed, as the government does not wish to encourage land speculators, and refers any application of this kind to the Berlin authorities.

"Coffee has been a failure. Even the hardy Liberian coffee introduced a few years ago is now suffering from the same disease that destroyed the Mocha and other varieties. Vanilla and kola promise well. Rubber should also succeed. Bananas and pineapples are shipped occasionally to Auckland in small quantities, but the time occupied in transit is too long, and the fruit is often spoiled on the voyage.

"The principal articles imported are: Salt beef in kegs and tinned meats, entirely from Auckland; soap, from Auckland and Sydney; prints, long cloth and other articles of drapery, etc., principally from Auckland and Sydney, although during the last three years merchants have begun to import from Hamburg many articles formerly brought from the colonies. Kerosene oil, tinned biscuit and lumber come from San Francisco.

"Commercial travelers from Auckland and Sydney visit Samoa regularly for orders. The large German firm founded by the Godeffroys, for many years established in this group, imports from Hamburg the greatest part of the manufactured goods used in the carrying on of its business.

"At present the import duties are as follows: Ale, 50 cents per dozen quarts; spirits, $2.50 per gallon; wine, $1 per gallon; sparkling wine, $1.50 per gallon; tobacco, 50 cents per pound; cigars, $1 per pound; sporting arms, $4 each; gunpowder, 25 cents per pound. On all other articles, ad valorem, 2 per cent on invoice cost and charges.' It is supposed that some alterations will be made before long in this tariff.

"Storekeepers pay a yearly tax of from $12 to $100 per annum, according to the business. The tax on buildings is 1 per cent yearly on two-thirds of their value; that on trades and professions is from $3 to $60 per annum. There is an export tax of 2½ per cent on the value of copra shipped. All of the above were imposed originally in accordance with the Berlin treaty of 1889.

"The population of German Samoa consists of about 200 whites, 300 half-castes and 32,000 natives. Imports, therefore, cannot be very large, native wants in a climate like this being limited; but should planting companies be formed, and the land utilized, matters will assume a very different aspect.

"There is more protection for property now than formerly was the case when the islands were under the rule of a native sovereign. The government is conciliating both parties with much success, and at present the relations between the natives and all foreigners are most amicable. If a rebellion should occur, it would arise out of the disputes between the old conflicting native factions.

"The area of Upolu is 220,000 acres; of Savaii, 410,000 acres; in all, 630,000 acres, of which only 20,000 acres are now being cultivated. One hundred and fifty thousand acres have been sold to foreigners. Commerce would be increased to a very great extent should the land generally be thrown open to improvement by sale or 40-year leases. The price of land ranges between $2.50 and $25 per acre, according to its situation and improvements. An American company lately sold several thousand acres in blocks at from $2 to $5 per acre.

"There are several schools in Apia, Roman Catholic and Protestant, in which English sehvices are regularly held.

"The area of Tutuila and Manua is small, perhaps 35,000 acres, much of which is steep and mountainous. Tutuila is seventy miles from Apia. Four thousand natives are living on Tutuila and 1900 on Manua, and about twenty whites and as many half-castes."

The imports of the Samoan group in 1900 were about £80,000 in value, and the exports £48,000. No details of the 1900 commerce were available when the report was sent, but the 1899 figures showed that the United States held second rank in the countries supplying the imports, the figures being: From British empire, £70,137; from the United States, £18,549; from Germany, £16,290.

Sympathy

Is a good thing for the young husband to give the young wife. But sympathy will not abate one jot of her nervousness or lift her to that plane of sound health where alone the wife and mother can find happiness.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription meets every womanly want and need. It tranquilizes the nerves, restores the appetite and induces refreshing sleep. Its use previous to maternity makes the baby's advent practically painless and gives the mother abundant nutrition for her child. "Favorite Prescription" is a woman's medicine and has no equal as a cure for womanly diseases. It establishes regularity, dries weakening drains, heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness.

Accept no substitute for "Favorite Prescription." No other medicine is "just as good" for weak and sick women.

"It affords me great pleasure to be able to say a few words in regard to the merits of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and 'Golden Medical Discovery,'" writes Mrs. Flora Arn, of Dallas, Jackson Co., Mo. "I was tempted to try these medicines after seeing the effect upon my mother. At an early age of married life I was greatly bothered with painful periods, also a troublesome drain which rendered me weak and unfit for work of any kind. I became so thin there was nothing left of me but skin and bone. My husband became alarmed and got me a bottle of 'Favorite Prescription. After he saw the wonderful effects of that one he got two more, and after I used those up there was no more pain, and I began to gain in flesh very rapidly."

Dr. Pierce's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps, to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

A MODERN SAMSON.

His Hair Cut Off and Strength Vanished.

Springfield, Ohio, June 29.—The story of Samson with modern frills and improvements attached has just come to light here and is almost complete from the beginning to the end. There is even a similarity in the names.

Madison Monroe Simpson, who has attracted attention on the streets here for years with his long curls hanging down his back, was taken to the hospital in a serious condition. Two weks ago some one stole into his room while asleep and cut off his locks.

He claims that all his strength was in his hair, and he has been growing rapidly weaker ever since. Simpson says that when he was a young boy he was frail and sickly, and that his parents allowed his hair to grow to make him strong, and that in a few years he developed into a powerful man.

Diversified Fishing at Minong

The Peaceful Valley resort at Minong, Wis., on the "Omaha Line," is proving to be a very interesting spot for a few days' or weeks' outing. The conveniences of getting back and forth excel those of other localities, and the clean, comfortable home, with its beautiful spread, attracts the hungry sportsman. The trout streams, the numerous lakes, with most excellent bass and muskalloige fishing, provide a diversity of sport. Boats, canoes, guides and all conveniences at Minong. See ticket agent, "The North-Western" Line for particulars.

WORLD OF LABOR

The Electrical Linemen's Strike Continues Without Much Change.

Labor Will Be Represented In the Fourth Parade.

Cigarmakers Want Wages Made Same as In Superior.

The regular session of the Trades' assembly was held last evening. The election of officers for the ensuing term was scheduled for last evening, but owing to the press of important business, was deferred until the next meeting. The matter of greatest interest in local labor circles at the present time is the progress being made in the electrical linemen's strike. The committee in charge of the strike, consisting of linemen delegates to the Trades' assembly and Building Trades' council, held an executive session at the close of the assembly meeting last night. The committee made a report in the assembly indicating that there is practically no change in the situation and that both sides are holding out firmly. The linemen claim that the situation from their standpoint is very favorable, that the storm has done a large amount of damage to the telephone systems and that the telephone companies must soon have men to repair. They claim that there was a shortage of linemen here before the strike and that there is little chance of importing men from the Twin Cities, where a similar shortage is said to exist. The claim for the eight-hour system of work was met by the Commercial Light and Power company, and it is said that the plan is working very satisfactorily, not only for the linemen but for the company, that the latter is having more work accomplished during the eight hours than formerly under the ten-hour system, the linemen being paid for the time actually consumed in their work, where formerly the time taken in going to and from the work was figured in the ten hours.

The assembly has voted $100 toward carrying on the strike, each lineman unemployed to receive $10 a week until a settlement is reached. It is claimed that liberal pledges of money in support of the strike have been made. Many of the linemen are said to be doing inside wiring for other than the telephone companies. Another meeting of the executive committee will be held this evening.

The labor organizations of the city will be well represented in the parade on the Fourth of July. Gordon O'Neill, who is on the committee, reported at the assembly meeting on Friday evening that there would be at least 500 union men in line. Thirteen unions will be represented in the parade. The second division will be made up of the trades' unionists, and George M. Davis will be the marshal.

• • •

A committee from the Superior Cigarmakers' union attended the assembly to see if something could not be done in the way of making the wage scale of the cigarmakers in this city the same as that in West Superior. Higher wages have been paid in the city across the bay for this work for some time past and there has been more or less dissatisfaction over the situation. It is thought that the matter can be arranged.

The body of Andrew Nelson, a member of the Tailors' union, was found floating in the canal on Tuesday. Nelson has been missing since last March. The funeral was held on Wednesday afternoon and was attended by a large number of the friends of the decedent. The Tailors' union turned out in a body and escorted the remains to the cemetery. Rev. Mr. Krantz, of the Lutheran church, conducted the funeral services. The pall bearers were August Saxine, J. H. Moork, G. L. Leed, J. Anderson, E. Wahlgren and A. Jackson, all members of the union. The decedent was secretary of the union for a number of years.

The Wisconsin state convention of the Federation of Labor will be held in Maryland hall, in West Superior, on July 9, 10 and 11, and the labor organizations of that city are making arrangements to entertain the delegates on a grand scale. Among the features will be a banquet and a boat ride. On Wednesday evening, July 10, there will be a grand public rally, held at Maryland hall, and some of the ablest labor speakers of Wisconsin will address the people.

LABOR NOTES.

Ireland exports meat.

Canada has ten cotton mills.

Trusts are multiplying in Canada.

America has thirty-one sugar beet factories.

A Japan shipyard is over 190 years of age.

Germany's army embraces 10,000 musicians.

Our metallic products this year are valued at $527,218,084.

One-quarter of all the wheat in the world is grown here.

Our miles of railroad track exceed by more than 10,000 all the tracks of Europe.

Brooklyn union bricklayers' laborers wages have been advanced to $3 per day; were $2.75.

We manufacture more than England, France and Germany combined. We grow 80 per cent of the world's cotton.

At New York, the Tar, Felt and Waterproof Roofers' union will raise its initiation fee to nearly double next month.

No British ship may carry a deckload of timber into a British port between Oct. 1 and April 16.

Only about 20 per cent of the waiters in German hotels and restaurants receive any wages, as they are expected to live on their fees.

The Midland Railway company, in England, is fixing sixty as the age limit of its staff in most cases. At 65 all, with very few exceptions, must retire.

Of the five great gold-producing areas, Russia alone remains unprogressive, while the United States and Canada have doubled their product in the last twenty years.

The demand for farm hands has caused such a drain upon the labor supply of Kansas that advertisements in the large cities for unskilled men, even at double rates, are unheeded.

Miss Sophie Becker, a bright and educated young woman of Chicago, is organizing a servant girls' union in that city. She insists that a premium be set on competency, wants the question of working hours to be definitely adjusted, and says that a trade standard should be established.

The annual agreement between the iron molders and their associated employers has been renewed for another year. The agreement throughout the United States, affecting 45,000 molders, has been signed between the Iron Molders' Union of North America and the National Foundry Men's association.

The first labor day Japan ever knew was absorbed in Tokio on April 3 last. The celebration was proposed and managed by the Niroku Shinpo, a newspaper, "a friend of the laboringman." Scarcely ten days had passed after the first announcement of the Niroku's undertaking when more than 50,000 laborers eagerly secured their tickets of admittance to the picnic.

Officers of the Bookbinders' International union are preparing to ask the 9000 members for authority to call a special convention in November. The reason given for calling the convention is that the bookbinders are in danger of being absorbed by the International Typographical union, and that arrangements must be made to enter into an alliance with the pressmen and other printing trades in order to defeat the plans of the printers.

A project has taken shape in Indianapolis which, unless the plans go awry, will result in the establishment of a manufacturing Utopia, an ideal industrial city in which the laboring classes will have every comfort that the rich enjoy, and at a cost proportioned to their earnings. The scheme has been inaugurated by the purchase of 850 acres of land which lies a little northeast and within four miles of Indianapolis, and here manufacturing sites are to be laid out, light, heat and power plants established and the ground plotted for an ideal iudustrial city. Sites of twenty-five acres or more, if required, are to be offered to capitalists without cost, provided they erect factory buildings.

The South includes one fourth of the total area and one-third of the population of the United States. Its cotton and cottonseed alone gave it an income last year of $545,000,000—the largest value of any single crop in the world. Its corn and its lumber product brought it the snug sum of $300,000,000. Moreover, the South raises 80 per cent of all American tobacco, mines 20 per cent of all its coal, produces 18 per cent of its iron, has 30 per cent of its total railroad mileage and a steadily increasing percentage of its manufacturing. The growth of its cotton mills has been simply wonderful. New England's old supremacy in this great industry, says the New York World, is gone, never probably to return.

"Attacked and denounced as scarcely any other institution ever has been, the unions have thriven and grown in the face of opposition. This healthy vitality has been due to the fact that they were a genuine product of social needs—indispensable against the abuses of industrial government and inevitable as a consequence of that consciousness of strength inspired by the concentration of numbers under the new conditions of industry. They have been as is now admitted by almost all candid minds, instruments of progress. Not to speak of the material advantages they have gained for workingmen, they have developed powerful sympathies among them, and taught them the lesson of self-sacrifice in the interest of their brethren, and, still more, of their successors. • • • They have brought some of the best men to the front and given them the ascendancy due to their personal qualities and desirable in the interests of society."—John K. Ingram, LL.D.

A practical solution of the labor problem seems to have been found in the great Chama district of Guatemala, where thousands of men and women are employed on vast coffee, rubber and cocoa plantations at a rate of pay equal to 6 cents per day, United States standard. Each adult thus employed works only twelve days in each month for his employer, which condition reduces the supply of labor to a point that just about equals the demand. At the time of employment the adult laborer is granted a concession of land which he must till and develop. The necessary tools are loaned by the plantation owners and the product of the land belongs absolutely to the laborer. He may use it, sell it himself or turn it over to the land owner who will sell it for him or buy it outright. Thus the laborer is enabled to raise a marketable crop and to find a cash buyer for so much of it as he may elect to sell. The Alcalde, or local magistrate, enforces with rigid severity the well-established rules for the management and cultivation of those concessions so that the property of the land owners does not suffer through the incapacity or inattention of the concessionaire. Prizes are awarded for the best products and rewards are paid for the largest crops. This scheme of independent labor makes a citizen of the savage, and the slave becomes a man. Edwin Kurtz, a student ofeconomics, who has traveled the world over, called upon Leon J. Dutton at his offices in the Stephen Girard building, Philadelphia, and explained the system to him with a view to having the plan tried on one of the great Pennsylvania farms.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Bernice Violette, aged 18, was killed by lightning at her home at Chippewa Falls Friday night. She was soon to be married.

On request of the health department, a summons was issued Friday requiring John Alexander Dowie to appear in court to defend a charge of conducting a hospital without a license. The maximum penalty is $100 fine. Dowie will be arraigned daily until he procures a license.

During a storm lightning killed four men who were at work harvesting in a wheat field near Lodi, Ind. The killed are: Frank Bridgewaters, Anderson Webster, John Wiggle, Samuel Stewart.

Judge W. A. Woods of the United States district court dropped dead yesterday morning at his home in Indianapolis.

Word was brought by the steamer City of Seattle that George O'Brien, who killed Lynn Relfe, Fred Clayson and Lawrence Oleson on the Yukon river trail in December, 1899, has been found guilty of murder in the first degree and has been sentenced to be hanged in Dawson Aug. 23. The expenses of the trial are estimated at $100,000.

D. J. Dickey, a prominent and well-to-do citizen of Elk Rapids, Mich., shot and instantly killed Fritz Huegli, a neighbor, Friday. The quarrel was over a line fence.

Irving S. Smith, 58 years of age, of New York, an inventor of a number of steam and electrical engines, committed suicide Friday by shooting himself in the head. The Northern Pacific panic in Wall street caused a firm which was to have financed one of his inventions, an electric motor, to abandon the project, and this made him despondent.

H. L. Preston, a master builder of the Omaha road, was found dead in his room at Hudson, Wis., having expired while dressing. Mr. Preston was one of the best known railway men in that part of the country.

William E. Clarke, his two daughters, Mary B., aged 12, and Frances D., aged 8, and George B. Bryan, aged 10, were drowned at Newbern, N. C., Friday night. The bodies of the two girls have been recovered. Mr. Clarke had at different times been state senator, representative, deputy collector of customs and postmaster of Newbern.

THE STAGE

Shakespeare Plays For Coming Season.

"Lorna Doone" Follows the Book Closely.

Shakespeare received more attentiln on the American stage last season than ever before in the same space of time, and the generally fine artistic endeavor was so well remunerated that the actors and managers concerned are disposed to take still greater risks next winter. Mr. Goodwin says that his next Shakespearean venture will be with Twelfth Night" or "Much Ado About Nothing," in either of which comedies Mrs. Goodwin would probbaly be valuable. Mr. Mansfield is said to have chosen "Macbeth" for sumptuous stage illustration. There will be more than the usual use of Shakespeare pieces by traveling and resident companies. Such capable experts as Louis James, Fred Warde, Henry Miller, Walker Whiteside, Kathryn Kidder, R. D. McLean and Daniel Bandmann will again be among the upholders of the Shakespearean standard. Whether Sarah Cowell Le Moyne will carry out her announced design of enacting Lady Macbeth seems uncertain. She has refused to appear in the play written by F. Marion Crawford because the role designed for her is that of a middle-aged woman. It is to be wished that the proposal of a tour next spring by John Drew and Ada Rehan in "The Taming of the Shrew" may be carried out.

"LORNA DOONE."

In the Chicago version of "Lorna Doone," after the first scene the book is followed with a fair degree of accuracy. Lorna's bower is shown, the attack on the Doone stronghold, where the girl is imprisoned, is faithfully carried out, the church scene is one of beauty and dramatic effect, the hand-to-hand conflict between Ridd and Carver Doone at the edge of the quicksands is well presented, and finally the happy, peaceful ending of all at Plover's Barrow farm is staged with skill and acted with ability. The play is marked by two unusual features. The engulfing quicksands, into which Carver Doone sinks, furnish a scene represented in but few plays. Again the play gives a complete marriage scene. This is unusually, if not entirely new to modern plays. The Episcopal service, which unites Lorna and John, is read from beginning to end. The clergyman is in the vestments of the church, there are surpliced choir boys and the burning tapers. The shooting of Lorna Doone by Carver Doone from ambush furnishes a dramatic ending to this scene, an ending intensified in dramatic qualities by the contrast with the solemn, beautiful marriage service of the Episcopal church and the secular stage settings.

GEORGIA CAYVAN'S DEATH.

The saddest news that the dramatic profession has recorded within the year, says the Dramatic Mirror, is the expected death of Georgia Cayvan in the sanitarium, where she has been for nearly a year, broken in body and mind, almost blinded, yet with intervals when she realized the tragedy of her life that is now drawing to its sad ending. Georgia Cayvan is one of the women of the stage who have suffered keenly through too lavish affections wasted on unworthy idols, and a super-sensitive nature that in her case did not survive her suffering. She, like Duse, Calve, Ellen Terry, and Mary Anderson, was singled out by the tongue of traducers. That illness frequently results from the mental suffering that a nature like Miss Cayvan's undergoes through experiencing undeserved calumny is undoubtedly a fact. She came forward bravely to fight for an exoneration of her good name, which was given publicity with an apology from the notoriety-seeking miscreants who had dragged her into a domestic quarrel, apparently for the purpose of giving it tone that it sadly lacked. This was the culminating point of Miss Cayvan's illness. Actresses hard at work night and night through a season, always in their places, conscientious, striving, ambitious, charitable, sweet-natured are described as dissipated monsters of iniquity. The stories told are always so lurid that they are laughable. But unfortunately all women have not the thick-skinned personality to stand such tattle. Sometimes they make a pretense of being amused at it, and in reality suffer deeply from every new phase of viciousness in which their names are mentioned.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO.

Playgoer's Club to Elevate the Stage.

New York, June 26.—A great novelty promised for next season is a playgoers club of unlimited membership and real benefits. One was formed a few weeks ago to discuss variegated topics and elevate the satge, if possible. No attention was paid to that movement by the Rialto, but the new scheme won instant attention. Briefly, its main purport is to furnish members with the best seats in all houses at box office prices. This will be enough if it can be accomplished. One manager is responsible for the scheme, but how he will bring his brothers into line he stateth not. There are few theaters on Broadway where the managers themselves are not the most piratical of speculators. Only a little while ago a certain dramatic editor opened warfare on this phase of theatrical evil and the management of the New York theaters were loud in their denunciations. Incidentally they had been picked out by him as the head and front of the offenders. The editor called their bluff in a manner that ended discussion. Seats were advertised on sale two weeks in advanc, the sale beginning each morning at 9 o'clock. One day his messenger appeared at the box office at 8:30 and waited until the window was opened. There was not another soul in the lobby all that time. The boy asked for seats in the third row for two weeks later and was coldly informed that the twentieth row was the best they had. The problem for the club manager will be to break the others of the habit of holding out the best for the hotels and the speculators. If he can do that he will be a wonder.

The American Theater Rose Roof Garden has opened for the season with "The Mikado," George C. Boniface, Jr., is Ko Ko, J. Aldrich Libbey is Pooh-bah, Miss Julia Gifford, Yum Yum, and Miss Ada Barnard, Pitti Sing.

Summer opera is pushing vaudeville slowly but surely to the wall. Up at Terrace Garden William Perry is attracting great crowds by the excellent performances of his company. Hubert Wilke, the barytone, plays a special engagement there next week in "The Chimes of Normandy."

The Castle Square Opera company, after a very successful summer season in Brooklyn, will move to Manhattan Beach early in August for a season of two weeks. They will present "The Mikado" and "H. M. S. Pinafore," with the same cast as was heard in the Metropolitan Opera house last winter. The Manhattan Beach season was opened with "The Circus Girl," and "The Geisha" and "A Runaway Girl" will follow. Then will come Lederer's "Casino Girl," and the season will be wound up by Jefferson D'Angelis in "A Royal Rogue." The present cast includes George Fortescue, Harry Norman, Melville Stewart, Samuel Collins, Sarony Lambert, Paula Edwards, Elsie Bowen, Catherine Lewis and Helen Belmont.

A very happy and contented woman sits in the audience but close to the stage every evening up in Hammerstein's Paradise. She is a Mrs. Falk, whose daughter Eleanor has made the hit of two seasons there. Not long ago the mother was convinced that the hand of every manager in town was raised against her and her daughter because of the influence of the father, from whom they were estranged. Mrs. Falk sought an engagement for herself, for out on the coast she had been a singer of much note, but her quest was in vain, and the theory of a conspiracy became firmly fixed in her mind. That there was no foundation for the belief was shown clearly by the ease with which Eleanor Falk found engagements after her first appearance at Hammerstein's. She had been on the road with "A Trip to Chinatown," and Hammerstein gave her a chance. She "made good" in excellent style, and has repeated her success this season.

John Drew has sailed for home to begin rehearsals for next season. His play will be "Second in Command," by Capt. Robert Marshall, author of "A Royal Family." The former is near its two hundred and fiftieth performance at the Haymarket in London, and Charles Frohman has purchased the American rights for his star. Mr. Drew will have the part enacted by Cyril Maude.

They are telling a new story about Joseph Jefferson. The veteran actor, it seems, was in conversation with a friend of sufficient standing to make with impunity remarks that might hurt his vanity. This friend declared that years ago he saw and knew a player who was a marvel; in fact, he regarded him as the greatest comedian he had ever seen. Incidentally he announced that the young man's name was Brooks, and that he had played in Richmond long before the celebrated cook was born. Offense at this praise of another, and only smiled sadly. Then he said: "You're right. He was a great actor, and would have been famous if he had lived. He was only 22 years old when he died, and at that time he was the best all-round actor I ever knew. He could sing a good song, he could dance, he could mimic and he could do anything in comedy. He was my half-brother, and you could not have said anything that would have pleased me more. We were sons of the same mother."

Robert T. Haines, who has been selected as leading man for Mrs. Minnie Maddern-Fiske at the Manhattan theater next season, was graduated as a lawyer at the University of Missouri only a few years ago. He practiced law in Kansas City, and soon abandoned that profession for the stage. He succeeded James K. Hackett with Kathryn Kidder, and has since supported James O'Neill and Henry Miller. Last season he was Viola Allen's leading man. Robert V. Ferguson joins the Fiske company as comedian. For two seasons he played Sir Pitt Crawley in "Becky Sharp."

Cyril Scott, Etta Butler, Sandol Milliken and John Slavin have already been engaged by Klaw and Erlanger for "The Liberty Belles," Harry B. Smith's new musical comedy. A large company is being organized, and the curtain will go up for the first time at the Chestnut Street theater, in Philadelphia, on Sept. 9.

The funeral of James A. Herne was a striking contrast to the usual ceremony of that nature. A friend of the family who had been invited to make an address on that occasion was talking about it the other evening. "When I reached the house," he said, "I was met by the Misses Herne, who greeted me much to my surprise, in a very cheerful manner. Their mother, too, displayed none of the ordinary signs of mourning. I learned later that Mr. Herne shortly before his death requested that the funeral ceremonies should be conducted without any display of grief. His wife and children had to promise him to regard his death in a pleasant manner. He urged them that by this they would be better fitted to carry out the work he was leaving them to perform. He believed himself a Christian and that he was improving his condition by death.

Melville Stoltz is to have charge of the starring tour of Thomas Q. Seabrook in Sydney Rosenfeld's "A Modern Crusoe," the play used for a short time by Roland Reed.

Norway Whalley, too, is coming back to the New York. She will replace Nina Farrington, who left the cast because of a badly sprained ankle.

Hobart and Sydney Rosenfeld have completed burlesques for the stock company at the New York season. Charlie Rosa is to rejoin his wife, Mabel Fenton, and they will head the company. Miss Fenton has recovered sufficiently from her breakdown to get away to the mountains for a good, long rest.

Marie Dressler is giving characteristic evidences of her delight over the new comedy in which she is going to star. But she is giving such unusual evidences of modesty that serious doubts are being entertained about her good health and mental condition. "Other members of my company," she declared the other afternoon, "will not be left out of the limelight." To members of the various companies in which Marie was a luminary at the Casino this change of heart is looked upon with suspicion. However, she was careful to promptly add: "I shall have ample opportunity to shine in my especial line. There's a whole bunch of fun in it, and as for music, why, it will just knock this old town crazy. You just watch our smoke." Thereat the fair comedienne sailed up Broadway with all the grace and mastery of a new battleship. The makers of this new wonder are George V. Hobart and A. Baldwin Sloane.

So far the continuous stock companies have been devoting themselves religiously to revivals, but novelties are already promised. The first of these is "The Flower of Yeddo," by Victor Mapes. It is a Japanese one-act play. Mrs. Charles A. Doremus' English comedy, "A Terrible Tangle," will be the first original production of the Proctor forces. It is now in rehearsal, and will soon be seen.

So well pleased has F. F. Proctor become at the success of comedies at his house that he announces that there will be no change in his present plan to make the stock company the feature of his program. His company has six branches. One presents a play at one house and then gives it for an entire week at each of the other three New York houses before moving to Albany and Montreal. In these latter cities there must be two plays ready for presentation, for the bill is changed every Thursday afternoon. By the time this company returns to the original theater in town the other five companies are doing exactly the same thing. Novelties introduced between the acts makes the performance continuous, and this feature will not only be retained but enlarged.

The stock company is gaining recruits as fast as did vaudeville a couple of years ago. Victory Bateman will be seen at the head of one in this city in the fall. Meanwhile she is touring in vaudeville in her version of W. S. Gilbert's one-act play, "Sweethearts." Blanche Walsh is leading a company in Denver, and during her three weeks' engagement there appears in "Fedora," "Aristocracy" and "Barabara Frietchie."

Some new theatrical light will enliven Broadway shortly. He has been parading strictly incognito, of course, up and down "the alley," leading a full-grown pet sheep. The attention he secured was enough to tear the soul of every "unemployed" asunder with envy, and before long all sorts of farm animals may be expected.

Another 'Uncle Tom" story has reached town with a member of a company that had been doing one-night stands. It seems that there was not enough money to go round, so the thoughtful backer decided to play no favorites. Accompanied by the cash he headed for New York, and the treasurer was left to wrestle with the problem of how to get the company to New York for $37.50, and chiefly to get that much money all at one time. Just then along came a florist's boy with the wings for Little Eva. He also wanted money. When asked what for, he shyly said:

"Please, sir, it's a pair of wings for de angel of de troop."

The treasurer nearly fainted, but recovered enough to gasp out: "Take 'em back. You're too late. The angel has already flown."

Colonel "Billy" Thompson is back in town looking for standard operas. One of his companies has gone to Honolulu, the first stop on a tour around the world. The colonel wants a lot of operas for a new company which is under way and which will cover the field out West.

Edna Wallace Hopper is going West to her mother's bedside instead of to London, unless there is a marked improvement in her parent's condition. Grace Dudley is ready to take her place in "Florodora," and the change may be made any minute. Mrs. Hopper's recent actions also show that the bump of "parental veneration" has been abnormally developed in her little head. She let "Jack" Gallatin have his way and an engagement was announced with a blare of trumpets by the vivacious youth, but rather more tentatively by the little singer, who in many respects has a considerably long head. She put the first string to the engagement when she declared that their marriage was entirely dependent upon her mother's consent. The Gallatin family put another when they convinced both the young people that it was also dependent upon the consent of Gallatin mere. This latter, it was added, kindly, but very, very positively, would never be given. There were a couple of wry faces and a sigh or two, but Mrs. Hopper, like a true sport, called all bets off. "He's so awfully young," she explained.

Clyde Fitch is supposedly resting in Carlsbad, but he's the busiest "rester" the playwriting profession has ever known. He made the record in town last season with four big hits all running at the same time along Broadway. Now it seems as though he hones to break that in the coming year. He has just finished plays for Elsie De Wolfe and Sadie Martinot, and has agreed to write five others within a period of twelve months. One Maud Adams will get, No. 2 goes to Annie Russell, and No. 3 to Anna Held. Emily Wakeman is down for No. 4, and William A. Brady owns the last. It will be used to star Grace George. A couple of the five will have to be adaptations in order that his contracts may be completed in time.

The earl of Yarmouth has decided that he was upheld by the jury in his recent suit sufficiently to warrant his having a play of his very own. He has gone back to England to get the American rights to a musical farce, "The Golden Cord." He wants to be a twinkling star in the autumn.

Honest Beer

The first brewery of Jos. Schlitz was a hut, but the beer that was brewed there was honest. That was fifty years ago. Today the magnificent Schlitz brewery forms a monument to that honesty.

From the very beginning the main object has been to attain absolute purity. In Schlitz beer pure yeast was first introduced in America. In the Schlitz brewery are all the inventions men have made for protecting beer from impurities.

Schlitz beer is even cooled in filtered air; then it is filtered, then sterilized. It is well aged to avoid the cause of biliousness.

THEIR SUMMER VACATIONS

Plans Made By Some of Popular Favorites.

Away from the glare and tinsel of footlights and musty scenery the nerve-racked Thespian now seeks rest and recreation for the summer months. It has been a long, arduous, lucrative season in the theatrical world, especially on the road, and as a rule the actor man and actor lady have been able to lay by a snug sum for the period of rest.

It's a strenuous life, this traveling about from place to place, and the fun and applause ever dear to the stage folks is, after all, considerably discounted by the sere and tear of a life little short of drudgery. What with the constant rehearsal, quick "jumps" from town to town to fill in between the big cities, and living in hotels and boarding houses where the menu "just like mother cooked" is an unkown quantity and where "Home, Sweet Home" is only suggested by the tea store motto tacked upon the wall, the path of the Thespian is sometimes as thorny as that of the proverbial sinner.

Audiences see only the bright side when the lights are up and dazzling pictures and fetching costumes are displayed amid scenes of mirth and melody. Maybap there is a dark and tragic side to the drama, depicting vice and crime and the woes and sufferings of unfortunate humans, but "that's only in the play, you know," and the spectator dismisses the subject as he wends his way to dine at a public restaurant or go to his happy home. The Thespian sees the dark as well as the bright side of stage life and breathes a sigh of relief when the season ends.

So the actor man and the actor lady still hie themselves to country lanes and byways and purling brooks and placid streams, or to the seashore. The more prosperous have their own country cottages and villas. The Thespian's greatest ambition is to own a home in the country. Many have gone to Europe, and more are going. Plays and parts have been cast aside, and it will be all pipes and no work until notices like the following begin to appear in the dramatic weeklies:

CALL.

The ladies and gentlemen of the Rusty Nail Comedy company will please report for rehearsal on Monday, Aug. 30, at 10:30 a. m., at Lyric hall, No. 2134 West Fity-Fitz street.

CONROY HER'RT STANDING,
Stage Manager.

All of the grand opera birds of paradise and song have long flown with Maurice Grau in advance, to European shores. The vaudeville performers, who work all summer in parks, on the roof gardens amid the chimney pots and on river boats, take vacations only 'n fits and starts. They have little to study, and a half hour each afternoon and evening is the extent of their work. It's the legitimate people who need rest.

Here are some of the popular favorites and the plans they have made for summer:

Sarah Bernhardt and Constant Coquelin are now playing in London, but will soon return to their beloved Paris to take a needed rest after their prosperous American tour and brief British engagement. Rostnad, author of "L'Aiglon," is writing a new play, "Le Theatre," for the divine Sarah. Perhaps Coquelin will also appear in it.

Aime. Modjeska is visiting her sister in far-away Poland. While allowed the privileges of social intercourse, she is barred from all public performances in her native land. She will return in the fall to star with Louis Janies in a round of tragic roles. Mr. James has a cottage at Long Branch where he will remain during the hot spell.

Frederick Warde, the tragedian, resides in Brookiyn, N. Y. He is busily engaged at the present in packing up his traps and piscatorial outfit for a trip to his favorite rendezvous at White Lake, Sullivan county, New York, where he hopes to catch sufficient bass to supply his many friends throughout the country.

Henrietta Crossman, who made one of thehits of the season in "Mistress Nell," has gone to Europe with Maurice Campbell, her husband and manager. Miss Crossman, who was practically unknown to Broadway, found not only artistic but sufficient material success to take a trip abroad and visit the scenes of the fickle actress whom she so admirably portrayed. Miss Crossman may pick up a play or two abroad, which she will add to her repertoire next season.

Maude Adams is in London conferring with her manager, Charles Frohman, regarding the production of a new play by J. M. Barrie. Miss Adams has hopes of obtaining another "Little Minister," with a Lady Babbie. She has had enough of the tragic role in "L'Aiglon," and desires, furthermore, to show her versatility. She will visit France for a long rest.

Adah Reban, with the patriotism of a daughter of the Emerald Isle, has gone to her cozy cottage in Ireland. She is resting and not bothering with plans for next season. These will be attended to by her managers.

John Drew and his daughter Louise Drew are taking a trip through England and France. Mr. Drew may appear while abroad, but it will not be until the fall.

Francis Wilson, of comic opera fame, has a magnificent place at New Rochelle, N. Y., where he rests each season from his professional labors. Mr. Wilson is booked to appear in a new comedy. "The Strollers," which is not altogether out of his line, as he appeared in such pieces long before he achieved fame in merry and tuneful "Erminie."

Stuart Robson will spend the summer at Navesink Highlands, N. J., preparatory to going out in "The Henrietta," which Bronson Howard wrote for the old firm of Robson and Crane, and which made for them fame and fortunes.

His old partner, William H. Crane, is on a trip to Europe, enjoying his share of the profits of the successful dramatic version of that widely known novel, "David Harum."

Lewis Morrison, the time-honored star of "Faust" has gone to his ranch in California.

Viola Allen, after winning success in "In the Palace of the King," has departed for her cottage in Maine.

Chauncey Olcott, the Irish star, will visit his mother at Buffalo, N. Y., and after a brief spell, will start for San Francisco, where he begins an engagement early in the fall.

Jolly May Irwin, who has a fine piece of property at the Thousand Islands, will spend most of the time looking over the plans of the skyscraper which her press agent says she will build in Chicago. Miss Irwin has not yet verified the report, but she admits that she is making a strong effort to get away from coon songs.

Margaret Anglin, who is to be the new leading lady of the Empire Theater Stock company next season, will go to her home in Canada after the brief tour of "Diplomacy" is ended. Miss Anglin is very domestic, or at least she says she is, and as she is single there is no one to contradict such a lovely leading lady. It goes without saying that the fair Canadian will enjoy her brief vacation as the household goddess of her Canadian home.

Edward Harrigan, the author-actor, lives in a sort of Brooklyn, N. Y., once known as Fenian Hill, odorous for its coal- and shanties—ich Harrigan so aptly used in many of his most successful plays. It is now the residing place of many Democratic politicians who have waxed wealthy through close study of the scenece of statesmanship and of other things. Mr. Harrigan, as usual, will spend the summer at Schroon Lake, N. Y., where he will put the finishing touches to a new play, "The Old New Yorker," which will probab have st-ropolitan hearing during the coming winter.

Maggie Cline, the Irish queen, cannot rest in peace during the summer vacation without visiting her favorite state of New Jersey. This is Miss Cline's own statement, and any lady who can so successfully manipulate the strenuous song, "Throw Him Down, McCloskey," is not to be disbelieved. She has a cottage at Red Bank, and frequently visits Long Branch and Asbury Park.

David Higgins and his wife, Georgia Waldron, have gone to Stony Creek, N. Y., to study up their new roles in "Up York State," a new play by Mr. Higgins.

Mr. Thomas Whiffen, of the "Diplomacy" all-star cast, will visit Europe when that company disbands.

Annie Ward Tiffany, once a tearful leading lady, but now as expert in acting rough and ready Irish females as Annie Yeamans, has a home in Buzzard's Bay, Mass. She will remain there during the summer with her family.

Nat B. Jones, who is very successful in portraying the roles made popular by the late James A. Hearne, has finished starring in "Hearts of Oak" and has gone to North Scituate, Mass.

Clyde Fitch, who was the most prolific and prosperous playwright of last season, is now in Sicily thinking up new plays. At one time during the past winter he had no less than seven plays running at as many New York theaters at the same time. Mr. Fitch is getting to be like Harry B. Smith, who can turn out comic opera librettos while the barber is trimming his poetic hair.

FOOTLIGHT FLASHES.

Irving and Terry have revived "Charles I."

Tolstoi's novel, "The Resurrection," is being dramatized.

John G. Mason is to star in "The Altar of Friendship."

George Ober is to do "Rip Van Winkle" in vaudeville.

Sembrich, at Berlin recently, added "L'Elisire d'Amore" to her repertoire.

Arthur Roberts, London's funniest fellow, is to star in America next season.

Harry B. Smith's "Liberty Belles" is to be disclosed in Philadelphia on Sept. 9.

Sybil Sanderson in Paris this month has given six performances of "Phryne."

"The World, the Flesh and the Devil" is the name of Arthur Shirley's new melodrama.

At the Laurent benefit in Paris, Patti and Alverez sang the fourth act of "Romeo and Juliet."

London is to see a dramatization of "Lorna Doone." The Chicago version is said to be a success.

Ignace Paderewski's opera, "Manru," has been accepted for production at Lemberg, Prague and Berlin.

"Ninety and Nine," by Ramsey Morris, is to be used next season by Clara Lipman and Louis Mann.

Emma Eames has just sung "Aida" for the first time in London and her associate as Rhadames was Ernesto Tamagno.

"Die Meistersinger" was recently sung without cuts in Frankfort and the performance lasted from 6 o'clock until a quarter after 11.

The cast of "The Stroller" produced in New York last week includes Francis Wilson, D. L. Don, Eddie Foy, Harry Gilfoil and Marie George.

"The mother," a1 -act play by Ella Wheeler Wilsox, was presented in New York last week. It concerns a man who loves a girl and her mother too.

An arrangement has been entered into between Kirke La Shelle and R. A. Barnet, of Boston, whereby "Miss Simplicity" will be used next season for Frank Daniels.

Sarah Bernhardt has announced her intention of giving a free performance of "L'Aiglon" at her theater on Bastile day, July 14. She has accepted a drama entitled Bagdad, by Lusie Delarne-Madrus, and will produce it next season.

Miss May Buckley, who recently occupied a large amount of public attention by reason of the homicidal performances of the demented Mr. Moulton and her account, has concluded to take up vaudeville as her means of livelihood, beginning next fall.

J. M. Barrie's new comedy for Maude Adams is to be in four acts, with the young woman in the role of a gentle, unsophisticated girl. The action of the play takes place about the time of the battle of Waterloo and is said to be a very interesting story. Miss Adams has declared to Mr. Barrie her intention of never again playing a masculine role, and this means that "L'Aiglon" has been shelved for good.

In Buffalo last week Henry E. Dixey, Jr., made a stage start in the chorus of "The Burgomaster." "Florodora" has a son of May Robson and a daughter of Fiske. Edward Gore is in the sextet, and the young Irwin is in the chorus. Florence Reed, a daughter of Roland Reed, will appear in "Lend Me Your Wife" this week, and another of the Proctor stock companies has a son of Mr. and Mrs. Kendall. John Drew's daughter, named Louisa, after her famous grandmother, has gone abroad with her father. She will see "The Second Command" with him, and will probably have a part in it when he produces it at the Empire on Sept. 2.

Doing Their Duty.

Scores of Duluth Readers Are Learning the Duty of the Kidneys.

TO FILTER THE BLOOD IS THE KIDNEYS' DUTY—WHEN THEY FAIL TO DO THIS THE KIDNEYS ARE SICK — BACKACHE AND MANY KIDNEY ILLS FOLLOW—URINARY TROUBLE, DIABETES—DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS CURE THEM ALL—DULUTH PEOPLE ENDORSE OUR CLAIM.

Mr. B. Barr, of 306 Garfield avenue, conductor on the Duluth street railroad, says: "I had constant heavy pains through the small of my back and up under the shoulder blades. It was painful for me to stoop or lift anything heavy. I became stiff and sore from sitting or lying in any one position and in the mornings I rose feeling more tired than when I went to bed. The kidney secretions were irregular, frequent, highly colored and deposited a heavy sediment. I felt all run down and seemed to have no energy or ambition. I was also troubled a great deal with attacks of headache. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills highly recommended and though I would try them, procured a box from W. A. Abbett's drug store and used it. They helped me right away and in a short time I was entirely cured of the trouble."

Optimism Is the Keynote.

The New York Tribune has been considering the commencement addresses which have been delivered this summer in all parts of the country. It finds that while they have covered a wide range of subjects and have differed greatly in intellectual and literary merit, they have, almost without exception, one characteristic in common. They are remarkebly free from pessimism. Our commencement orators have looked on the bright side of things. They have preached the gospel of optimism far and wide. Many of them have deplored tendencies more or less evident here and there, and pointed out dangers which they think they see, but even these have proclaimed the faith that things will come out right. The faith in the ability of our people to cope successfully with the problems of today and those which may arise in the future is strong in the commencement orator, and he has done good service by proclaiming it. The thousands of young men and young women who have left our universities, colleges and schools this summer have heard words of cheer and inspiration which were calculated to encourage them for the work that lies ahead. The expectations of many of them may have been raised too high, but that is better than to have them go forth with desponding spirits and gloomy forebodings. The commencement orator with his optimism has doubtless done much good.

The North Atlantic Squadron.

The summer cruise of the North Atlantic squadron, which has always created a great furore at the various summer resorts along the New England coast, will not be a very imposing event this year, and owing to the extreme scarcity of war ships the operations of the squadron will be of rather an insignificant character. The best that the navy department can do in the way of getting a fleet together for Admiral Higginson is to supply three ships, the Massachusetts, Kearsarge and Alabama. They are all battleships, however, and what the squadron will lack in numbers it will make up in dignity. Admiral Higginson was counting on having six or eight warships under his flag this summer and consequently he had mapped out an attractive program of squadron evolutions, landing parties and ship drills that would have kept the force busy until late into the fall. The major part of the American navy is now in Philippine waters, fully four-fifths of the ships that are in commission being on that station. There are a number of vessels in home waters, but they are all out of commission and undergoing repairs at the various navy yards. Admiral Higginson will accordingly have to make the best of a bad job and go to sea with two vessels and a flagship. He proposes to drill his little command in squadron evolutions however, and has advised Secretary Long that he will put it through as many drills, formations as possible. In addition he will have regular target practice [illegible] and on land, and exercise the vessels in landing and boat exercises. [illegible] department authorities hope to add to Admiral Higginson's fleet the latter part of July, when several torpedo boats will be available. If the squadron evolutions continue into the fall the admiral will probably acquire the Montgomery and Cincinnati, both of which are now undergoing repairs at the Brooklyn navy yard and which are scheduled to be ready for sea again about October. Other ships laid up for repairs at our navy yard are as follows: At Norfolk, the San Francisco and Texas, which will be ready about the end of the year; at Brooklyn, the Baltimore, ready in a year; at Boston, the Olympia, ready late in the fall; at Mare Island, the Boston, ready in four months; Marblehead, ready in two months, and Wheeling, ready in three months. Eight ships are either en route for the United States from Manila or are under orders to return. They are the Oregon, Petrel, Concord, Bennington, Brutus, Marietta, Castine and Newark.

WASTING PUBLIC MONEY.

More or less comment is always made on the awarding by congress of what appears to be a snap in the way of financial gain, and the preliminaries to the opening of the Indian lands come in for their share of criticism and seemingly just complaint. If congress had tried to find the most wasteful way of spending money in connection with the opening of the Kiowa reservation this summer, it could hardly have succeeded better than by the plan it adopted for making the preliminary surveys. It authorized the secretary of the interior to contract "with responsible parties for retracing the lines and re-establishing the monumenta" of the surveys officially made by the general land office a quarter-century ago, and voted a generous appropriation for that purpose.

Assistant Secretary Ryan closed with a happy contractor to do the job for $50,000. What he did, of course, was to hire a surveying party and send it out into the field, his profit being the difference between the $50,000 paid to him and the hire of a few men who can be secured for $2000 to $3000 a year. It must be remembered that their work is not an original survey, but merely the verification of lines already run and patted—the kind of a task at which almost any budding young engineer would jump for the sake of the practice, even if the pay were only normal. The money for keeping the party in the field has been advanced by a railroad company, which is greatly interested in hastening the opening of the reservation.

The comparative uselessness of this undertaking is shown by the fact that the original survey marks and monuments are daily discovered standing where they ought to be, or as nearly so as is customary in the case of the most conscientious rural surveys. Pieces of the trees used twenty-five or twenty-six years ago to mark lines on the reservation are sent in to the general land office from time to time as relics. The verifying party finding a big oak or cottonwood tree standing about where one ought to according to the old plats, cut into it. A curious sight reveals itself. The original surveyors had blazed a smooth surface for a tablet, and branded their inscription on this with a red-hot iron. The next layers of wood which had grown over the wounds had impressed themselves into the hollows made by the branding irons, using them as a matrix, and taking the branded inscriptions in relief, but reversed in direction. The number of concentric rings which can be counted on a cross-section of such a piece of wood between the inscription and the bark attests the date of the branding quite as plainly, and twice as conclusively, as the best record of field notes ever prepared.

AN OVERFLOWING TREASURY.

The plethoric condition of the United States treasury furnishes another strong argument for a revision of the tariff schedules. The United States has too much money locked up for the good of the people. In all probability the fiscal year, commencing July 1, will be started with a larger surplus than in any year since 1890, and this, too, after extraordinary expenses on account of the Chinese expedition and the pacification of the Philippines.

The changes in the internal revenue taxes which go into effect July 1 will doubtless effect some reduction of receipts. But there is reason to believe that this reduction will be less than was at first predicted. The increase in the classes of business on which stamp taxes are still to be imposed may be expected to offset in some measure the effects of the lowering of taxes in other directions. The internal revenue receipts for the month of June show a noteworthy increase over the figures for the same month of last year. If this increase of business continues at the present rate the revenue reduction contemplated by the new law may not be forthcoming. At the same time, moreover, the ordinary expenditures of the government will probably be considerably less next year than they have been during recent years. The war expenditures, necessitated by the war in the Philippines and the troubles in China, will be gradually reduced, and, unless some unforeseen foreign complication arises, the treasury will not be subjected to heavy drains during the coming year. The present outlook, then, is for continued excess of receipts over expenditures.

The economic interests of the country demand that the tariff policy shall be modified, and from present indications it is believed that congress will be wise enough to give heed to the demand which is made in no uncertain tones.

STOP THE NUISANCE!

While the preparations for Duluth's great celebration of the Fourth are being vigorously pushed, and it is now a certainty that everything will be in readiness to carry out the extensive and attractive program that has been arranged, The Herald trusts that the mayor and the police department will not lose sight of taking certain precautions for the comfort of the people who live in Duluth as well as of the visitors. For instance, it is not necessary to the proper celebration of the Fourth that the explosion of giant firecrackers and similar offensive, noisy and dangerous fireworks should be permitted. The police department can put a complete stop to this annual nuisance. It has been done in other cities, and it can be done in Duluth. The first step should be to notify the dealers in Fourth of July goods that the sale of giant firecrackers and similar large explosives will not be permitted, and that anyone guilty of disposing of them will be promptly arrested, no matter who he may be. The next step should be to issue a notice that anyone using these explosives within the city limits will be arrested and severely punished, and the third step should be to promptly arrest and lock up the first person who violates this order.

This is a subject that should receive the immediate attention of the mayor and the police department. The discharge of these dangerous and noisy explosives is not a display of patriotism. It is merely an exhibition of rowdyism and should be suppressed.

BIG CROPS ASSURED.

All the reports from the wheat districts of the Northwest indicate that the outlook now is favorable for one of the most bountiful crops on record. There is no dissenting voice on this point. Word has been received that, after a careful canvass of the Northwest territory, and preparing conservative estimates upon the conditions found throughout the grain belt, traffic officials of the railroads are agreed that the grain crop of this region for 1901 will be the largest harvested. Figures procured by the Northern Pacific, the Great Northern, the Northwestern and the Burlington cover the entire Northwest and Middle West, and the traffic men of these lines unite in declaring that the railroads will have a grave problem to solve in moving the great grain crop now being harvested and nearing condition for harvesting. According to the best data obtainable, it is estimated that the two Dakotas and Minnesota alone will harvest between 185,000,000 and 200,000,000 bushels of wheat, as against 100,000,000 last year.

The crop is not what is termed a "bumper" crop, and the enormous increase is due largely to the fact that various railroad companies have within the last two years made extreme efforts toward colonization in the Northwest territory. It is stated that within the last six months the Northern lines, the Soo, the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, have taken over 20,000 immigrants and homeseekers to the Northwest territory. This means an enormous addition to the total of cultivated lands and grain acreage, and it also accounts for the fact that railroad earnings have steadily increased and will continue to increase until the vast territory west and northwest is entirely filled up. With few exceptions the conditions this year have favored a good crop. Notwithstanding the drought of last season and the light crop of the previous year, a large amount of new land in the Northwest was ready for seeding early in the spring. During last season the farmers plowed when they found their crops were lost or partially lost, and as a result every farmer in the three states was able to plant a largely increased acreage this spring, so that to a certain extent the yield of wheat is something of an uncertainty, and it would be no surprise if it exceeded the conservative estimates.

The greatest previous yield of wheat in the three states named was in 1898, when 175,000,000 bushels were harvested, and with the great increase in settlement since that date it is not unreasonable to look for an addition of 25,000,000 or 35,000,000 bushels this year. Farmers were taught a lesson by last year's drought, and have gone more extensively into diversified industry; they are now raising more stock food and stock, more flax, more corn, and will probably never again rely solely upon wheat. While the total wheat crop will be larger than ever before, it is estimated that the flax crop will be doubled, and this means a large addition to the wealth of the Northwest.

Duluth, as a great primary wheat market, will profit largely from this condition of affairs. Not only will it reap the benefit of a large rush of wheat to the elevators here for shipment down the lakes, but its wholesale dealers and manufacturers will find increased business among the prosperous towns scattered throughout the tributary country.

GARBAGE REDUCTION.

An article in the Washington Post gives some facts in regard to the profits of garbage reduction in that city. This is a subject that must engage the attention of the municipal authorities of Duluth in the not very distant future. Congress authorized the commissioners of the District of Columbia to contract with a company to collect and reduce the garbage. The conditions are rigidly enforced. The garbage is collected separately from ashes and other refuse and placed in wheeled iron tanks. The tanks are taken by railway trains to the reduction works, thirty miles down the Potomac. After the garbage is sorted, and cans, bottles and other foreign substances removed, it is placed in digesters and subjected to steam pressure. Next it is pumped into great tanks and allowed to settle. The oil rises to the top and is removed and sold to soap manufactories. Then the residue is placed under enormous hydraulic pressure and more oil is obtained. The pressed garbage is pulverized and all metal and glass removed, after which it is stored for sale as a fertilizer. It is odorless and looks like a gray dirt.

The dead animals of Washington are sent to the same works. Horse hides are converted into russet leather. The carcasses go into the digesters, the oil is extracted, and the residue made into fertilizer. "The entire process," says the Washington paper, "is a revelation to those who regard garbage as mere waste. The by-products of the factory and their sale make a very tidy figure each month." More digesters will soon be placed in the Washington plant, and it is evidently a profitable business.

But there are European methods of disposing of garbage that are said to be decidedly more advantageous than any yet adopted in this country, and by the time Duluth tackles this problem the best system may be known. In the meantime the health inspectors must be vigilant in seeing that the present inadequate methods are followed closely, to the end that the alleys and backyards do not become filled with neglected garbage emitting stifling odors.

Capt. Sigsbee of the ill-fated Maine, in a recent lecture before the Union Veterans' Legion of Washington, demolished the halo woven about Sergt. Bill Anthony. Anthony was credited with the heroic act of reporting to the captain, after the explosion, that the ship was sinking. Capt. Sigsbee declared he had no recollection of meeting Anthony at any time. Anthony, nevertheless, was honored and applauded for what the press pictured as a courageous deed. Public favor drew him from the navy and hustled him onto the vaudeville stage. His popularity was shortlived and with it his hopes waned, and inglorious suicide ended a brief, picturesque character and career.

The late Hazen S. Pingree, of Michigan, was admired and supported by "the common people," but according to a correspondent he was an epicure. "All the dainty foods in the market were found on his table, a special brand of cigars was made for him, and only the rarest wines were poured for him. But it was in his private apartments that Governor Pingree became most interesting as the prince of dandies. Beau Brummel never had a more complete wardrobe than was his, coming from a Fifth-avenue tailor in New York. His clothing was not loud, but rich. His underclothing was of the finest silk, made especially for him. In everything save in the reputation to the contrary he was a dandy. His bath tub was of onyx, with silver trimmings, the floor was in mosaics and wonderful frescoes decorated the side walls."

The Boer war has cut down the world's gold output from $312,000,000 in 1899 to $256,000,000 last year. The output of the rest of the world increased over $10,000,000, and the increase this year is expected to be still more. If the Transvaal mines can be reopened by the end of the year, the world's production of gold next year is likely to be more than $50,000,000 greater than ever before. The whole business world should demand of England that it either whip the Boers to a standstill soon, or else quit, and in view of the Weyler methods being practiced it should be asked to quit.

Ernest Sill of Glencoe, O. T., has decided to raffle himself off. He will issue 3000 chances at $5 each. The purchasers are limited to women. The holder of the lucky ticket is to have Ernest with the accruing $15,000, and Ernest agrees to marry her and take her on a bridal trip to the Pan-American exposition. He declares he is young, good-looking and educated, and, that as things go, $15,000 is none too great a price to pay. The chances are that if the holder of the winning number gets Ernest she will soon be willing to give $15,000 to get rid of him.

The legal fraternity of other states doubtless entertain suppressed contempt for the specimen of Jersey justice exhibited at the Barker trial. The court held the defense down to the simple proposition: Did or did not Barker shoot Keller? Emotional insanity, justification as a motive, and similar please were rigidly excluded. Conviction was as prompt as the trial was expeditious and judicially decorous. The courts of other states might profitably follow the example of the New Jersey court in this case.

The Mankato Free Press says: "Europe and Duluth are said to be enjoying semi-winter weather. Duluth will be recalled as a town located somewhere up near the North pole." This is a jealous fling at the temperate and equable climate of Duluth, written in a town where the intense heat bakes the apples on the trees and where every little running stream is filled with boiling water. What would the editor of the Free Prese give for a breath of the delightful breeze from the fair bosom of Lake Superior?

This summer the shirt-waist man can eat in a Pullman car, the company, it is reported, having revoked its order of last year that no passengers could appear in one of its dining cars without being clad in a coat. This change of mind on the subject is said to be due to a delegation of commercial travelers, who so resented the case of the shirt-waist as a proper article of summer traveling and diningroom apparel that the Pullan manager yielded. But who could resist a delegation of drummers?

Men talk of the secret of successful advertising, but it is all very plain. The essentials are to offer what people want, at fair prices, and to offer it in a way that will make readers know they want it. The art in writing an advertisement is to speak as the interested and well-informed merchant would speak to a prospective customer.

A New York correspondent expresses the opinion that busines affairs are passing a "remarkable transition" and cites the fact that gigantic financial schemes, involving millions of dollars, are put through on a day's notice, which a few years ago required months to have carried to completion.

Of the 63,000 persons held by the British in concentration camps in the Transvaal, 31,000 are children. When to these are added the women, it is apparent that most of the men are not prisoners of war, but are still in the Boer fighting line, or have been killed in battle.

The Bismarck, N. D., Settler comes to the fore with Roosevelt for president and Dave Henderson of Iowa for vice president. Would not that be a rather strenuous ticket?

Now is the time for Mayor Hugo to send word to the dealers in Fourth of July goods that anyone who sells giant firecrackers will be promptly arrested.

Mayor Hugo should promptly get in communication with the weather bureau and arrange to have the wet spell terminated before the Fourth.

A Syracuse woman has sued her husband for divorce because he let her fall when she fainted. Another case of non-support, as it were.

A Chicago philosopher has carefully figured out that a man can live on 50 cents a week and have a cent left for a Saturday night spree.

The boys should be impressed with the fact that a small fire cracker is just as patriotic as a large one.

The czar, too, says the Boston Herald, is having trouble with his infant industries.

"And the rain it raineth every day."

Mr. DOOLEY

On the New York Custom House.

By F. P. DUNNE.

"Hannigan's back," said Mr. Dooley.

"I didn't know he'd iver been away," said Mr. Hennessy.

"Oh, he was that," said Mr. Dooley. "He's been makin' what Hogan calls th' gran' tower. He's been to New York an' to Cork an' he see his rilitives an' now he's come home to thry to get even. He had a gran' time, an' some day I'll get him in here an' have him tell ye about it."

"Did he bring annything back?" asked Mr. Hennessy.

"He started to," said Mr. Dooley. "Before he left Queenstown, he laid in a supply iv th' stimulant that's made th' Irish th finest potes an' rivolutionists an' th' poorest bookkeepers in th' wurruld, an' a dozen or two iv blackthorn sticks f'r frinds iv his on the polls. He had a most tumulchuse v'yage. There was a man played th' accorjeen all th' way acrost. Glad he was to see th' pleasant fields iv Noo Jarsey an' th' sthreet clanin' department scows goin' out to sea an' th' la-ad fr'm th' health boord comin' aboord an' askin' ivrybody did they have th' small pox an' was they convicts. There was a Rooshian aboord that'd been run out iv Rooshia because he cud r-read an' people thought he was gettin' r-ready to peg somethin' at th' czar, an' Hannigan an' him got to be gr-reat frinds. As they shtud on th' deck. Hannigan banged him on th' back an' says he: 'Look,' he says with th' tears r-runnin' down his cheeks. He was wanst in th' legislachure. 'Look,' he says, 'ye poor downthrodden serf,' he says. 'Behold, th' land iv freedom,' he says, 'where ivry man's as good as ivry other man,' he says, 'on'y th' other man don't know it,' he says. 'That flag which I can't see, but I know 'tis there,' he says, 'floats over no race iv slaves,' he says. 'Whin I shtep off th' boat,' he says, 'I'll put me box on me shouldher,' he says, 'an' I'll be as free as anny man alive,' he says, 'an' if o'er a sowl speaks to me, I'll give him a dhrink out iv th' bottle or a belt with th' blackthorn,' he says, 'an little I care which it is,' he says. 'A smile f'r those that love ye, an' a punch f'r those that hate, as Tom Moore, th' pote says,' he says. 'Land iv liberty,' he says, 'I salute ye,' he says, wavin' his hat at a soap facthry. 'Have ye declared yet?' says a man at his elbow. 'Declare—what?' says Hannigan. 'Th' things ye have in th' box,' says the man. 'I have not,' says Hannigan. 'Th' contints iv that crate is sacred between me an' mesilf,' he says. 'Well,' says the man, 'ye'd betther slide down th' companyion way or stairs to th' basemint iv th' ship an' tell what ye know,' he says, 'or 'tis mindin' bar'ls at th' pinitinchry ye'll be this day week,' he says.

"Well, Hannigan is an Irish Raypublican what does what he's told, so he wint down stairs an' there was a lot iv la-ads settin' ar-round a table, an' says wan iv thim: 'What's ye'er name, Tim Hannigan, an' ar-re ye a citizen iv this counthry?' 'Well, glory be to th' saints,' says Hannigan, 'if that ain't Pete Casey, th' tailor's son. Well, how ar-re ye an' what ar-re ye doin' down here?' he says. 'I'm a customs inspictor,' says th' boy. 'Tis a good job,' says Hannigan. 'I thried f'r it wanst mesilf, but I j'ined th' wrong or-gan-ization,' he says. 'Step out an' have a dhrink,' he says. 'I've a bottle iv Irish whisky in my thrunk that'd make ye think ye was swallowin' a pincushion,' he says. 'Sh-h,' says Pete Casey. 'Man alive, ye'll be in th' lock-up in another minyit if ye don't keep quite. That fellow behind ye is a mannyfacthrer iv Irish whisky in Bleecker sthreet an' he's hand in glove with Mack,' he says. 'Well, annyhow,' says Hannigan, 'I want to give ye a blackthorn shtick f'r ye'er father,' he says. 'Lord bless me sowl!' says th' boy. 'Ye'll lose me me job yet. That fellow with th' r-red hair is th' principal Rahway dealer in blackthorns. His name is Schmidt, an' Mack sinds him down here f'r to see that th' infant industhries iv Rahway don't get th' worst iv it fr'm th' pauper labor iv Europe,' he says. With that, th' chief inspictor come up an' says he: 'Misther Hannigan,' he says, 'On ye'er wurrud iv honor as an Irish gintleman an' an American citizen,' he says, 'have ye annything in that box that ye cudve paid more f'r in this counthry?' 'On me wurrud iv honor,' says Hannigan, 'I believe ye,' says th' chief. 'Swear him. Ye know th' solemnity iv an oath. Ye do solemnly swear be this an' be that that ye have not been lyin' all this time like the knavish scoundhrel that ye wud be if ye did,' he says. 'I swear,' says Hannigan. 'That will suffice,' says th' chief. 'Ye look like an honest man, an' if ye've perjured ye'ersilf, ye'll go to jail, he says. 'Ye're an American citizen an' ye wuddent lie,' he says. 'We believe ye an' Mack believes an' th' sicrety iv th' threeasury believes ye as much as they wud thimselves,' he says. 'Go down on th' deck an' be searched,' he says.

"Hannigan says he wint down on th' dock practisin' th' lock step, so he wudden't seem green whin they put him in f'r perjury. I won't tell ye what he see on th' deck. No, I won't, Hinnissy. 'Tisn't annything ye ought to know, onless ye're goin' into th' dhry goods business. Hannigan says they hadn't got half way to th' bottom iv th' thrunks an' there wasn't a woman fr'm th' boat that he'd dare to look in th' face. He turned away with a blush an' see his wife an' childher standin' behind th' bars iv a fince an' he started f'r thim. 'Hol' on there,' says a pilsmen. 'Where are ye goin'?' he says. 'To see me wife, ye gom,' says Hannigan. 'Ye can't see her till we look at what ye've got in th' box,' says he. 'Ye're a prisoner,' says he, 'till we prove that ye ought to be,' he says. 'Ar-re ye undher arrest?' she says. 'An' ye promised me ye wudden't drink,' she says. 'What ar-re ye charged with?' she says. 'Treason,' says he. 'I wint away fr'm home,' he says. 'But that's no crime,' she says. 'Yes it is,' says he. 'I come back,' he says.

"With that another inspictor come along an' he says: 'Open that thrunk,' he says. 'Cut th' rope,' he says. 'Boys, bring an axe an' lave us see what this smuggler has in th' box,' he says. 'What's this? A blackthorn cane! Confiscate it. A bottle iv whiskey. Put it aside f'r ividence. A cont! Miscreent! A pair iv pants! Ye perjured ruffyan! Don't ye know ye can get nearly as good a pair iv pants f'r twice th' money in this counthry? Three collars? Hyena! A bar iv soap. An' this man calls himself a pathriot! Where did ye get that thrunk it looks foreign. I'll take it. Open ye'er mouth. I'll trouble ye f'r that back tooth. Me man,' he says, 'Ye have taken a long chanst,' he says, 'but I won't be hard on ye. Ye'll need clothes,' he says. 'Here's me card,' he says. 'I'm an inspector iv customs on th' side, but th' govermint really hires me to ripristint Guldenheim an' Eckstein, shirt makers, be appintment to th' cabinet, an' Higgins an' Co., authors iv th' Non-Combustible Canton (O.) Pant. A good pant. If ye want anything in our line, call on our store. No throuble to take money.'

"Hannigan wint out an' found Honorva an' th' childher had gone off f'r to get a bondsman. Thin he tur-rned an' called out to th' inspictor: 'Look here, you!' 'What is it?' says th' man. 'Ye missed something,' says Hannigan. 'I was tatooed in Cork,' he says. 'Stop that man,' says th' head iv a ladin' firm iv tatooers an' prisidint iv th' society f'r th' Protection iv American Art, If Such There Be. 'Stop him; he's smugglin' in foreign art!' he says. But Hannigan bate him to th' sthreet car. An' that was his welcome home.

"'Call me Hanniganoffski,' says he last night. 'I'm goin' to Rooshia,' he says. 'F'r to be a slave iv th' Czar?' says I. 'Well,' says he, 'if I've got to be a slave,' he says, 'I'd rather be opprissed be th' Czar thin be a dealer in shirt waists,' he says. 'Th' Czar ain't so bad,' he says. 'He don't care what I wear undhecnath,' he says.

"'Oh, well, divvle mend Hannigan,' said Mr. Hennessy. "It's little sympathy I have f'r him, gallivantin' off acrost th' ocean an' spindin' money he arned at home. Annyhow, Hannigan an' th' likes iv him is all raypublicans."

"That's why I can't make it out," said Mr. Dooley. "Why do they stick him up? Maybe th' sicrety iv th' threeasury is goin' in to what Hogan calls th' lingery business an' is getting' information on th' fashions. But I wondher why they make thim swear to affidavits."

"'Tis wrong," said Mr. Hennessy. "We're an honset people."

"We are," said Mr. Dooley. "We are, but we don't know it."—(Copyrighted, 1901, by Robert H. Russell.)

A MAID OF PHILISTIA.

BY CURRAN R. GREENLEY.

(Copyright, 1901, William R. Miller.)

The sunset light lay over the Alaho. Far down the West the long lances quivered over the stretch of the mesa and over in the corral there were snatches of song, laughter and the hoarse growl of Old Pete, the rustiest rustler that ever swung a lariat down the ride of the Alaho, and the truest heart that ever beat in a man's breast. You have heard of the night when Pete made that famous gallop to the fort, all to save that graceless Miguel from death at sunrise; death under the blue sky and the glamour of he golden glow of the mustard fields. Miguel's clear tenor led the burst of border song that rolled in from the corral, and over there in the tepee his swart Indian wife sang slow drooning chants to the bright-eyed little papoose.

But for Rusty Pete there would have been naught of that glorious volce, and only another mound beneath the patient stars.

The song ceased, and I came back to the present. There had lately been added a new addition to the layout, John and I were at loss to place him. There was all the swagger of the plainsman, and yet that high seat in the stirrups was unmistakably the British cavalryman. Jack Hunt was the name he gave, and the boys had promptly dubbed him "Spook" for his silence and reserve. He had come to us in the spring, and now the heat of summer was come and we knew him as little as the first day. Tonight I was confronted with a new problem, and the worry of it held me fast. What providence of fools had sent Esther Langholme out to this far West to forget all traditions of family, and the very shibboleth of her cult in a flirtation with a mere cowboy. I dared not call it anything more, and yet I felt the gravity of it against my will. The girl had changed so much in the few short weeks since she had come "to spend a stolen time of liberty" before the gates of her world closed her in. And little by little all conventionality had slipped away from her, until the season's success merged into the school girl again—the Esther I had known and loved in the college days.

They came slowly up the walk together, and as the soft twilight hid the coarse cowboy garb, a strange thing came to me. It was no longer Jack Hunt. The drawl was gone from his voice, it rang free of the border twang as the soft French fell from his lips, and then a stranger language, words like tripping music.

Long years before I had heard the story of the first Esther Langholme. How Roderick Langholme waoed the Gypsy maid in the green lanes of the Cornish country, and bore her will-ye nill-ye to the Virginia, away from the Romany camp. A short wifehood, for in the space of a year the nostalgia of the camp had made itself felt, and she died, with her great black eyes fixed far beyond the winding James river, on the green hillsides over the sea, and a Romany song upon her lips. One hundred years ago, through the gray dust of a century the wild-hot Romany blood had sent its message to the Esther Langholme of today, and I, Marjorie Long, knew only too well that back in the Eastern country, one man would wait his promised wife in vain. Knew, and not even questioned when I missed the flashing diamond from her hand.

Helpless, I watched the drama sweep on to its denouement.

There came visions of an extra bad half-hour with Madame Langholme there were ineffectual efforts to stem the tide, met with a laughing denial—and they were so happy. I could do nothing, nothing; and so the time wore on. One day there came a letter. The other man was coming to claim his own. Esther wore a serious face, for that day at least, but when she rode out for her morning ride the letter was still unanswered. It was a hot, close morning, not a breath to ruffle the stillness. We were very busy on the ranch rounding up the cattle for the market, and the numerous calls on me for articles needed for the outfit so fully occupied my time that I had not noticed it until I suddenly became aware of the gathering gloom. "Where is Esther?" It was John's voice in the doorway. Then I remembered the time and that I had not seen her since the morning. There was trouble in his eyes. "I wish she were safely here. The cattle are restless and there is no telling where they will go in a stampede, and she might chance directly in their track. I will send Hunt for her." I had as well acknowledge that my sturdy democrat was madly encouraging the very end that I was struggling against, in the utter defiance of all reason. "John," I called, but he was beyond reach.

I need not go over that terrible storm. The shrieking moan in my ears will never die. It kenned like the banshee of some wild Irish legend as I knelt and prayed in agony for those two far out on the Mesa. Above the roar of the storm there came another sound, deep and full—the mad bellow of the cattle as they broke from the corral and swept like a tide over the crest of the mesa and thundered out of sight. What would be left in their trail, and where was John? As if in answer he slipped down at my side. "Pray, little woman with all your soul, God alone can save them now. Pray as you never have prayed before, for death holds the cards," and above us the lightning crashed, and with one great sweep of the mighty wind the roof lifted and we felt the sheets of rain dash in upon us. John's arm drew me closer. It was no time for words. Mutely we crouched there ang waited. A long, an endless time, and then as suddenly as it had risen the wind died down and the rain ceased. All the night through we waited for news from the bands of men that had ridden out with the first lull of the storm. How the hours dragged until, just as the dawn lit up the crest of the great divide, Rusty Pete galloped in at the big gate with a halloo to wake the dead—and there on the ponies sat the two, and the light on their faces was neither of the East nor the West, and I knew that my Gypsy Esther would never dwell in the Gorgio tents again.

There was little word between us two, but she dropped that glorious dark head on my breast and sobbed a little. "Marjorie, bid them a long good-bye for me. They will never forgive, and I cannot turn back. I have chosen my way." And then she told me of the long hours that they crouched behind the dead ponies, of the awful moment that seemed eternity, when the sea of cattle swept to the right and left of them; and, there, with the besom of God ablast in their faces, man and woman faced the world's old question, the trammels of an effete civilization swept away.

That night the little gray priest from the Mexican village came to the Alaho, and with the soft moonlight pouring down through the open roof, Esther knelt with her cowboy lover, and the sonorous Latin droned above their heads in the grand old marriage rite of Rome.

The father produced an old brown register, and as Hunt bent to sign it, there came a surprise. Across the page in slashing characters went the signature, John Francis Dalehunt, Esk and Montrose. The earl of Esk. Astonishment held us dumb, and then a low rippling laugh from Esther broke the spell. "The manes of the Langholmes are appeased." And so my Gypsy Esther went her way to the far-off Cornish coast.

DULUTH'S SOCIETY

Miss Mary Guss Jester, daughter of Mrs. Helen Cody Wetmore, and Robert Bruce Allen, were married Thursday at 5:30 p. m. The ceremony was celebrated at Cody View, the home of the bride's mother, on Bay View Heights. The interior of the home was a bower of flora, ferns, arbor vitae, smilax, American beauty roses, peonies and carnations, being lavishly used by the decorators.

The ceremony was performed in the drawing room and Dr. T. H. Cleland, of the First Presbyterian church, was the officiating clergyman. The wedding party came down the stairway to the strains of the Lohengrin march played by the Lanners orchestra, O. C. Hartman and W. S. McCormick were the ushers. The bridesmaids were Miss Virgilence Cook, of Newark, N. J., and Miss Rosemary Odell, of Chicago, and the maid of honor, Miss Irma Cody, of New York, a cousin of the bride. The bride walked with George P. Everhart, of Chicago, who, in the absence of Col. W. F. Cody, her uncle, gave her away. Dr. Cleland and the groom, with his best man, William H. Thompson, of Pittsburg, awaited the bridal party in the drawing room. During the marriage ceremony the orchestra played Schubert's "Serenade," and at the conclusion the Mendelssohn wedding march.

The bride was gowned in a beautiful costume of white silk with lace overdress. The bodice was adorned with rare old lace. She also wore a veil and carried white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Cody, was gowned in white liberty silk over yellow, Miss Odell in green liberty silk over green and Miss Cook in heliotrope crepe du chien with lace applique.

Following the ceremony the company of relatives and friends in attendance extended their congratulations. After a brief informal reception Mr. and Mrs. Allen were driven to a steamer. They have gone down the lakes to Chicago and next week will be guests at a house party given at Chicago by Mr. and Mrs. Everhart. Afterward their trip will be extended farther East.

Following the departure of the bride and groom, refreshments were served. The dining room table was handsomely decorated, the centerpiece being a large basket of American beauty roses. In charge of the dining room were Mrs. William Hankins and Miss Lydia Poirier, assisted by Miss Mildred Cleland and Miss Lulu Magoffin.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. George P. Everhart, of Chicago; Mrs. George Lytle, of Los Angeles, Cal., sister of Mr. Allen; William H. Thompson and Miss Helen Thompson, of Pittsburg; Mrs. Lewis, sister of Mrs. Wetmore; Mrs. George Meyers, of Dennison, Kan.; Mrs. W. H. Johns and George W. Johns, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bentley and Master Paul Bentley, of Chicago.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. K. A. Ostergren, of 418 Fifteenth avenue east, was the scene of a very pretty wedding Wednesday evening, when their daughter Ida Henrietta Ostergren was joined in marriage to Harvey Roberts Gardner, of St. Paul. Precisely at 8 o'clock Flaaten's orchestra struck up with the Lohengrin bridal march, and, preceded by her sister, Miss Agnes Ostergren, as maid of honor, the bride entered on her father's arm and was met by the groom, attended by his best man, K. A. Ostergren, Jr., brother of the bride. The bride was simply attired in white mousseline de soie over white taffeta, and wore a veil and carried a shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley. The maid carried yellow roses. The Rev. B. R. Patrick officiated, and during the impressive ceremony the orchestra played Schubert's "Serenade" with united strings, and at the close burst out with the Mendelssohn wedding march. A number of relatives and friends were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Gardner left on the night train for St. Paul, where they will be at home at 980 Duchess street, after Aug. 1. Out-of-town guests who attended the wedding were: Mrs. H. R. Gardner, of St. Paul, mother of the groom; Mrs. Earnest Hall, of Bald Eagle, Minn., sister of the groom, and Miss Mabel Ostergren, of St. Paul, cousin of the bride; Miss Bessie Tubbs and Miss Eva Paddock, of South Superior; Miss Ollie Yates and Miss Laura Yates and John McKanna, of West Superior.

Last evening a reception was given at Minneapolis by Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Gardner for Mr. and Mrs. Gardner. Mr. and Mrs. Ostergren went down to attend it.

The Wadena Tribune announces a coming event that will interest Duluth people. It says:

"From close friends of the bride-to-be in this city, the Tribune learns of the approaching marriage of Miss Nellie Hennessy, of Long Prairie, and W. T. Hendren, of Duluth. The date set for this nuptual event is July 24, the ceremony to take place at Brainerd, where both of the contracting parties are well and favorably known and have many warm friends.

"This announcement will be received with more than usual interest in this section of the state, as both the prospective bride and groom are widely known and exceptionally popular.

"Miss Hennessy formerly resided in this city, and since her removal to Long Prairie she paid several extended visits to her friends here, and the people of Wadena are prone to regard her as still one of our own young ladies. Her popularity here is unbounded, and she has become thoroughly endeared to our people.

Mr. Hendren is in every sense a model gentleman and a successful business man. He formerly traveled over this territory in the interest of a wholesale firm and later he went into business at Alexandria. He posses an extensive ranch in Dakota, and at present he is conducting a large department store at Duluth."

HELEN GOULD IMPROVING.

Noble Woman Philantrophist Worn Out By Strenous Work Regaining Her Health.

Miss Helen Gould, whose arduous labors in the philanthropic field have caused her to succumb to an attack of nervous prostration, is reported as slowly improving in health. Every patriotic American is interested in the welfare of this noble woman, the Florence Nightingale of America.

A NIGHT STRUGGLE.

Woman's Fight With a Demon

It is remarkable the curious and different ways coffee will affect the human body. A little lady in Herkimer, N. Y., had an experience that may happen to others, but it is not common.

She says: "I am impressed with the desire, not only to thank you personally for relief, but realize that others may have the same distressing symptoms without thinking of the cause.

"When I would drop asleep I would seem to receive a perfect shock from feet to head through every nerve of my body. It was dreadful. I would finally become so feverish and exhausted with this horror repeated over and over each time I fell asleep, that I was obliged to force myself to stay awake, actually not daring to think of rest.

"After one such horrible night, which I shall never forget, I arose completely worn out with my night's battle, but with a firm resolve to set aside my morning cup of coffee, as I began to believe that it was the cause of my trouble.

"I had some Postum Food Coffee made according to directions. I took another cup at tea time. At night to my great surprise, I fell quietly asleep and rested well all night. It seems incredible after one day's use, but it is positively a truthful statement.

"I have persisted in the use of Postum until now my nervous system is in perfect condition.

"Husband showed some signs of coffee poisoning, such as stomach trouble and other symptoms, so he left off the coffee and drinks Postum with me. This has improved his health and he says he likes Postum better than he did the old-fashioned coffee.

"We might have been saved our trouble if we had known the truth about coffee, but we were ignorant as are thousands of others, and had to learn by experience.

"Please do not use my name in public."

This Store Closed all Day July 4th.

PANTON & WHITE THE BIG BLOCK STORE DULUTH, MINN.

Open Till 10 o'Clock Tonight and Next Wednesday.

An immense wash goods deal.

Two bargain counters filled with the goods.

Purchased at about fifty cents on the dollar.

We have just closed out a prominent jobber's entire line of cotton dress goods—buying them at about 50 cents on the dollar. The sale commences Monday morning, July 1, on Bargain Counters 1 and 2. Thousands and thousands of yards are to be sold at about half ordinary cost.

The mere announcement of this sale will bring crowds here all the week. Therefore come early Monday.

In the sale are included the following:

Cotton Challies — Plain and Corded Lawns, in floral and striped designs—regular value 6c per yard—on our bargain counters tomorrow at only---- 3c

Summer Dimities, handsome and sheer, Batistes & Lawns; this spring's patterns and colorings, sold early in the season at 10c, sale price---------- 5c

Staple Percales and Covert Cloth, new and up-to-date, regular 12½c values—tomorrow on sale at only---------- 8c

15c and 18c Dimities, Batistes and Lawns—beautiful effects, the cream of foreign and domestic manufacturers—on sale at ---------- 9c

This sale comes at an opportune time to fill your wants for this summer, and doubtless many foresighted women will lay in a supply for next summer as well. Patterns are good, and will be suitable for another year.

Flags and bunting for decorating.

Every home should be appropriately decorated with flags and bunting next week. There will be an extra demand for flags and bunting, and this will best be met at Panton & White's. On Bargain Counter 4 we will conduct a sale of Bunting, Flags, Paper Shields, Patriotic Fans, Mounted and Unmounted Silk Flags, etc. Prices very reasonable.

Watch The Herald for announcement of "Water-Soaked" Sale—the heavy rains of yesterday flooded our Carpet and Drapery departments. We are preparing to offer these goods at tremendous sacrifices.

Our advertisements appear only in Duluth's greatest paper—"The Herald."

THE DAKOTAS.

Expedition Against Rustlers Was Not a Complete Success.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Mitchell—The posse of men who left Cramberlain last week to recover 200 head of cattle stolen by an organized band of cattle thieves and secreted on an island in the Missouri river, has returned from their trip, which was partly successful. The men were able to recover thirty head of the cattle and returned to Chamberlain with them, but they declare their work is not yet done, and that they propose to have the remainder of the cattle or the men who stole them.

Aberdeen—Burglars were responsible for the fire in the grocery store of J. C. Thompson. Marks about the premises indicate that persons attempted to enter the store by a rear window, which was protected by iron bars, and while trying to discover the nature of the obstruction dropped a match on a pile of empty sugar sacks.

The value of real estate in this city as equalled by the city board for purposes of taxation is $852,057, and of personal property $441,319. This is a total increase over last year of $41,348, mostly in personal property.

Huron—As John Musolf and family were returning home from the picnic at St. Williams, their horses suddenly jumped to one side, throwing Miss Musolf from the wagon. Her arm was broken in three places, her leg was also broken, and several deep gashes cut in her head. Her injuries may prove fatal.

A hail and rain storm passed over portions of Beadle county, cutting a swath from one to three miles wide and twenty miles long, and seriously damaging corn and small grain.

Sioux Falls—The local lodge of Elks having decided to erect a handsome 4-story brick and stone building for lodge and business purposes, bids are now being advertised for and will be opened July 25, when the contract will doubtless be awarded. It is the intention to rush the work as rapidly as possible.

Dr. D. B. Scott, pastor of the Congregational church in this city, who resigned a short time ago, has been prevailed upon to withdraw his resignation. This action was brought about at the earnest request of practically every member of the church and the citizens of Sioux Falls.

Carl Langpop, of Hartford, was drowned in Skunk creek, near Sioux Falls, while bathing. He was 20 years of age.

Bowdle—A free-for-all fight among several Russians took place and one Russian was brought in almost dead from wounds received from pickaxes, shovels and other implements.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Hillsboro—The June term of the district court for Traill county opened this week with one of the shortest terms in the county's history, a week or ten days being probably sufficient to complete the work. H. G. Adams, who was awaiting trial on a charge of horse stealing near Hatton, pleaded guilty and has been sentenced to three years in the penitentiary. Another case of the same kind is pending against him at Barnesville, Minn.

Devil's Lake—The state encampment, G. A. R., elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Commander, Judge Bell, of Devil's Lake; senior vice commander, Weigert, of Grafton; junior vice commander, Blanchard, of Bismarck; surgeon, Johnson, of Lisbon; chaplain, Irwin, of Towner; delegate at large, A. A. Hall, of Minnewaukan. The next encampment will be held at Fargo.

Minot—It is said there are 100,000 acres of land under cultivation in Ward county this year. It is certain that the acreage is easily double that of last year. Wheat is doing finely. All reports agree that it was never in a more promising condition at this time of the year. Grass has made rapid growth and now promises a good hay crop.

Jamestown—Hans Olsen, of Daily, was arraigned in Judge Glaspell's court. He was charged with having recently entered a farm house near Daily and with a gun scaring all the women into the cellar. After doing this he helped himself to all the pantry afforded. Olsen is but 13 years of age and has been the terror of the community. He was abandoned when a year old boy by his parents and since then has been cared for by his uncle and others. Judge Glaspell sentenced him to the reform school.

George Clark, employed with a steam shovel crew, was struck on the head by a wheel weighing about thirty pounds, which had become badly cut, but he will recover. He was taken to the railroad hospital at Brainerd.

Fargo—Charles Ingberg, a young man who had been working on the farm of J. B. Ackeson at Grandin, was drowned while bathing with a party of friends in a small stream. He was unable to swim and is supposed to have accidentally walked into a deep hole. His parents live at Detroit, Minn.

A GOOD INVESTMENT

Don't Be Penny-Wise and Pound Poor—Follow the Advice of a Prominent Physician.

George M. Moore, M.D., in the American Health Journal, says: "The market is overflooded with fake laxatives made only to ruin a person physically and financially. They contain injurious ingredients and should be avoided by all who require a laxative. The one laxative which has merit is Cascarine, made from Roots, herbs, barks, plants and berries, nature's true remedies, and has given universal satisfaction. It would be an excellent investment for anyone to keep this remedy near at hand. The digestive organs often need a laxative tonic to aid them in their work, which everyone makes doubly hard through carelessness." Cascarine cleanses the bowels thoroughly, strengthens the stomach, stimulates the liver and increases the flow of bile. This results in more of the food being digested and purer blood being produced. Pure blood will overcome any disease. It tones up the nerves, makes the complexion clear and healthy. No one can afford to be without a bottle of Cascarine, for it only costs 50 cents a bottle, and your money will be refunded if it is not entirely satisfactory. Go to your druggist today and purchase a bottle; do what thousands of others are doing.

The manufacturers will send to any address, free of charge, a little booklet explaining thoroughly the cause and cure of diseases of the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, and one week's treatment, for 10 cents in stamps to cover postage.

NO MORE COATS THAT ARE TRAILING

Get a Raglan Just Like a Man's if You Would Look Smart On Your Summer Trip.

New York, June 27.—The newest French models in traveling cloaks are of a length little calculated to promote either comfort or neatness. They are beautiful, of course, trailing, sweeping lines lending a special grace to any figure, but baptized "dust coats," they are such in more senses than one, and when you reflect on the ubiquitous and deadly germ and the wearisome whisk broom forever to be wielded, the game seems scarcely worth the candle.

A more practicable and certainly pleasant wrap for traveling than one of these dirt harvesters comes in the shape of a three-quarter length Raglan, made of covert cloth, linen or brilliantine. When made of linen this garment, which runs to a box coat looseness and strapped seams, has something of the comfortable air of the masculine "duster." To give ease in walking it slits up at the bottom sides in the same way; then, with the same great patch pockets, the severe coat sleeves and single fly fastenings, it is nothing if not mannish.

But these medium length Raglans are very stylish, and a point in their favor is that they are best suited to skirts that escape the ground. The others must cover a jupe equally long, and the flouncing morning glory bottoms of the long skirts render the combined burden a nuisance when it needs to be lifted.

Among the dressier traveling coats are method of its employment. Beige cloth is the coat stuff, and a narrow turnover collar and sleeve gores of black velvet are striking notes.

Not the least important part of a traveling toilette are the garments to be worn under the dashing coat and smart frock, both of which should be in textures that shed the dust and do not crumple too easily.

Foulard, mohair and black liberty satin, dressmakers declare, are excellent traveling materials for summer petticoats, and to overcome the uncertainties of the laundry experienced travelers are now having all the underwear made of the cool and durable pongee. That is, all but the nightdress, which must be fashioned of blach china silk or pongee in the same somber tone and then whatever accident comes you are ready for the eye of the world. One almost wishes the accident might come when gazing on these modish trifles, for they are things of beauty and joys forever. In model they run to elaborate tea gown effects, though there are simple Kimona designs, too, and one of these showed exquisite band embroideries in colored silks.

In the way of traveling hats, never did fashion allow more designs and materials to choose from, the only restriction being, apparently, a smooth trimness of effect. There are great round turbans of fancy straw, the brims puffed and folded in a way to need little other trimming; sailor hats of shirring that appears upon the sleeve.

There is no garment in the summer outfit that requires greater care in the selection than the bathing suit.

Years ago it was almost an impossibility for a woman to look well, or even presentable, while indulging in her sea bath. Little attention was paid to the cut or fashion of the bathing suit, and the shapeless waist, scant skirt, and long bloomers, were a very trying costume for even the fairest of women.

Now, however, there is no excuse for the average woman if she does not at least present a trim appearance while in bathing. There are almost as many varieties of bathing suits as there are ball gowns. They are made in greater variety of material, and their lines are shaped to conform to the figure of the wearer.

The following are a few rules which should be observed in selecting a bathing costume:

If the figure is inclined to stoutness especial care should be taken that there is ample fullness in the skirt. In trimming, all lines running around the body should be avoided, and the material chosen should be of some dark color, preferably black or dark blue. Stout women should invariably wear black stockings. The woman of average size has a greater variety of styles to choose from. Her suit may be of wine color, bright blue, white or striped material, but whatever she selects, the woman of taste and refinement will avoid anything conspicuous.

The favorite materials this year, as last, are serge and mohair, though flannel and duck are also worn. All material should be well shrunk before being made up. Cold-blooded people should use either the serge or the flannel, as they are warmer. Many, however, wear flannel under-vests with their mohair suits. If tights are worn, bloomers of India silk should be worn over them. All bloomers should be made with a deep yoke to avoid the extra fullness around the waist and hips. There are many ways of trimming the suits, either with braid, stitched bands or any of the fancy Persian borders that will stand the water. All trimming should be laid on flat. Flowing sashes, bows, etc., while they look very pretty, become draggled

FOR CARRIAGE OR CASINO WEAR

A Charming Though Expensive Sample of the Artistic Milliner's Art.

The summer girl of 1901 has opportunities to look bewitching which no other pretty maiden ever had. The model shown above is a charming example of the milliner's art, also of the art which commands much money as its price is seventy-five dollars. True, it is only composed of a shape covered with white chiffon folds, a band of black velvet around the crown, a bandeau of crushed pink roses inside the brim and six perfect ostrich tips.

some of black taffeta, satin-finished surah and India pongee—the heaviest and coarsest made—that strike a fairly convenient walking length. These run largely to the graduating skirt flounce now so much in vogue and to bishop or bell sleeves, and sometimes the neck of a taffeta garment will be cut out several inches below the stock line, a frilled cape collar, with long ends tying at the bust, being at this point a modish finish. Some of the cloth coats are lined, Lousine silk, in wisteria, violet and other fashionable tints, doubling many a dainty Empire model in pearl-gray, snuff-brown or black. But these lined coats are by no means as practicable for summer wear as the unlined affairs. Any doubling, however light, adds to warmth, and not only do the delicate linings soil at once, but the contribute prodigiously toward cost.

A very elegant traveling coat that seemed magnificent enough for any service, and shown by a Fifth avenue milliner, was developed in a heavy black taffeta, unlined, and had a superb ornamentation in white stitching. Another of sapphire blue brilliantine displayed a simulated jacket effect in scrolls and arabesques of red stitching.

Sewing machine work in a contrasting color is an ornamentation much used this season, the black and white combinations being especially in favor. It is extremely decorative, and is a trimming within the means of any woman deft with her needle, for, of course, the shop article is made more expensive thereby.

Black silk braid is also seen on a few coats, an imported model showing one Cuban braid—everything is Cuban nowadays—alpines of stitched line, with plaid linen bands, and "burnt" straw toques that combine beautifully with black velvet and the great muslin roses, de regle this summer. A round hat in this rich red yellow straw showed a wreath of shaded ivy leaves and a great rosette at the left, where the rolled brim was widest, of black baby velvet. Some big round moons of coarse straw, that looks as if it had just been pulled from the straw stack of the farm, provide stylish material for certain made hats in odd designs.

The moons, which seem to have been woven by the farm baby, in some cases bristle with the jagged straw ends, and when red poppies are combined with a pinched and fluted gypsy shape evolved from one of these the result is adorably countryfied.

A veil of scarlet tulle is sometimes an accompaniment, and the whole tops a linen traveling frock with a gay smartness.

A tea jacket is as indispensable as a shirt waist to the adequate summer wardrobe. Afternoon tea has grown to be an institution with us, and in the iced form it is now invading summer hotel plazas and other seats of fashion, where any diversion is welcomed as excuse for a change of costume.

An elegant jacket for a young matron is of jewel blue liberty satin, with a fichu collar and sleeve frills of rich ecru lace. A short bolero effect is imitated by a scarf of the same material, which, most gracefully disposed in front, is held some three inches above the waist line at the back by the same broidered in any color the wearer may prefer. The waist is made with outward turning plaits and the top of the skirt is laid in fine tucks with an inverted box plait at the back. Black stockings with white dots or plain black stockings look well with this suit.

As many object to exposing their necks to the sun, most of the suits here described can be made higher by extending the shields to the neck line and attaching a low standing collar.

A GAINSBOROUGH EFFECT.

Expensive Picture Hats to Be One of This Season's Most Exclusive Fads.

Large picture hats more or less a la Gainsborough are one of the season's most exclusive fads. These models are necessarily expensive, as the hats alone, of the light and fine Neapolitan horse hair, are costly and the ostrich plumes used as trimming must be long and handsome. The above is a blue horse hair, trimmed with dark blue plumes and blue maline.

AN AMAZON WRECKER.

She Caught Logs and Lumber In Quantities.

Ripley, Ohio, June 29.—During the present remarkable flood Mrs. William Mayfield, a robust and handsome young married woman living here, has been out in her skiff and caught logs and lumber in quantities. She handles the oars as well as men can, and the fierce heat does not seem to affect her. She caught seven fine sawlogs yesterday, besides other floating objects of value.

NO CLOUDS IN SKY

When She Was Killed By Lightning.

Owensboro, June 29.—A bolt of lightning out of a clear sky killed Miss Crask, aged 16, at Sorgho. Her clothing was torn entirely off. A 12-year-old brother fifty feet away was knocked down. There was not a cloud to be seen.

Infinite varieties of stockings are worn, but black is always in good taste. There are also many styles of caps and bathing shoes for those who prefer to wear them.

One of the best models for this year's bathing suits is of scarlet and white striped ticking, with plain red collar and belt; the former is bordered by a band of white stitched with red, and the skirt is trimmed with the same. Red stockings with white polka dots go with this costume.

Another suit is of wine colored or claret red flannel, trimmed with rows of black soutache braid. The vest is of cream colored flannel and the bow is of black silk. The skirt, which is gathered from either side of the front gore, is buttoned on the left side.

Navy blue duck is the material employed in another suit. The skirt is made quite full and has a band on the bottom of white duck with blue polka dots. The waist and sleeves are laced with blue silk cord. Blue and white striped stockings are worn with this suit.

A pretty bathing costume is one of white serge, with stitched band of bright red. The collar extends to the belt in front, showing a vest of plain red, which buttons under the collar on the left side.

One of the best models, and one that is becoming to most women, is made of black mohair or heavy silk, trimmed with narrow stitched bands of white. The shield is of white with a star em-

Practical Suggestions About What to Eat and How to Prepare Food.

SANDWICHES FOR PICNICS.

Since fashion has approved of the sandwich, it has become one of the indispensables on the family table as well as on the menu for large entertainments.

While one rule governs all sandwich making—the bread must be of close fine grain and crust removed—there is quite a distinction between those which grace the festive board and are considered worthy the most elaborate "affairs," and the plainer more substantial picnic sandwich, whose chief merit must be to give a feeling of satisfaction and plenty to the appetite sharpened by the fresh air and unusual exercise.

THE SOCIETY SANDWICH.

These are made as attractive in appearance as possible, and if intended to take the place of a salad at an afternoon or evening affair, must partake as much of the nature of a salad as possible.

Then again they often accompany the salad, and in this case are frequently made with cheese, nuts, olives or any ingredients suitable to serve with materials composing the salad.

The society sandwich may be an appetizer like the canape or on the other hand a sweet dainty.

They may be cut round, triangular, oblong, diamond, square, heart-shaped or cut into squares large enough to roll and tie with narrow ribbon.

THE PICNIC SANDWICH.

In preparing these the desire is to go to as little trouble as possible and yet, at the same time, have something very appetizing. Cut the bread a little thicker for these, and the slices in oblong shape for convenience in carrying and eating in picnic style. Wrap each sandwich in oiled paper to keep them fresh and moist. The long, common envelope boxes are very convenient for packing sandwiches; they are light, easily carried in a small strap or with a handle and can be thrown aside when empty.

DEVILED EGG SANDWICH.

Boil egs for twenty minutes; chill in cold water, shell and separate yolks and whites. Chop the whites very fine and mix with a little mayonnaise dressing. Place a lettuce leaf on each slice of bread which has been slightly buttered; spread a slice with the mixture of white of egg and mayonnaise. Rub the yolks smooth with a little oil or butter, season to taste with salt, pepper, mustard and a little Worcestershire sauce. Add a level tablespoonful of minced ham or boiled salt tongue to each egg yolk. Spread a layer of this mixture on slices of bread, lay this on the slice covered with white of egg and mayonnaise and wrap in oiled paper.

MINCED SANDWICHES.

Chop half a pound of lean ham very fine; add a minced pickle and a tablespoonful of mustard. Put four ounces of butter in a saucepan and add the ham, the beaten yolk of an egg, with a little salt and pepper; remove from the fire; mix all thoroughly and pour into a dish to cool. When firm, slice thin and place between slices of buttered bread. These are nice for picnic lunch.

CELERY SANDWICHES.

Take three hard-boiled eggs, remove the shells, and chop very fine or put through a vegetable press; add two-thirds of a cup of finely-chopped, white celery and enough mayonnaise dressing to bind together properly, season to taste with salt, pepper and paprika.

SALAD SANDWICH.

Under the head of salad sandwiches all forms of meat may be used; the filling being placed in lettuce leaves which are put between two slices of bread; the ruffled lettuce being used and the crinkly edges allowed to extend beyond the trimmed edges of bread cheese. Cress is frequently used instead of the lettuce and the leaves always spread with mayonnaise. Do not put a salad sandwich together too long before using.

CLUB SANDWICH.

This belongs to the salad sandwich group and is very tasty and quite substantial.

Butter the bread, slice thin and cut into oblong shape, lay a lettuce leaf on a buttered slice, on this place a thin slice of chicken; spread with a little mayonnaise, cover with a lettuce leaf and another slice of bread; on the second slice place another leaf and two thin, narrow strips of bacon (ham may be used but is rather dry). Cover the bacon with lettuce leaf and slice of bread. Fold neatly in oiled paper. With these sandwiches are served olives and small mixed pickles. These are especially nice for travelers' luncheon.

CUCUMBER SANDWICHES.

These are a comparative novelty and are served only as a relish.

Slice large cucumbers very thin and soak for an hour in white wine or tarragon vinegar to which has been added a few drops of onion juice. Lay the cucumber slices on tiny rounds of buttered brown bread.

DILL SANDWICHES.

Butter and cut thin slices of rye bread; on half of the slices place a layer of white meat of chicken, cut into thin chips. Cover the chicken with a layer of dill pickles cut very thin; cover this with another slice of buttered bread.

FRENCH SANDWICH.

Cook some chicken or turky livers in a very little water; when done mash very fine. To one-third quantity of liver add two-thirds quantity of minced olives. Mix together with a thick mayonnaise dressing. These should be made in small, fancy forms and with white bread.

PEANUT SANDWICHES.

These are quite popular and are to be recommended for children's luncheons and picnic parties. If possible they should be served at once, as soon as made; cover thin slices of white bread with a stiff mayonnaise dressing, cover it well with ground peanuts, which have been well roasted or salted and chopped fine. When served at society luncheons they should be accompanied with sherry. For children's luncheons or picnics, put the roasted nuts through a meat grinder, and spread the paste on buttered slices of bread. Mixed nuts can be used. Peanuts and strawberry or rasberry jam make a delicious sweet sandwich for tea and is better for children than sweet cake.

RAISIN SANDWICHES.

These are served for outdoor tea with lemonade or iced tea with lemon. Select large raisins, cut them in half lengthwise with a sharp knife or fruit scissors and remove the seeds. Lay them close together between slices of bread cut into fancy shapes.

FRUIT SANDWICHES.

These belong to the tea or sweet sandwiches and are very dainty.

Cut French rolls into thin slices and spread with thick cream or rich cream cheese (white); cover alternate slices with large strawberries cut in half and thinly sliced bananas; sprinkle the fruit with crushed loaf sugar and tie each roll with narrow ribbon. These rolls should be baked with a very tender, delicate brown crust and not trimmed, as for most sandwiches.

SCENTED SANDWICHES.

These are a new fancy for flower luncheons and lawn teas. Roses, violets, clover and nasturtiums are the flowers most generally used. Trim the crust from the bread. The loaves must be very small, as these sandwiches must be very dainty and there will be too much waste if large loaves are used. Put the trimmed loaf in a deep covered dish, completely embed it in the rose leaves, clover or whatever flower is used. Cover closely and let stand over night. Treat the butter in the same manner, but first wrap in very thin cheesecloth. The sandwiches are served plain, simply thin slices of the scented bread spread with the fragrant butter. The rose and clover sandwiches are delicious with a glass of cold, rich milk fresh from the dairy.

HOT CHEESE SANDWICH.

These are nice for Sunday evening tea and are change from Welsh rarebit. For these bake the bread in half pound baking powder cans or get the very small, round French loaves. Trim off the crust, slice thin and spread with a thick layer of grated, rich cheese. Season with salt and a little paprika or cayenne, place another slice on top of cheese and press closely together. Spread these lightly on both sides with butter and grill over a slow fire or brown in the oven. Serve with olives.

Fooled Them All.

Marked Notice

At a great banquet recently held at the Palmer House, a prominent Chicago lady remarked to a physician sitting beside her, her dislike and entire disapproval of the popular cereal beverages, so-called food coffees, etc., with which the market is flooded. As the coffee cups were brought in and the air became freighted with the delicate aroma which coffee drinkers so much enjoy, she remarked, "That is the genuine thing," and drank her coffee with the greatest delight. Imagine her surprise when a few moments later she learned that she had swallowed a cup of Caramel Cereal. Not a person of the two hundred guests knew of the substitution until informed by the toastmaster. Connoisseurs of coffee recognize the fact that this cereal beverage, which originated at the Battle Creek Sanitarium and is manufactured exclusively by the Battle Creek Sanitarium Food Co., represents the very tip-top of perfection among cereal beverages. Every package bears a picture of the Battle Creek Sanitarium. Ask your grocer for it.

INQUIRIES ANSWERED.

(No attention paid to inquiries not giving name and address of writer, plainly written).

Mrs. J. J. R. writes: Will you kindly give me a recipe for good, light, white bread, what kind of flour to use and how long I should knead it? And am I asking too much for a recipe for nice loaf cake? I never can make a good cake as it always seems coarse and dry.

MILK BREAD.

Put one pint of milk in a double boiler and heat scalding hot; place in a mixing bowl a teaspoonful of salt, a level tablespoonful of butter and level tablespoonful of sugar; pour the hot milk over this; let stand until milk is lukewarm; then add half a cake of compressed yeast dissolved in a little lukewarm water; mix well and add sufficient sifted flour to make a rather thick batter. Beat until full of air bubbles and batter is smooth. Cover with a tea cloth and close-fitting lid and set in a warm place. The idea is to keep it at a lukewarm temperature throughout the process of raising the dough. So do not allow it to get too warm, especially in warm weather. When the sponge doubles its original bulk, add flour enough to make a dough; turn on a well-floured board and knead or rather work deftly and quickly with the fingers until the dough is smooth and elastic to the touch and will not stick to board or fingers. Some bread does not require as much kneading as others. Do not get the dough too stiff or your bread will be dry and hard. Place dough in a greased bowl, cover closely again and set to rise. Let it again double its original bulk, then form into two loaves; place in separate pans, filling them half full; cover and let rise to top of the pans and bake in a moderately quick oven for three-quarters of an hour. When bread is done, turn out of the pans and rest one end of loaf on edge of pan. Do not cover loaves, but allow to cool in this manner before putting into bread box. Do not stand the hot loaves where the air will blow directly on them.

LOAF CAKE.

You evidently do not use the right kind of flour for your cake and the quality of baking powder has much to do with the moisture and texture of the cake. Do not attempt to make cake with an ordinary bread flour and select your baking powder with care or you are simply wasting material in your endeavor to make a good cake.

The following makes a nice plain loaf cake, but is not rich: Beat to a cream quarter of a cup of butter, one and one-half cups of sugar and yolks of two eggs; add one cup of water or milk alternating with three cups of sifted flour in which you have thoroughly mixed two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Beat to a smooth batter; add quarter of a nutmeg grated or any flavor you prefer. Beat to whites of the eggs to a stiff froth and fold into the batter, mixing thoroughly but lightly. Bake in a moderate oven three-quarters of an hour. Do not let the cake brown too quickly on top or there will be a heavy streak. Fruit may be added to this cake.

Advice On Bait Casting For Black Bass.

The Duluth aggregation of ball tossers will go down to Ashland July 3 and 4, and will endeavor to celebrate the latter day by treating themselves to a rousing victory over the Ashland people. The Duluth team demonstrated its ability to play ball last Sunday afternoon, when she defeated Ashland 6 to 1, and although some claim that it was Ashland's off-day, and that the Duluths won the game through a streak of luck, there is no reason in the world why they should not be able to do the trick again when the occasion demands. The men all played good ball, and Glenny excelled himself in the box. With Al Cummings, the boy wonder, along, they ought to be invincible in that direction. They are strong in the outfield, and from last Sunday's indications are all wool and a yard wide on third. McLaren, although he was a little timid about throwing to first, bids fair to make a crackerjack on the north bag. He is quick and with a little more practice will make good when it comes to playing fast ball. He got the only two-base hit that Duluth secured Sunday, and he nailed that first time up. The rest of the men are good, clean, fast ball players, and can be depended upon to do good, steady work, so there is no reason why they should not get both games from Ashland. Ashland has a good ball team, but from last Sunday's indications, Duluth has a better one.

It would not go at all amiss with the fans if flags were nailed on to the foul posts at Oenota park. Last Sunday afternoon Randall nailed out a terrific two-bagger, fully ten feet inside the foul lines, but before the umpire had the sticks located, the ball had rolled out of the lines, and was fielded on foul ground. The ball was called foul, and Randall was forced to start out again with one strike to his credit instead of being half way around the diamond. With flags on them the foul posts could be located much more easily.

Another feature generally accompanying baseball, but which might be eliminated by some people in Duluth without serious injury to themselves, is the excessive knocking that has been going on in some quarters. It does no one any good, and when there is so little cause for it does the team harm. Manager Hansell has gotten a really good team together for the support that he has received, and they have been playing first-class ball whenever they have been given half a chance. The baseball lovers of Ashland gave Gardner $1000, and told him to go ahead and get a good team together. They have given the team enthusiastic support whenever they have gotten a chance, and it is no small credit to the Duluth boys that they were able to put it over them 6 to 1. Get to work and boost—don't knock.

When Superior played at Duluth early in the season there was no crowding around the diamond, and everyone had an equal chance to see, but at the last game, although it did not interfere seriously with the players, the catchers once or twice might have got a little closer to the foul tools had the crowd been back. This element is annoying to both players and spectators, and more satisfactory games will be the result if all spectators are kept off the track and behind the fence.

A new baseball team is to go in the field under the name of the Duluth Grays. It is composed of high school and Y. M. C. A. players, and can be expected to be one of the strongest amateur clubs in Duluth. Cummings and Alworth, the high school twirlers, will pitch, while Potter will be behind the bat. Guy Cummings will cover first; Peterson, the high school short, will fill the same position; Briggs on third and Webber, Congdon and Berg in the field. A Wisconsin university man, who has a string of home runs hanging to his name, may wear the mask during some of the games. Games will be arranged with the surrounding towns, one with Brainerd being practically settled upon.

Manager Hansell has written to the Milwaukee Sentinel team and the Appleton, Wis., state team, to arrange games, and Duluth may get a taste of some more fast ball. If the Milwaukee team comes here, it will be on July 11, 12, 13, for three straight games, after which they will go to Ashland for four games. A series of games will probably be arranged with Appleton.

There is no truth in the statement that Shepard is going to quit the Duluth team.

Football may not flourish in the high school this coming season, unless something is done towards making arrangements for Dr. J. D. Park to coach the team. It is understood that the faculty and the manager, for the purpose of cutting down expenses, will get an assistant for the manual training department who will also coach football. How they expect to get a first-class teacher and a first-class coach combined for the salary of a teacher is beyond comprehension, and the members of last year's team who played under Dr. Park's tuition declare that they will not come out unless he is the coach. Thus the matter stands. It is either Dr. Park or no team.

The Northland Golf club has just issued a small book for the season of 1901, which, besides containing the rules of the club, has the officers and directors, the trophy holders, the Northland club's etiquette of golf, and the names of members, of which there are over seventy-five active and about sixty associate. The improvements made on the club house and links this season are extensive, and more interest is taken in the game than ever before.

Of all the good letters Edward S. Taylor has had in the American Field, his best is that on "Bait Casting For Black Bass." In it the writer says that black bass is pre-eminently the favorite game fish of America. "To my notion," he says, "the small-mouthed black bass has only one fresh water rival—the rainbow trout. Anglers who are partial to the black bass claim that it puts up a fiercer fight and is the gamiest fish that swims in fresh waters. I used to think so until I tackled the rainbow trout, in rapidly running waters. * * * After the first year the black bass has an appetite for minnows, frogs and crawfish, and will eat very small perch and sunfish. During the months of July and August, when natural flies are out over the water, the black bass like a change of diet, and these flies and bugs are to the bass family what strawberries and cream are to the human race.

"I have spent hours drifting about in a boat, during teh natural fly season, among the rushes and lily pads on North and South Twin lakes, near Conover, Wis., a small station on the Chicago & Northwestern railway. These lakes contain small-mouthed black bass, mascalonge, pike and whitefish. One afternoon, while drifting about on South Twin lake, I noticed a number of gray miller flies fluttering close to the surface of the water. Many of these flies would climb or run up to the tops of the rushes, flutter down to the water, then scramble back to the lily pads and rushes. While watching these flies, I saw a black bass swim out from the shelter of a bunch of lily pads, rise slowly to the surface of the lake and seize a fly which was floating on the water. Then this bass turned tail and swam back under the very same bunch of lily pads. My boat had drifted very near this bass' hiding place, yet I sat perfectly quiet and the presence of the boat seemed to be unnoticed by the fish, which came to the surface gently five times during the space of five minutes, each time opening its mouth and taking in a fly without once breaking the surface of the water.

"I prefer to take black bass with the artificial fly, but most anglers use bait. Casting bait properly is an art, and much time and patience are required to become proficient therein. Early in the spring the No. 4½ Skinner spoon, cast in the shallow water near shore, is a most killing lure. From the middle of May until the middle of June a live minnow, a strip of pork rind or the tail of a small perch cut to resemble a minnow, if cast along the edge of the deep water weed beds, will produce the best results. The bait-casting rod should not be more than six feet long, preferably of Bethabara, greenheart, split bamboo, or some equally tough and resilient wood, or of steel. The reel should cost more than all the rest of the outfit, for it should be full-jeweled and spool sixty yards of medium-sized silk line, not oiled or enameled. To this line attach a swivel, to the swivel tie a ten-inch wire leader, and to this leader a weedless brass hook. The hook a small frog through the lips and ask some friend, who knows how to cast a bait properly, to go out in a boat with you and give you some practical instructions in bait casting. You can learn more in one hour from one who knows how to cast a bait than from reading a library of written instructions."

In a review of the present turf war now on at Chicago the St. Louis Republic says the following in regard to the so-called outlaws:

The Chicago turf writers are fond of calling every man and horse who has performed on Turf Congress tracks an outlaw. As a matter of fact the Chicago tracks are the only outlaw tracks in America. They became so by permitting Jockey Harshberger to ride there after he was ruled off in St. Louis. Harshberger cannot ride on the Eastern Jockey club tracks, in England, in France, in Australia or anywhere there is a turf government, outside of Chicago. Under proper interpretations of the laws which bind the International turf bodies to respect one another's ruling, the Chicago tracks outlawed themselves by permitting a boy ineligible on any legitimate track in the world to ride on them. Under proper government the fact of Harshberger riding at Hawthorne and Harlem outlaws those tracks, and every horse owner and jockey who participated in the races he rode in, or in other subsequent races upon the tracks on which he rode.

The Chicago papers call Tom Hayes the "unknown" horseman. Tom Hayes can race anywhere in the world, especially in Chicago. If Tom Hayes is outlawed and races with Perry Belmont and J. F. Keene, then do the owners become outlaws, too. That is the spirit of the law and its equity.

The racing situation in Chicago is simply putrid. The present agitation there is simply the result of the decent people, which exist in every community, finding their patience and ideas of propriety taxed beyond endurance. Then Condon has promised too many "grafters" too many things and failed to make good. They also are after him. By skillful dodging he postponed the crisis to such a time as to catch the American Derby and let the Washington Park people in for a large part of the "shakedown." The Washington Park people are to be pitied. They mean well, possess respectability, but are "in" bad.

A racing system that depends upon the whims of ward heelers and stockyards politicans had better be wiped out. Hence there should not be any grief even among horsemen and breeders if the Chicago "turf" is thrown in the sewer. It will be all for the best when John Condon goes back to his poolrooms and bucket shops and the turf gets into the hands of Kentuckians other than W. F. Schuite.

"How can we increase the value of our yearling fillies?" has long been a question puzzling to breeders. The answer has ever been, "Increase their earning capacity," but how to do this has been quite as much a problem as the original proposition. Now Frank Driver, who prepares the youngsters at the T. H. Stevens' Walnut Hill stud for their campaigns, has suggested to Secretary Overton H. Chenault, of the Breeders' Protective association of Kentucky, an idea which seems to be a practical solution of the problem. He suggests that in future sales 10 per cent of the entire each colt be deducted, and with it a fund for the purpose of giving stakes exclusively for fillies be created. "In this way," he says, "their earning capacity will be increased, and consequently their value will be enhanced." Secretary Chenault regards the suggestion as a good one, and it will be laid before the breeders at their next meeting.

Among the horses which W. K. Cleveland is training at the old Kentucky association course is the 4-year-old gelding Judge Hargis. He belongs to Maj. P. P. Johnston. He was in the hands of Campbell, who sent him home, with the statement that he would never do. Maj. Johnston had him castrated and drove him on the road a while. He then tried to work him with a mule to a farm wagon, but he wouldn't stand for that, so the major turned him out. About a month ago he took up several horses to be put in training, and concluded to gallop the gelding along with them. He has turned out to be the best in the bunch. On Thursday morning he worked a mile in 1:49. He will be sent to the races next fall.

Cash Sloan has been astonishing the natives of Russia since crossing the water, and nothing like his saddle work has ever been witnessed by the Muscovites. In a letter to his brother Fremont, received several days ago, he says he never has ridden better in his life. Out of forty mounts he has finished first on twenty-seven of them, and has won four straight on the grand colt Pickwick. Pickwick, with Cash in the saddle, won the great Russian czarovitch, which is one of the greatest turf events in the czar's realms. Cash rode eighteen winners without a skip. He says he is in tip-top health, and expects to keep up his good run of luck. In speaking of Pickwick he grows eloquent, and says he is one of the best horses he has ever ridden, and that he is almost invincible. Cash will remain in Russia for some time to come. When he won the czarovitch he says that many of the spectators almost kissed his hand off with delight.

George H. Ketcham, the owner of the champion trotting stallion, Cresceus (2:04), recently talked interestedly about the great horse that is to meet The Abbott (2:03¾)in a battle royal for the championship of the trotting turf, at Brighton Beach, less than two months hence.

"Cresceus never before pleased me so much as he does this season," said Mr. Ketcham. "He is feeling like a fighting cock and just wants to run away on a trot. I let him step his first mile below 2:20 just before I left Cleveland. It was trotted in 2:17, with the last eighth in 14½ seconds, and Cresceus was actually going within himself at the finish. I believe his record will be 2:02 or better before the end of the season, provided he has the good luck to get a good day and track when he starts to beat the record."

Mr. Ketcham says Cresceus has only three engagements to race this season, and at present there are no other engagements to race this season in sight. These races are at Brighton Beach, in August, at Boston in September and at Lexington in October. He will meet The Abbott in New York, Bor Alma and Charley Herr at Boston, and all three races his earnings for the season will foot up something like $35,000. Between his engagements at New York and Boston Cresceus will probably make an attempt to beat his own record and that of The Abbott. Mr. Ketcham says he likes the Glenns Falls track for such a trial of speed, but as the grand circuit meeting there is scheduled for the same dates as the meeting in New York some other course must be chosen.

Although the Detroit Driving club has offered a purse of $2500 for a free-for-all trotting race at the grand circuit meeting next month it is not probable that Cresceus will start in a race until he meets The Abbott at Brighton Beach on Aug. 15. Mr. Ketcham says he will key his horse up for the contest by working him alongside a running horse.

The "hoodoo" still clings to Billy Madden's black champion, Denver Ed Martin. Martin has been matched a half dozen times in the last six months, but as yet he has never been able to get before the public. The latest advices from the East are that the Martin-Walcott match before Tom O'Rourke's new club at Chester has been declared off because Madden refused to allow the club to select its own referee. Madden wanted Al Smith, the stakeholder, to name the referee, but this was objectionable to O'Rourke. Madden is still trying to find some place to pull off the match, and at the same time he will not let the grass grow under his feet trying to get some one to take Walcott's place in case O'Rourke concludes to withdraw his darky from the match.

'Macon" writes in his New York letter: I met Fred Bert on Broadway yesterday. Mr. Bert is an old Californina and was a big manager in 'Frisco when Billy Brady was beginning his Thespian career as a call boy in his theater. That isn't twenty years ago. Now Mr. Bert is Mr. Brady's right-hand man of business. He drew up the contract between Brady and Champion Jim Jeffries, which has just expired by limitation, though Brady could have extended it two years longer had he desired to do so.

"I know this to be so," said Mr. Bert, "because I incorporated that very clause in the contract myself," he continued. "I am glad, though, that Mr. Brady did not exercise his privilege, not because Jeffries isn't a nice enough fellow as fighters go, but because managing a fistic champion takes up so much time and thought that can be much more profitably employed, as well as pleasantly, in the regular theatrical business. With 'Way Down East,' 'Lovers' Lane' and 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' Mr. Brady has made as much money this season as any manager in the business. He will have eight or ten companies playing these pieces during the coming season, and with his mind thus employed and also looking out for future attraction he can better employ his time than in pugilistic ventures."

"He has always done his best to make his champions win at all their battles, and except at Carson City he has always been successful. That he won't be successful. That he won't be successful. That he won't be

BIWABIK.

Biwabik, June 28.—(Special to The Herald.)—Preparations are being made for the grandest celebration of Independence Day in the history of the village. One of the attractions of the day will be the Ely brass band, which has been engaged for the celebration, and will discourse patriotic music throughout the day. A fine program of sports has been arranged including horse and bicycle races and other athletic events. A large bowery will be erected, and dancing will be one of the numerous pleasures to be indulged in. A larger sum of money than ever before has been collected, and the celebration is expected to be a hummer from the moment of the sunrise salute until midnight.

The local school is closed last week for the year, and all the teachers, with the exception of Principal Grae, have left for their homes. Principal Grae will remain here the coming summer, to hold the position of assistant postmaster under the new postmaster, N. B. Shank.

Charles Brown, of Duluth, was a Biwabik visitor Saturday.

Mrs. Willham Miller has been seriously ill at the home of her brother, F. S. Colvin, the past week, but is now convalescing.

Clyde Pearce, of Duluth, visited here with former friends Sunday, returning to his home Monday.

Misses Janet and aMbel Carmichael were in McKinley Thursday to attend the play "Mitsu-U-Nisi," given by the school children of that place.

Dr. McGreery returned to his former home at St. Paul the first of the week, Dr. Adams having returned to fill his position at the Bray hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Trevena have adopted the 3-year-old son of Mrs. Anderson, who died during childbirth last week, leaving a husband and five children. Miss Brant, one of the teachers of the local schools, has taken charge of a 5-year-old daughter.

Mrs. Murray, of Eveleth, visited here the early part of the week, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. William Holden.

Misses May Fisher and Miss Jean Dass, of West Duluth, are Biwabik visitors this week, the guests of Miss Maude Fisher.

F. S. Colvin looked after his interests at Two Harbors Monday.

Mrs. James Bale, of Ely, is a Biwabik visitor this week, a guest at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael.

B. Johnson, of St. Paul, was in Biwabik on business Monday.

A number of Biwabik people took in the baseball excursion to Eveleth Sunday.

Frank Haney was in Duluth Saturday, intending to enlist in the United States navy, but when he arrived the recruiting office had already left, so he returned home. He intends to wait another year, and then enlist.

James C. Ames visited with his parents at Duluth over Sunday. On his return, he was accompanied by his young brother, who will visit here a few days.

Miss Lottie Schulze has been spending the past week with friends at West Superior, Wis.

Probably the heaviest rain storm in the history of Biwabik occurred Monday morning between the hours of 9 and 12, and in that period of time flooded the streets and sidewalks, and the yards at the Iron Range and Missabe roads. The low room above the Iron Range depot was converted into a miniature lake, and the high road leading to the depot was flooded to such a depth that horses had to wade almost to their knees. Owing to the flood, the Duluth mine was compelled to shut down until the mine could be pumped out. The Hale and Kaney mines were also flooded, but unwatering the mine was only the work of a day, owing to the fine pumps that were recently installed. At the Biwabik mine, some of the dump tracks were washed out, and a train of nine dump cars went off the tracks. About twenty feet of sidewalk near the Iron Range depot was washed away.

Mrs. James Tierney visited with Eveleth friends Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Carmichael, of Champion, Mich., arrived in Biwabik Monday for a visit with relatives.

Miss McHolland was an Eveleth visitor Monday.

An informal dancing party was given at the opera house Saturday evening, by a number of young ladies, and about fifteen couples danced until midnight.

Mrs. Sjowell was a Two Harbors visitor Monday.

The closing exercises of the public schools were held at the Opera house Friday, and a fair sized crowd listened to the interesting program.

The village was in darkness the week ending Monday, owing to the armature on the dynamo at the electric light plant having given out, and had to be sent to Duluth to be repaired. The armature was repaired and returned Monday, and the lights were turned on the same evening, to the joy of the business men, who were able to return the cumbersome and ill-smelling lamps to their former places in the woodshed.

Work on the addition to the school house is progressing as rapidly as the weather will permit. The work is a very difficult one, as the school had to be moved from its foundations. The school was moved Saturday and the new foundations almost completed. About fifteen men are being employed on the contract.

All the mines and railroads in this vicinity paid off their forces the past week, and as a result there has been more activity noticeable on the streets than for a month past.

The cottages of Chris Henderson and N. B. Shank have been completed, and make a very pretty appearance, being ornamentally constructed.

About seventy-five men comprising the night shift at the Biwabik mine, were laid off for the season last week, the prospective ore shipments this season not warranting the working of the night shift. This shut down materially darkens the prospects for the village this season, as this leaves less than a half the number of men employed in Biwabik lat year. The crusher building is already completed, and the massive machinery for crushing ore is nearly all in place, and the plant is expected to be in operation about July 5. At the present time, cars are going forward at the rate of about 125 per day, and as this rate is expected to continue, the shipments this year will be but 250,000 tons, as against 984,000 tons last year.

Mr. Robbins returned to his home at Duluth Monday, after a week's visit here with his son, M. L. Robbins.

Mrs. Miller returned Saturday to Duluth, after a week's visit with her daughter, Mrs. Fred Lerch.

John Millner left Monday for Hibbing, where he will be employed at the Stevenson mine.

Mrs. Lutes was a Duluth visitor Wednesday, returning the same evening.

Dr. and Mrs. Farmer, of McKinley, were in Biwabik visiting friends Saturday.

C. L. Stephens, of Merrill, Wis., was in Biwabik on business Saturday.

Mrs. Lerch was a visitor at Duluth Wednesday.

Mrs. Charles Nigro left Saturday for Princeton, Minn., to join her husband, who is in a theatrical company playing there on that date.

Mrs. J. D. Shilling was in Duluth for a few hours Tuesday.

Mrs. Graham visited with friends at Virginia Friday.

A hot wave struck the ranges Tuesday, the thermometer registering 85 in the shade. The following day the thermometer hung between 90 and 95 degrees throughout the day, and one prostration was reported. A laborer on the Iron Range section, while working with his shovel, was overcome by the heat. He was carried to the depot, and restoratives applied. The man recovered and was able to be out the following day.

Miss Osborne visited with friends at Virginia Friday.

Mr. and Mrs. Seeley were Eveleth visitors Sunday, the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Poole.

Miss Brant left Monday for her home at Anoka, Minn., where she will remain until school opens next September.

Fred Senrick left Wednesday for Chisholm, where he will enter the saloon business with Frank Faber, another Biwabik resident. Mr. Senrick has closed up his restaurant business here and will devote all his attention to his Chisholm business.

H. L. Stott returned Monday from his Duluth visit.

A. Talle returned Monday from his home at Tower.

Coley Monroe, of Eveleth, looked after his interests here Monday.

Mrs. J. C. Poole, of McKinley, was a Biwabik visitor Thursday. She left Friday for the East, where she will attend the Buffalo exposition, and other points of interest.

McKINLEY.

McKinley, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank Klink transacted business at Sparta Wednesday. Mr. Klink contemplates erecting a large building there and entering the saloon business.

One shipments though still very good, are not equal to last week's record owing to the heavy rains and a shortage of boats at the docks to take the ore away.

Mrs. T. H. Driscoll was a Sparta visitor Tuesday.

The electrical storms the past week have been the worst in years, burning out many telephones on both the Mesaba company's and the Iron Range systems. The weather also has been the warmest in three years.

H. H. Salmon transacted business at Biwabik Tuesday.

Several persons from here attended the midsummer day excursion to Eveleth Sunday.

GRAND RAPIDS.

Grand Rapids, June 29.—The report that the Eastern Minnesota was to run a line through to Grand Rapids from Hibbing for the purpose of making the shipping of ore from the iron mines on this end of the range a possibility is undoubtedly true, and the extension will probably be made this summer or fall. There are several mining properties which will ship over this line, among which are the Missabe Chief, Diamond, Arcturus and Buckeye.

W. R. Baunmbach and A. B. Kerlin, president and secretary respectively, of the company, which has secured a franchise for a telephone system in this village, are here this week for the purpose of starting a crew of men at work and making other arrangements for the installing of a telephone system in the village. The men are now at work erecting poles and stringing wires, and inside of a month there will be a first-class system in operation.

You Can Cure It.

A New Cure for Catarrh in Tablet Form.

The old time treatment for catarrh was in the form of douches or sprays; later on, internal remedies were given with greater success, but being in liquid or powdered form were inconvenient and were open to the same objection to all liquid remedies, that is, that they lose whatever medical power they may have had on exposure to the air.

The tablet is the ideal form in which to administer medication, but until recently no successful catarrh tablet had ever been attempted.

At this writing, however, a most excellent and palatable remedy for catarrh has been place before the public and sold by druggists, called Stuart's Catarrh Tablets, composed of the most recent discoveries in medicines for the cure of catarrh, and results from their use have been highly gratifying.

Stuart's Catarrh Tablets contain principally highly concentrated antiseptics, which kill the catarrh germs in the blood and mucous membranes, and in this respect are strictly scientific and modern, as it has been known for some years past by the ablest physicians that the most successful catarrh treatment was by inhaling or spraying antiseptics.

The use of inhalers, douches and sprays, however, is a nuisance and inconvenience, and moreover can in no wise compare with the same remedies given in tablet form, either in efficacy or convenience.

A clerk in a prominent insurance office in Pittsburg relates his experience with Stuart's Catarrh Tablets in a few words but to the point. He says: "Catarrh has been almost constantly with me for eight years; in this climate it seems impossible to get rid of it. I awoke every morning stuffed up and for the first half hour it was cough, gar, expectorate and sneeze before I could square myself for my day's work; no appetite, and a foul breath which annoyed me exceedingly.

"I used Stuart's Catarrh Tablets for two months and found them not only pleasant to take but they did the business, and I can sincerely recommend them to all catarrh sufferers."

Druggists sell Stuart's Catarrh Tablets at 50 cents for full sized package. They can be carried in the vest pocket and used at any time and as often as necessary. Guaranteed free from cocaine, mercury or any mineral poison; absolutely safe.

HUMOURS

Complete External and Internal Treatment

Cuticura

THE SET

Consisting of CUTICURA SOAP to cleanse the skin of crusts and scales, and soften the thickened cuticle, CUTICURA OINTMENT to instantly allay itching, irritation, and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and CUTICURA RESOLVENT to cool and cleanse the blood, and expel humour germs. A SINGLE SET is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring skin, scalp, and blood humours, rashes, itchings, and irritations, with loss of hair, when the best physicians, and all other remedies fail.

MILLIONS USE CUTICURA SOAP

Assisted by CUTICURA OINTMENT, for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and soothing red, rough, and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings, and chafings, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Millions of Women use CUTICURA SOAP in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and excoriations, for too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women and mothers. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used these great skin purifiers and beautifiers to use any others. CUTICURA SOAP combines delicate emollient properties derived from CUTICURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refreshing of flower odours. No other medicated soap is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, the best skin and complexion soap, and the BEST toilet and baby soap in the world.

Complete External and Internal Treatment for Every Humour.

day party by Miss Anna Sheehy, for the evening of the 29th.

The Duluth & Iron Range road brought a large number of excursionists to Eveleth from Ely last Sunday. Among those on board were the Ely band, baseball team and the Scandinavian society of S. H. & E. F. of A. The latter held a picnic in connection with the local organization at the grounds just north of the city.

The Ely baseball team, however, met their Waterloo at the hands of the Eveleth boys. Score, 12 to 2. The only time that the Ely team was ahead was in the first half of the first inning when they made one run. The Ely boys will be given another chance next Sunday, however, at their own grounds, and are planning revenge. The Eveleth team will go over accompanied by a large company of rooters and an interesting time is expected by all.

The Duluth & Iron Range brought an excursion up from Duluth last Sunday. This party did not come into the city, but went to the picnic grounds at David, a couple of miles out at Ely lake. A large pavilion was erected and a very enjoyable Sunday spent. Bus lines carried people back and forth from Eveleth and Sparta and a very large number of our own people went to spend the day with the visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hookwith leave today for St. Paul, where they will make their future home. Mr. Hookwith having disposed of his business some time ago to Louis Decker. Mr. Hookwith is one of the early settlers here, and his many friends will much regret his departure. It is probable that he will engage in business in St. Paul or Minneapolis.

W. R. Owens has accepted a position as shipping clerk with the Fayal Iron company.

Miss Dollie Peterson spent a couple of days with Eveleth friends and relatives the fore part of the week.

The local fire organization is practicing nearly every night, preparing for the tournament at Hibbing in August.

Rev. M. O. Stockland, of the First Methodist church will deliver the Fourth of July oration here.

The Eveleth baseball team will play against the Virginia team twice on the Fourth, in the morning at Eveleth and in the afternoon at Virginia.

TOWER TOPICS.

Tower, June 29.—There is much joy here over the discovery of another bed of iron ore beneath the jasper ledge in the Minnesota mine at Soudan, as it was feared the mine was about exhausted, the effect of which would be serious to this city.

Great preparations are being made to celebrate the Fourth. The sum of $200 has been raised and there will be an interesting program of sports and games. An oration will be delivered by Mayor Murphy, and that in itself will prove a strong attraction.

Rev. R. C. Fugard left Monday on a trip to the exposition at Buffalo.

Churn drills are at work on section 22, 58-20, owned by Tmomas Merritt, of Duluth.

A two-story building, 25 by 70 feet, is to be built by J. J. Cox on a lot adjoining the postoffice. M. Pastoret's hardware store will occupy the ground floor.

Preparations have been made to celebrate the Fourth here on a grand scale.

W. R. Baumbach, of Wadena, was here this week looking after business interests.

It is expected the new school building will be ready for occupancy in September.

Prescriptions are filled correctly...

Every drop of medicine that goes into a prescription which is filled here is perfectly pure. We make it our business to see that everything is pure and of standard strength. There is no guess-work about it. Pure drugs and intelligent compounding are what make a prescription filled here so effective.

No doctor can obtain the desired results in the sick-room unless his prescriptions are filled with drugs of the highest quality. The sick-room is the one place above all others where quality counts more than anything else. If you want the patient to improve, to respond to the physician's labors, you should be particular about the medicine. You should have his prescriptions filled with nothing but pure fresh drugs and chemicals.

More and more physicians are depending on our prescriptoin department. We compound as we think your doctor would like to have them compounded, and as we know they should be.

Most of the reputable physicians of Duluth patronize our prescription department. This fact should be of interest to you. It means that if you bring your prescriptions here to be compounded, that the physician is satisfied—the patient gets the best medicine.

BOYCE'S Drug Store.

VIRGINIA.

Virginia, June 29.—Virginia intends to celebrate the Fourth. All arrangements for the greatest celebration ever held north of Duluth are practically completed and, the weather permitting, next Thursday will be one of the greatest days in Virginia's history. A fine program of events has been arranged, with handsome prizes. A $100 purse is hung up for the baseball game. For wrestling, Cornish style, heavyweight, the first prize is $20 and the second prize $25. First prize, lightweight, $15; second prize, $15.

Twelve to two was the score of the ball game which was played last Sunday between the Virginia-Eveleth and Ely teams. It was a one-sided affair and the Mosabites had the best of it. Jack Harrington occupied the slab for the Virginia-Eveleth team and the visitors were unable to do anything with his delivery.

FARE, 50c ROUND TRIP

CASS LAKE.

Cass Lake, June 29.—(Special to The Herald.)—Dr. J. E. England and wife, of Grand Forks, accompanied by their two children, have been in Cass Lake this week, enjoying an outing. They have been spending most of their time on Cedar Island.

A. McKinney, manager for the Scanlon-Gipson Lumber company, returned on Monday from Buffalo, whither he went several days previous in company with his wife to see the sights at the Pan-American exposition.

Mrs. A. Lessard, accompanied by her daughter Virgie, returned Monday evening from a visit with old friends at Brainerd. Jim and Fred, Mrs. Lessard's little sons, also returned, having completed a term of school at Brainerd.

John Jackson, of Farris, accompanied by his wife and two little children, was in Cass Lake Tuesday, doing some shopping.

E. H. Phillips has purchased the old Long Prairie house, and this week his household goods arrived from Duluth, his former home.

George Barlow and Pat Murray, who hail from East Grand Forks, have been in Cass Lake and vicinity this week, enjoying the splendid fishing hereabouts.

Mrs. L. W. Diechert and Miss Edith Foster, of Grand Forks, were visitors in the village during the week, being the guests of Mrs. F. J. McNaney. Mrs. Diechert returned home on Thursday, while Miss Foster left for her home in Michigan, having been visiting in the Forks with Mrs. Diechert for some time past.

Ball and McNell, the Grand Forks battery who played with the Cass Lake team at Bemidji, spent Sunday night in the village. They wanted to see the town whose uniforms they had worn during the day. McNell is brakeman on the Great Northern, while Ball is a conductor on a Pullman car.

Ferdinand Nells returned on Saturday from Bemidji, where he has been confined in the hospital for some time, nursing an injured hand. Mr. Nells is shipping clerk at the Nells mill, and while performing his duties, severely injured his hand.

H. J. Broeker went to Grand Rapids on Sunday to visit with his wife, who has been at that place for some time, visiting with relatives.

Nalsh McKinnon, Dan Helsing and "Red" Olson were a delegation of Farris citizens who were doing business in town on Saturday.

John Goodman, owner of the City drug tore at Bemidji, was a visitor in Cass Lake last Saturday. Mr. Goodman will return on the Fourth and participate in the exhibition to be given by the running team of the Bemidji fire department.

Mrs. Leary and Miss Nettie Buell, both of La Prairie, are visiting friends here.

Daisy Thompson, who has been absent for the past six weeks visiting friends at Cloquet and other places, has returned home.

Alvin Frost has been appointed custodian of the fire apparatus, vice Ludwig resigned.

At a meeting of the school board on Tuesday evening, the following teachers were engaged for the ensuing year: T. H. Edmonds, Moorhead, principal; Miss Ellen Johnson, eighth grade; Miss Fink, fourth grade; Miss Allen, primary; Miss Lulu B. Tuttle, ecnd primary.

Those of our citizens who remained at home last Sunday, had the opportunity of witnessing one of the best games of baseball ever played between the younger members of the "rising generation," the Cass Lake "Sluggers" and the Akeley Juniors crossing bats for the gate receipts. The Sluggers won the game by a score of 15 to 6, but the contest was not so unequal as the score would indicate. It was nip and tuck till the seventh inning, when the little pitcher for the Akeley boys injured his arm and was forced to retire. After that the Cass Lake boys won "in a canter." Quite a delegation of citizens went out to the park to see how the little fellows would perform, and they were greatly surprised to see how well the players of both teams handled themselves. None of the boys were over 13 years of age, and many of them have not yet passed the 12th mile post. A double play, made by Charlie Lydick, Ray Phillips and Hallie Stone fairly startled the crowd. The teams played as follows: Cass Lake—W. Finnegan, p.; A. Lunney, c.; H. Stone, 1b.; C. Lydick, ss.; Ray Phillips, 2b.; E. Abore, 3b.; L. Lotford, rf.; O. Halvorson, cf.; M. Clark, lf. Akeley—H. Butler, p.; R. Pravitz, c.; J. Bell, 1b.; S. Berkins, ss.; C. Olson, 2b.; H. Butler, 3b.; L. Berger, lf.; H. Hogey, rf.; W. Eakel, cf.

Mrs. C. N. Hitchcock left on Monday morning for Prontenac, to visit for a few days with old friends. She will return the first of next week, accompanied by her daughter Mame, who has been attending school at the Villa Maria, and who will spend the summer here with her parents at the Bay View.

E. Chamberlain arrived home Tuesday evening from Walker, having accompanied Sheriff Hardy on a trip to Fergus Falls with a crazy man, who was consigned to the insane asylum at that place.

Under instructions from Postoffice Inspector Bynum, who was in Cass Lake several weeks ago, Postmaster Smith has closed a lease with J. T. Gardner for the use of a part of his building as postoffice for the term of one year.

C. M. Johnson this week received a letter from his brother Walter, who is still at Nome City. From the letter we should judge that Walter is doing remarkably well in the region of everlasting snow and lots of gold.

The many friends of R. H. Bennett are pleased to see him in Cass Lake again. He has been to Omro, Wis., upon a visit to his mother.

Ray Schumacker, assistant cashier of the Bank of Cass Lake, has gone to Gull Lake, near Brainerd, to enjoy a couple of weeks' vacation. His place is being filled by H. R. Koop, of the First National bank, of Brainerd.

Hon Thomas Shevlin arrived here on Wednesday to consult with his business partner, Julius Nellis, relative to matters in connection with the mill.

Dr. Wilcox, accompanied by his wife and his wife's mother, Hon. Mrs. John A. Lovely, of St. Paul, were in Cass Lake Tuesday night.

Henry Warren, superintendent of schools at Bena, was in town for several days this week.

Benjamin Fairbanks was in Cass Lake this week.

W. C. Pitman has been elected managers of the Cass Lake Sluggers, the juvenile baseball organization, and now the team challenges any nine in the state whose players are not over 16 years of age.

A bowery is being erected opposite the Pine hotel, wherein a dance will be held on the Fourth of July, the proceeds of which will be appropriated by the ladies of the Catholic church. The ladies will serve ice cream and cake and sandwiches during the day.

The members of the fire department are building a bowery between Gardner's department store and Leeman & Sauve's billiard hall, where they will give a dance all day the Fourth of July, and also in the evening.

Robert Owens and bride arrived in Cass Lake on Monday and have settled down to housekeeping in a house on section 16.

Nora Osborn was so ill Wednesday as to require medical aid. She is now much improved, however.

Mrs. M. H. Frost, of Minneapolis, and daughter, Mrs. Eli Karker, of Minnehaha Falls, left for their homes on Friday morning, after visiting in Cass Lake for a week with Alvin Frost and wife.

Dr. E. N. Falk aid Enger Lee, of Hillsboro, N. D., spent Wednesday night in Cass Lake, leaving Thursday morning for Park Rapids, where they had some business affairs to attend to.

Mrs. N. McKinnon and Miss Donnelly, of Farris, were visiting in Cass Lake on Wednesday.

H. F. Young, superintendent of the Cass Lake Indians, has received instructions that in the future all Indians mus observe and live up to the marriage laws of the United States, and if they cannot get along with each other they can follow the custom of the white and apply for a divorce. The object of the government in compelling marriages and the registration of the same is to be able to trace the legitimacy of the children, who will become heirs to allotments.

Tuesday evening Mrs. McCampbell gave a most delightful moonlight excursion on the launch Minnesta, in honor of Mrs. and Miss Xanter, of St. Paul, who were her guests. After going to the mission and other points of interest, refreshments were served. A moonlight trip on Cass lake is a great treat and a source of pleasure and enjoyment, and when a party is composed of the following jolly fellows and gentlemen, a good time must inevitably result. Those that took part in the trip were: Mr. and Mrs. McCampbell, Robert McCampbell, Mrs. and Miss Ethel Xanter, H. E. Reed and wife, Dr. Stanton and wife and Miss Gladys Robinson, A. A. Harper and wife, George Mellet and wife, Miss Maud Millet, Mrs. Boyle, Stillwater, J. H. Walker, Minneapolis.

Attorney P. J. Russell, of Bemidji, was in Cass Lake Wednesday evening en route home from a business trip to Portland.

Louis Hoy went to Park Rapids Wednesday, and played first base for the Akeley team in a game against Park Rapids. The latter team won the game by a score of 7 to 1.

J. H. Brunn, manager of the Scanlon-Gipson store, returned Thursday evening from the Twin Cities, where he had been for several days on a combined business and pleasure trip.

A. D. Sauve returned Friday from Scanlon, William Dunlap's new townsite, where he has been doing the past two weeks erecting a building for John Le-Clare, who will soon move to Scanlon and engage in business. Mrs. Sauve and little son Emery, who have been visiting in Grand Rapids, also returned.

CABLE FLASHES.

Following special orders issued by Emperor William, mourning services were held in Berlin over the body of the late Gen. Von Schwartzekopf, who was formerly Count Von Waldersee's chief of staff and who met his death in the fire which destroyed the winter palace at Pekin April 17.

At Christie's auction rooms, London, a pair of small Louis XV cabinets, with brass mounts and executed by Caffieri, which were formerly the property of the duke of Leeds, were sold at auction for £15,000.

A fire at the Aiarsitzin, a fortified town in the government of Saratov, Russia, consumed several sawmills, twenty-four timber-laden barges and the timber depots and quays on the Volga. The damage is placed at 5,000,000 roubles, and it is reported that several lives were lost in the fire.

The correspondent of the London Times, cabling from Shanghai, says he considers the persistent reports of the organization of a Mongolian invasion by Prince Tuan and Gen. Tung Fuh Hsiang to be worthy of attention on account of their inherent probability.

A dispatch from Che Foo reports the entire province of Sheng King in revolt. The rebels are said to be overrunning the country, pillaging and burning. It is reported that in the vicinity of Mukkden all the villages are being burned and hundreds of inhabitants are being killed. The dispatch says the Russian forces are not sufficient to maintain order.

THE GREAT WILD WEST

Pawnee Bill's Big Show Coming Next Wednesday.

Indians, Rough Riders and Horsemen of the World.

Great Street Parade, the Delight of the Children.

Pawnee Bill will visit Duluth next week bringing his great Wild West show here next Wednesday for the first time. Pawnee Bill is Maj. Gordon William Lillie, president of the Arkansas National bank, and resident of Pawnee, Oklahoma. The aggregation which he will bring here with him is a very large one. He carries 358 people and 246 head of stock, it taking twenty-two cars to transport the aggregation, six Pullmans, six stock and ten flat cars. There is the bronzed trapper, the United States artilleryman, the Mexican vaquero, the Russian Cossack, the Indian squaw and her papooses, and many other types characteristic of this country's early times.

Among the Indians, who form no small part of the caravansery, are Ridge Bear, considered by many the finest specimen of the aborigines now extant, and whose portrait, painted by E. A. Burbank, than whom there is no better artist as far as Indian subjects are concerned, created such a furore, Kiser Young Man, Chief Thunder, and the celebrated not to say notorious Crazy Snake.

What appeals especially to the nomadic, restless, turbulent instinct, the heritage of the past ages, is the breezy freedom and gypsy bohemianism so characteristic of the tribes gathered together by the banker-showman, who with his wife, who accompanies him, looks after all the business details of the show.

The parade is thus described by the Sheboygan, Wis., Telegram.

"The parade of the morning was not only entertaining, but highly instructive, being replete with enthnological subjects.

PAWNEE BILL'S WILD WEST.

Then it was not of the usual circus type, where beasts of the free and wild forest and jungle are caged in prisons darkened with gaudily-painted, mirror-bedecked, walls, allowing hardly enough of God's air free to give sustenance to the soul to penetrate into the Egyptian recesses. It was all free and unmuzzled that presented itself to the eyes of the humanitarian onlooker. But what a contrast was there! Here the fiery untamed Bedouin on his quivering Arabian steed, the bluest-blooded animal of the kingdom; there the proud and haughty Indian of bones and sinews, fondly astride his beloved broncho, looking out into the world defiantly, and disdainfully on the civilization about him which had robbed him of his possessions, yet withal so nobly erect as if he were the compliment of his steed and horse and rider were one and inseparable; here the United States cavalryman, every inch a ruler and a leader, looking about as if to be sure that all might see what stuff heroes are made of; there the last of the race, the American cowboy, equal to all emergencies, without a price on his life, ready to sacrifice it and himself for the benefit of humankind when called upon to do so, valuing his horse of greater worth than himself, bedecking it with ornaments gathered all over the far-extending plains, second to no horseman, equally as crafty as the Indian, bronzed so that except for closer inspection he might easily be classed as such, his clear eye surveying the things about him with contempt as fit for women only, not for men.

The ponies and burros attracted the attention of the little children especially, while their older sisters and brothers, though gray-haired and just toddling along, felt keener interest in the human part of the show. Then there was a United States battery, the inevitable prairie schooner, characteristic of yesterday, though but a memory in spite of the fewness of years since it passed; then the stage coach fast being displaced by the free rural delivery; three bands, and an assemblage of colored singers, and towering above all, most democratic of them all, the link that binds them all into one composite whole, Maj. Lillie, or as he prefers to style himself "Pawnee Bill" of Pawnee, Okla. In his contact with men of all descriptions from the untamed barbarian to the unpolished diplomat he has not surrendered one iota of gentlemanliness; he is a perfect cavilier, kind and considerate to all about him, quiet, unassuming, always at work, yet cool and collected and easily approachable.

His wife is the very image of him in these characteristics, a modest little woman, highly esteemed and loved by all the members of the troupe. The Indians traveling with the show are Cheyennes, Arapahoes and Chickasaws, guarded by a detachment of the Sixth United States cavalry in command of Sergt. Jack Lear.

A GHOST OR TWO.

BY DAVID G. TAYLOR.

(Copyright, 1901, William R. Miller.)

While I assert my belief that everything pertaining to the supernatural can be explained by natural causes, and that a man who believes in ghosts is soft in the head, an adventure happened me a few years ago that put my cynicism to the test and reflected little credit upon my personal courage. Thirty miles out of London stood an old manor house which has since been torn down to make room for a summer resort. At the time of my visit it was little better than a ruin. The property had been in law for thirty years, and during most of the time the house was without a tenant or caretaker. Of the twenty or thirty rooms only four or five had come to be inhabitable, and those were in sad condition.

I was down from London on a sketching tour and stopping at an inn half a mile from the manor. I early decided to include the ruin in my sketches, and one afternoon went over to have a look around. After some waste of time I selected a spot whence to begin work, but left the work itself for the morrow. I did not seek to enter the house, but in passing along its south side, and knowing it to be untenanted, I got quite a shock by seeing for an instant a face at one of the broken windows. The glimpse was so brief that I could not tell whether it was the face of a man or woman, but I knew it was old and ugly. After a moment's thought I realized that some wanderer had taken up lodgings there, and as it was no concern of mine, I passed on without further investigation. That evening at the inn I spoke of the matter to the landlady, and with a serious face she turned to me and said:

"Better keep on the outside of the old house, sir. That face has been often seen before, and we know that it belongs to no one alive."

According to the general belief the place was haunted. The landlord told me of sights and sounds and adventures that aroused my curiosity instead of my fears, and almost in a minute I made up my mind to a thorough investigation. He was made anxious by my decision and earnestly sought to dissuade me, saying that I would assuredly come to harm, but at high noon next day I walked over and went through all the rooms. There were three rooms downstairs and two on the second floor which were fairly habitable, but though a thick dust lay everywhere I could not find that even a rat had crossed the floors. To the left on the first floor was the library, and I selected this in which to pass the night. I left my candles on the mantel, sit down on an old bench, and there was a bolt on the inside of the door in case I wanted to shut myself in. There were cellars underneath, but the stairs were quite gone. There were doors to the five rooms, but they were without locks. I braced them all wide open with bricks before leaving, and I brought in boards and covered the broken window of the library.

The landlord and others tried again to dissuade me after supper, but I laughed at their words and went my way, being provided with half a dozen candles and a stout club to keep the ghosts away. I also had my pipe and a book, and I meant to pass an easy night of it. I had some little curiosity, but was entirely without fear. As for the face I had seen at the window, I still believed it to be that of a tramp, and I argued that if he had not taken alarm and made off he would be clear of disturbing me during the night. I was all settled when night fell, and I lit my pipe and began reading. It was just 10 o'clock when I pulled out my watch to wind it, and I had only restored it to my pocket when the sound of footsteps upstairs suddenly caught my ear. The door of the library stood open, and I could see out into the hall from where I sat. My heart leaped into my throat in a second, but then it came to me that it was the tramp. I rose up, grasped my club, and waited, and I was mad enough when I felt my knees trembling. The footsteps moved about for a minute or two, and then were heard on the stairs. The steps were light for a man and yet too heavy for a woman. They descended as naturally and regularly as could be, and I was all attention, but they ceased at the foot of the stairs and I found myself looking at—blankness. Some one had come down, but how had he vanished? I took up one of the candles and marched out into the hall, but no one was in sight.

I admit that a chill crept up my back as I returned to the library, but I shut my teeth hard and repressed it. There had been no footsteps. It was all imagination. So I argued with myself, and sat down again to my book. Not over five minutes had passed when the three doors upstairs swung to with a bang in succession. Each one had been held wide open by a brick, mind you, and the night was as quiet as you please. I jumped to my feet as the doors banged, and for a minute I thought of running away. Then I got a grasp on myself and picked up the candle and the club and walked straight upstairs. All the doors were shut, but I opened each one in turn, gave the rooms a looking over, and found nothing but the bricks. I propped the doors open again and descended to the library, and standing in the door I called out that if any person were about he need not expect to frighten me off by such tricks. In response to this I thought I heard a suppressed laugh, and I felt more anger than fear when I sat down again. I heard nothing further until shortly after 11 o'clock, when I laid aside my book to refill my pipe. As I got up the footsteps caught my ear again. Someone seemed to move across the room on tiptoes, and then came a scream, a muttered curse and sounds of a struggle. You must give me credit for rushing upstairs with candle and club. The door of the room over the library was open as I had left it, and there was nothing to see inside. As I stood there, however, peering about and my heart beating fast, a cold wind seemed to blow past me, footsteps began to descent the stairs and I wheeled about and looked down while the descent was made. I heard, but could not see. At the bottom of the stairs the noise ceased and all was silent. With my hair standing up and my heart choking me, I slid downstairs, pulled open the front door, and, after blowing out the candles, I leaped out into the darkness and ran at my best sped for the inn. The ghost had routed me.

Weak, Wasting, Strictured MEN Cured While You Sleep in 15 Days.

19,846—CURES LAST YEAR—19,846

Why the Frightful Tension of Stricture is Dissolved Like Snow Beneath the Sun—IN FIFTEEN DAYS.

Why Weak Men Are Restored by the Magic St. James Treatment Applied Locally and Directly to the Affected Parts.

We answer the questions briefly. If you cut an artery in your arm, you do not take internal medicine to stop the flow of blood. YOU USE LOCAL APPLICATIONS. Similarly when the urethral ducts become weakened and relaxed it is ridiculous to take internal treatment, which must pass through the stomach and urine before it reaches the seat of disease. The seminal ducts project into the urethral canal through the Prostate Gland, and are easily reached by local treatment. Dr. Carter's "Gran-Solvent" soluble Bougies will dissolve, digest and forever remove

STRICTURE

In 15 days, without pain, injury or inconvenience. The bougies are inserted at night and act while you sleep. "Gran-Solvent" removes every symptom of stricture, leaving the canal as healthy as when nature formed it. NO BRUTAL CUTTING OR DILATING. NO INJECTIONS TO IRRITATE THE MEMBRANE. NO INTERNAL DRUGGING TO RUIN THE STOMACH. The St. James treatment is local, direct and positive.

The St. James treatment is prepared in the form of crayons, very narrow, smooth, flexible and wholly soluble, which are inserted into the water passage at night, where they dissolve and deposit the medication in its full strength upon the Prostate Gland contracting and strengthening the ducts and FOREVER STOPPING DRAINS AND EMISSIONS, and curing while the patient sleeps.

VARIOCOELE.

Varicocele is an accumulation of sluggish blood in the veins of the scrotum, due solely to imperfect circulation, and has its origin in a diseased and torpid Prostate Gland. Operations in this disease are only temporary, and no mechanical device yet discovered has cured a single case. Gran-Solvent heals the Prostate and restores healthy circulation. Varicocele disappears and the sluggish accumulation is replaced by pure healthy blood.

Thousands of men stricturedd, weak, wasting and despondent were cured and restored by the St. James method last year. A vast army of men in whom the flight of life has penetrated the fearful nightmare of stricture and seminal decay.

HOME TREATMENT By Mail can be used by the patient as successfully as by ourselves.

Space will not permit a complete description of the incomparable St. James Treatment in urethral diseases. Every sufferer from Stricture and its offspring, Prostatitis and Seminal Weakness, should write to the St. James Association, 71 St. James Building, Cincinnati, Ohio, for their wonderful illustrated work, showing the parts of the human system involved in urethral ailments, which they will send securely wrapped in plain package, prepaid — — —

MARKET DECLINES

Wheat Closes Lower After a Very Dull Session.

The Opening Weakness Was Due to Disappointing Cables.

Rally That Followed Caused By a Bulge In Corn.

Duluth Board of Trade, June 29.—The wheat market started weak and lower this morning, but after selling off slightly, rallied on the strength of a bulge in the corn market. The opening weakness was due to disappointing cables, Liverpool closing ¼@⅝d lower. Later the market again turned weak and the close was at a loss for the day. Considerable new wheat made its appearance in Chicago and St. Louis. Primary receipts of wheat were 561,275 bus, last year 522,277. Clearances of wheat and flour were 451,806 bus. New York reported fifteen loads of wheat worked for export.

Receipts at Duluth and Minneapolis, 285 cars, against 375 last week, and 328 last year. Chicago receipts, 62 cars, 2 of contract grade.

Trading in the Duluth market was very dull, and devoid of interest. September wheat opened ⅛c off, at 66c, sold at 66c at 9:30, declined to 65⅞c at 9:35, recovered to 66c at 9:39, advanced to 66⅛c at 10:45, but eased off and closed at 65⅞c, a net decline of ⅛c for the day. Chicago declined ⅛c and Minneapolis ¼@⅜c.

Cash sales were 15,000 bus at ¼c over September.

Flax Northwestern declined 6c, September flax sold off 3c and October flax declined 2½c. Other coarse grains were unchanged in price.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—No. 1 hard, cash, 69c; to arrive, 69½c; July, 69¼c. No. 1 northern, cash, 66c; to arrive, 66⅛c; July, 66¼c; September, 65⅞c; August, 66c. No. 2 northern, 64c. No. 3 spring, 57c. Oats, 27¼@27c. Rye, 46c. Flax, cash, $1.88; September, $1.35; September, Northwestern., $1.37; October, $1.22.

Car inspection—Wheat, 54; corn, 5; oats, 6; rye, 6; flax, 3. Receipts—Wheat, 86,960 bus; corn, 1748 bus; rye, 930 bus. Shipments—Wheat, 457,443 bus; corn, 45,600 bus; oats, 16,368 bus.

MARKET GOSSIP.

Received over private wire of B. E. Baker, grain and stock broker, 307 Board of Trade, Duluth, Minn.:

Chicago, June 29.—There is no change to note in conditions pertaining to wheat. Domestic weather is in every way favorable for harvesting winter wheat and for making spring wheat crop. The movement for winter wheat is rapidly increasing and the selling pressure on the market is likely to become greater. The steadiness in today's market was due to the strength in corn. This made shorts uneasy and created buying. We see nothing in the situation to maintain more than a temporary advance and are inclined to think wheat will sell lower. Northwest stocks have decreased considerably and a decrease is expected in the visible on Monday. Primary receipts 558,000 bus against 522,000 bus. Shipments 760,000 bus against 99,000 bus.

The corn market was strong and active, with large speculative trading. The impetus is the continued dry hot weather in the Southwest and the unfavorable outlook for the growing crop. The Southwest has been buying corn for some days past on these conditions. For the time being it is entirely a weather market, conditions of supply and demand having very little to do with it except speedily where needed prices are likely to advance.

Oats—The Illinois state report was very bullish on condition of crop and the strength in corn also contributing. The undertone seems strong. While we are inclined to think oats are a pretty safe thing to buy and may sell considerably higher.

Provisions were firm and higher. The precarious condition of corn crop is also contributing to today's strength. The market may have some further rally after July stuff is out of the way but we think provisions should be sold on hard spots.

STRENGTH IN STOCKS

Atchison and Union Pacific Were In Good Demand.

Brisk Business In Grangers on the Crop Prospects.

Closing Was Quiet and Steady Near the Top.

New York, June 29.—Trading in stocks was brisk at the opening at fractional net gains with one or two exceptions. Atchison and Union Pacific were in good demand and were helped by higher prices from London.

Among the minor stocks, Chicago & Alton preferred and Iowa Central preferred rose 1¼ each and North American a point.

Realizing sales caused a slight set back in some leading stocks, but there were good gains at other points resulting in confused trading. Illinois Central and Tennessee Coal were marked up 1¾ each on active buying and Northwestern common and preferred and North American were 2 points higher. Rock Island rose to 158 and the rights brought 10⅛ to ⅜, ½ to 1⅛. After the first half hour there was a more general demonstration of strength, the trunk line group gaining good fractions and Texas Pacific, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred, Cleveland, C., C. & St. Louis, Laclede Gas and General Electric moving up 4 points with the last mentioned leading.

Quite a good business was done in stocks of the corn carrying grangers firming on crop prospects. Illinois Central rose 3½, St. Paul 3⅜ and Rock Island 2⅜. Tennessee Coal rose 3¾ and New York Air Brake 4. Gains of a point were scored by a sprinkling of prominent stocks. Realizing cost prices some reactions, but the close was quiet and steady near the top.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Waldorf gossip to Edwards, Wood & Co.—As the Fourth draws near the belief grows stronger that the market will soon enter a period of bullish activity. This is based on several noted considerations. the feeling that the financial situation in July will greatly improve. Then the character of recent buying of stocks like St. Paul, Union Pacific common, Southern Pacific, the coalers and the United States Steel shares foreshadows this. It is believed there will be a higher range of values a little later on. The steady absorption of investment securities is also commented on as the important factor. This demand is noticeable both as regards stock and bonds. As to the railroad shares and the Steel stocks, there are undeniable indications that the Standard Oil crowd and Morgan and Keene interests have added of late very materially to their holdings of the issues. Statements of net earnings for May which have just been issued intensify the strong feeling on both railroads and industrials. That is also true of crop advices, both domestic and foreign, the most trustworthy private banking reports from the other side indicating a much larger shortage interest in wheat yield of France, Germany and Russia than has been estimated as yet. In this respect the present situation in the opinion of competent observers very strongly resembles that of the corresponding period of 1892 which signalized a tremendous recovery in corporate earnings. The best informed men in the grain trade look for an unprecedented export movement of bread stuffs during the summer and autumn months involving an important movement of gold in October and November next of $25,000,000 to $30,000,000. Large operators, whose habit is to look far into the future lay great stress on this phase of the commercial situation, believing that it is the best foundation for a forward movement in securities prices.

* * *

Town topics—Wall street has recovered from the shock of the bank failure and that of Marquand & Co., and the period of high money is ended. The manner in which the market withstood the unfavorable developments demonstrated that it rests on a strong foundation and we look for higher prices.

Ennis & Stoppani—The crop news is way beyond expectations. Wheat is of good quality and great in quantity. Corn is recovering and the outlook is good that Europe will need all the surplus wheat we can supply. Our farmers should correspondingly benefit. The business outlook is most promising and stocks, both railroads and industrials, should be bought on reactions.

BRITISH CONSOLS.

London, June 29.—Consols for money and the account, 93 9-16.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, June 29.—Cotton opened firm, 5 to 10 points higher on nervous demand from shorts and fairly active buying for outside account, based on firmer Liverpool cables than looked for, a bullish summary of the past week and plantations and unfavorable crop news from nearly every part of the belt. The weather reports showed no real change in the Southwest. Following the call the market advanced to 7.89 for August to 7.51 for October and 7.53 for January. While there were slight declines later the market displayed increased strength with sentiment only more decidedly bullish.

Cotton futures closed steady, July, 8.58; August, 7.89; September, 7.57; October, 7.51; November, 7.46; December, 7.51; January, 7.59; February, 7.565; March, 7.98. Spot closed dull; middling uplands, $1 3-16 middling gulf, 9 1-16; sales none.

CHICAGO MONEY.

Chicago, June 29.—Bank clearings, $23,448,806; balances, $2,685,510.

REALTY MARKET

Weather Condition Has a Bad Effect On It.

Agents Claim Weather Affects Sales of Property.

Demand For Houses For Purchase Is Large Now.

It might be generally supposed that the weather has a large influence on the dry goods business, but people are generally incredulous over the statement that it has a good deal to do with the real estate business as well. But it certainly has an effect, and it is weather and nothing else that has made a very poor week out of the one just closed. There has been a good deal of work done, but few deals have been closed, and this week is one very dull one dropped into a series of very active ones.

* * *

"How does the weather affect business?" said a real estate man yesterday afternoon in response to a question. "Bless you, that is an easy one. You know that looking over property is one of the necessary parts of selling real estate. There has been a day when a man would buy Duluth real estate without looking at it, and that day may come again, but it is not the case now. No man is going to put his money into a lot without looking it over. With weather as it has been the past week, there has been no chance for anybody to get out and look over property, and the consequence is there have been no sales worth mentioning. Just you can put it down as a fact that business is good generally, even though there is one mighty dull week to make the exception that proves the rule."

There are still a good many queries as to what the United States Steel company is going to do for office room. It is doing the best it can just at present, and so far as anyone on the outside can learn, no final arrangements have been made. The deal for the Bevler corner on First street and Third avenue has neither fallen through nor has it been completed. It seems to be standing about where it was a couple of weeks ago. Meanwhile the Lerch barn has moved out of the way, and the contractor is working on the excavation.

* * *

Some idea of the importance of the United States Steel company's interests in this city may be gained from the fact that early in the quest for quarters a Duluth man offered to put up a 7-story building on a 50-foot lot in a good location. The offer was refused because the steel company's officers said that that was too little room for the needs of the company here. It is said that the company will need for its own use a building about the size of the Board of Trade building.

"The demand for houses is remarkable," said Whitney Wall, of J. D. Howard & Co., yesterday afternoon. "I do not mean by that houses for rent, though there is always a demand for them, but houses to buy. People that see the slightest chance for paying for a house are getting mighty tired of paying rent and buying a house over again for somebody else every few years.

Mrs. Ida P. Davis, of New York, through C. P. Craig, is having plans prepared for a 3-story brick building to be located on Michigan street opposite the Union depot. The space occupied will be twenty-five feet, and the lower floor will probably be used for a restaurant.

CATS AND COLOR.

"I never knew until recently that cats knew so much about colors," said a bright little woman who lives in the upper part of the city, to the New Orleans Times-Democrat, "but I have no doubt whatever of the matter now. The fact was brought to my attention in a rather singular way. We have a nest of cats at our home, and we have been very much attached to the feline tribe. They are all pets. But there is one cat in the group that we have been unusualy kind to. She was the particular pet of the family. Her body was covered by the prettiest white fur I ever saw. It was without a blemish, and we came to look upon her as the prettiest bit of cat flesh on the face of the earth. But something happened to her one day while she was rummaging arcund in an old pantry, and it changed the course of her life completely. She got mixed up with a lot of blueing bottles, and when she scrambled out of the pantry she was as blue as she could be. Her color had completely changed. She was fearfully distressed about the matter, and seemed to be somewhat alarmed over the sudden change in her appearance. But the surprise she felt was nothing compared to the surprise shown by her relatives and associates. In the moment of her alarm she turned to the mother cat of the tribe, and here is where the interesting point comes in. The old cat would have nothing to do with her. She resented her approaches by spitting at her and manifested her dislike of it all in other ways equally as unmistakable. From that time on she became an outcast; her relatives and associates would slink away from her, and she continued to live in isolation, and all on account of the change which had taken place in the color of her hair."

FOUR ACES

Were Easily Beaten By Four Kings and a Click.

It Was the Sound of the Click That Did It.

"There ain't never no tellin' how a man'll prove up in a real emergency until you've seen him tried," said old man Greenhut to the New York Sun, as he stood behind his bar, polishing a glass in an absent-minded fashion. His mind, at all events, was not fixed on the work in hand, for he rubbed the glass for a long time after he had it shining, and it was not his habit to do superfluous work. One of the two men who had just slouched in bought a drink and slouched out had, however, attracted the old man's attention, and he was evidently thinking over some event of the past.

At length he put away the glass and walked around to his favorite seat by the window. After carefully lighting a cigar he smoked for a while in silence and then said: "That there hobo that just come in here with the other one was a man of consid'able parts about twenty year ago. They did say that he were one o' the best short card players on the river for a young man, an' so fur as any one c'd see, there didn't seem to be no reason why he shouldn't grow up with the country and be rich an' respectable in his old age. He could flip a card out o' the middle of the pack as neat as he could off'rn the bottom an' when it come to makin' a full house on a two-card draw there wa'n't nobody c'd give him any points.

"O' course, that ain't the hull science o' the game o' poker. I've knowed a good many men that c'd deal right smart, an' yet'd get beat when it come to backin' their hands, for it's one thing to get the winnin' hand in a deal and it's entirely another proposition to get away with the pot. O' course, the man that gets away with it on a losin' hand has to be a artist, but there's a good many artists loose on the Mississip', an' they ain't all from Arkansas City neither, though the best of 'em is probably to be found right here. Leastways they ain't nobody what's ever proved nothin' to the contrary.

"But this here fellow, Thorpe he used to call himself, but I don't know what his name is now, he were reckoned, as I said, one o' the best on the river among the younger players. He'd commenced right, playin' a small game till he got onto the correct ideas an' practisin' day an' night with the pasteboards till he got slick in handlin' 'em. An' then he'd took to travelin' the river an' pickin up what he could in the way o' casual strangers, an' the first year he done right well. As I was sayin' he might ha' growed rich an' respected if he hadn't had a streak o' yaller in him.

"I've always noticed that when a man has that streak o' yaller in his makeup it's bound to show sooner or later. An' there ain't nothin like draw poker to show it up. Thorpe he got a puttin' on more side than a middleweight champion. Pears like he thought he were the reel thing an' was reckonin' on bein' the cock o' the walk. They do say that Sam Alstine watched him playin' for two or three nights on the old river Belle, an' made him a proposition to pal together. Now anybody c'd ha' told Thorpe that there w'an't no better opportunity to be had for a young man than that, for Sam was the best known and the best-liked gambler on the hull river, f'm St. Paul to New Orleans. He were a little more'n middle aged an' he'd played all his life without ever havin' a shootin' scrape or bein' catched in any crooked play. An' they did say that he never made a trip up or down w'thout clearin' somethin' more'n livin' expenses. He'd had three or four pals, different times, but he broke with all of 'em after a short trial. Said they was clumsy, or too greedy, or out o' the way somehow, for Sam wouldn't stand for nothin' but a gentleman's game. He had a reputation that was more precious than rubies, an' he wa'n't takin' no chances on bein' compromised with other fellers' foolishness.

"Well, just naturally it stands to reason that no young sport like Thorpe c'd have any better openin' than that. There wa'n't another man on the river that had proper ambition in his line o' business that c'wouldn't ha' jumped at the chanst. I was tendin' bar on the River Belle at the time an' when I seen Sam a watchin' Thorpe like he did an' seen 'em set down over a bottle o' wine that Sam had ordered, I says to myself that Thorpe's fortune was made. You see, Thorpe hadn't played long enough for everybody to get onto his great gifts as a dealer. It were only a real genius like Alstine that c'd see what he was doin'. I had my own idees, but twa'n't up to me to say nothin' an' I wasn't dead sure of it anyhow.

"Well, you wouldn't hardly believe that any man would ha' thrown such a chanst as that over his shoulder, but that's just what Thorpe did. He wa'n't nasty about it exactly, but he told Sam he reckoned he didn't care about runnin' in double harness. Said he reckoned he was old enough to go it alone, even if he was a young feller. The on'y way I c'd figger it out was that his head must ha' been turned, first by the success he'd had, an' second, by the very fact that Alstine reckoned him good enough for a pal. However it was, they didn't hitch, an' when I seen Sam walkin' away from him I knowed by the expression on his face that somethin' was wrong, an' I says to myself that it were the greatest mistake Thorpe had made an' was likely to make, an' that he was likely to get a call some time when he wasn't lookin' for it.

"Just naturally somethin' o' that nature happened within the next few weeks. I think it were the second trip down after that, that Thorpe got on the boat at Memphis an' sot 'round for a spell, like a man will when he's ready for most any kind of an openin' an' don't see none waitin'. There was a pikers' game goin' on' in the saloon with three or four drummers an' a crossroads player f'm New Madrid in it, but the drummers was cheap men an' was playin' a two dollar limit, an' Thorpe didn't care about no small game then. He were flyin' pretty high them days, an' havin' a proper respect for his own talents he held out for somethin' better worth while.

"When we got to Helena his openin' come. They was a lawyer got on there that I knowed was a heavy player, an' with him was a smooth-faced feller with a Texas hat on that I'd never seen afore. He were quite young. I don't reckon he were more'n 26 or 27, but he moved like he lived mostly out doors, an' he had a keen look in his eye that showed he were a thoroughbred. As soon as they come aboard they began lookin' for sport, an' sizin' up the crowd, they picked out Thorpe as a pretty sharp lookin' cuss with the outward appearance o' prosperity, so they got talkin' with him, he bein' willin' enough, an' twa'nt long before they had cards and chips on one o' the saloon tables.

"If the other games was too small to catch Thorpe, this one was too big to catch any one else that was lookin' on, for they played table stakes, an' each man flashed $500 for a starter. The lawyer an' Thorpe was both known on the boat as nervy players, but nobody knowed the smooth-faced man, an' I never heer'd his name. They called him Texas, prob'ly on account of his hat, or mebbe 'twas his general look, which, as I was sayin' was an outdoor man. Anyway, he looked a player, an' there wa'nt nobody 'round that cared to invite hisself into the game. The play began kind o' cautious, like it does gen'ly among men that ain't playin' together constant, an' for half a dozen deals there wa'n't much doin'. Thorpe was feelin' his way an' he was too much of an artist to force things at the start. There wa'n't no hand showed bigger than threes an' no very important money in the pot till it come the lawye's deal for about the third time. It were a jackpot then, an' there was $30 in, havin' been no sweetenin' so far.

"Texas had the first say an' he opened it for $30. Thorpe come next, o' course, an' he raised it $50 more. Texas come in an' Thorpe raised again, $100 this time, an' both the others made good, the lawyer studyin' for a while, but Texas shovin' his money in prompt. When it came to the draw Texas stood pat an' so did Thorpe. It were a pretty play for him, too, for he had four sixes, an' havin' played as strong as he did afore the draw, it would ha' given away his hand to draw one. Standin' pat made the others think, o' course, that he hadn't nothin' better'n a full at the most. The lawyer he studied again an' finally drew to the strength of his hand, which were three kings.

"Texas, havin' opened the pot, bet a white chip an' Thorpe trailed. I've heer'd that sort o' play criticised, but I call it good poker. If he'd ha' raised it his pile, as most men would, the chances was that the lawyer'd laid down an' mo'n likely Texas would, too, 'thouten he had a high flush. Bettin' as he did there was a chanst that the lawyer'd raise, an' Texas might trail after him, so givin' Thorpe a better show. Well, the lawyer did raise. 'Peared he'd caught a pair to his kings, an' Texas trailed, havin' a ten high flush, so Thorpe had his chanst as he'd figgered. Right then was when I seed the streak o' yaller. O' course there was a possibility o' the lawyer havin' made fours, but any man that knowed poker as he'd oughter know it to play on the river would ha' raised it his pile right there. Thorpe didn't. He called. O' course he took the pot, but it were a yaller play all the same, an' I c'd see the other men was a laughin' at him quietly. They didn't say nothin' though, an' the play went on, both of them declarin' $500 more in the game.

"Well, I says to myself then that I reckoned Alstine had made one o' the very few mistakes of his life when he offered to pal with Thorpe, an' that it were more than his usual luck for Thorpe to back out, but Alstine wa'n't there, an' there wa'n't nobody for me to make remarks to, even if I'd wanted to talk, which I didn't, knowin' enough to keep my mouth shut about such things.

"There wa'n't no more heavy playin' for the next twenty minutes or so, for there wa'n't no big hands out together, an' I was lookin' out for Thorpe to make a big play on his own deal. It were my side partner's trick at the bar for the next two hours, an' I hadn't nothin' else to do but improve my mind, studyin' the game. 'Peared like he were satisfied to let the other fellers think he were a second rate player, an' was waitin' till they should get a little careless like afore tryin' to get even for his first mistake. After awhile, though, he made his play an' there was when we all found him out.

"It were his deal, an' he'd marked the lawyer for his man. Texas havin' run his pile down to about a hundred an' the lawyer an' Thorpe bein' about even on the money question, he raffled the cars three or four times as usual, an' I must say I couldn't see nothin' in the way he did it, but I reckon Texas must ha' mistrusted somethin'. Anyway, while Thorpe was dealin' Texas put his hand in his pocket kind o' sudden, an' flashin' his wad says: 'I declare another $1000,' an' he laid the bills in front of him.

"Now, I don't know whether 'twas part o' Thorpe's play to give Texas three kings or not. Very likely it was, but I'll bet four cigars that the fourth king he got in the draw was an accident. If it were an accident it were a bad one for Thorpe. The lawyer got his pat hand right an' havin' first say opened the pot for the size of it, which were about $40. Thorpe raised him $50 an 'Texas trailed. The lawyer come back once more, an' Thorpe made good, an' so did Texas. O' course, Thorpe could ha' kep' on raisin' before the draw, bein' confident o' getting the fourth ace, but it would ha' looked bad, an' so far as that was concerned he played a proper game. He'd played three aces as fur as anybody would, an' if he bettered in the draw, as he knowed he was goin' to, his play afterward would look perfectly natural.

"Well, as I said, Texas got his fourth king, whether by accident or not, an' Thorpe o' course, got his fourth ace on a one-card draw. The lawyer bet and Thorpe raised, an' Texas raised an' the lawyer raised, an' Thorpe raised again. Just as he did there was a click under the table an' I moved around a little. You see I was standin' almost in front o' Texas an' I didn't know how straight he could shoot. Besides I wanted to be where I could see Thorpe's face a little better. Somehow, I wasn't much surprised to see him lookin' kind o' pale, an' when I seen that I knowed he'd heer'd the click an' had a pretty good idea o' what it meant.

"Texas was a lookin' at him, too, an' his eyes was a blazin' as he saw Thorpe's last raise an' pushed the rest of his pile to the middle o' the table without a word. The lawyer was as cool as a cucumber, but he throwed his cards down, knowin' that he were outclassed. Thorpe got a little bit whiter an' he hesitated a little, but he covered the bet, an' his voice was tol'able steady as he said: 'I can't do no more'n call your pile. What have you got?'

"'I've got four kings,' said Texas, layin' 'em down, an' fetchin' his revolver up on top o' the table at the same time.

"'They're no good,' says Thorpe, layin' down his four aces; but his voice shook as he spoke, an' he didn't make no move to pull in the pot.

"Texas looked at him for a bit afore he spoke again. 'Peared like he were studyin' to see what sort of a man Thorpe was. Then he says, as cool as you please, 'I reckon four kings is good when the ace o' hearts comes off the bottom o' the deck.' But he didn't make no move to pull in the pot neither. I reckon he were waitin' to see what Thorpe would do.

"It were the real emergency o' Thorpe's life. O' course, he stood a good show o' gettin' shot if he'd put up a fight, for Texas had the drop on him, but it were his word against another, an' he had his reputation to fight for. If it hadn't been for that streak o' yaller he'd ha' taken his chanst o' bein' shot an' mebbe gettin' over it, rather'n to weaken then, but the yaller did it.

"He opened his mouth to speak, but he didn't speak. He looked at Texas for a moment an' then he lokoed at the revolver, an' then he got up an' left the table, an' that were the end o' Thorpe. There wa'n't a boat on the river where they'd let him play after that, an' he disappeared. I hain't seen him since till today, but 'tain't no surprise to see that he's a hobo, livin' with hoboes. An' that's the man that might ha' been rich an' respected if it hadn't been for the one little streak o' yaller."

TO THE PEOPLE OF DULUTH:

Beaumont, Tex., June 26, 1901.

I am in receipt this morning of a letter from the underwriters of the Export Oil and Pipe Line Co., of which ex-Senator Towne is president, stating that on account of the great interest in the Export Oil and Pipe Line Co. in the East, and the large number of reservations which they have made for their friends, they have decided to place the first block of stock on the market, when they advertise, at 60 cents per share. In the article published in The Herald of June 21 it is stated that the stock would be placed on the market at 50 cents. I gave out this information on the strength of a letter from the underwriters, Walter G. Hudson & Co., of Boston, Mass. In their letter to me today they state that in view of my having written a number of letters and given this information to The Herald correspondent, they will take care of all stock ordered through me or Senator Towne at the 50 cents per share, providing all such orders bear date and post mark not later than July 5.

The underwriters will begin to advertise the Company's stock for sale at about that time, when the prospectus will be ready for distribution.

Mr. Fred W. Kugler, druggist, has a statement showing the Company's holdings, and has authority to accept subscriptions for stock and drafts, checks, etc., for the same. He will accept subscriptions at the 50 cent rate up to and including July 5.

Yours truly,

ELLIS E. BEEBE,
Auditor Export Oil & Pipe Line Company
Of Beaumont, Texas.

FIRST-BORN STRONGEST.

It would seem that first-born children excel later-born children in height and weight, says Everybody's Magazine. This may be due to the greater vigor of the mother at the birth of the first child. We are reminded of a fact, mentioned later, that out of fifty great men of this century 30 per cent were the youngest sons. In England it was found that growth degenerates as we go lower in the social scale, there being a difference of even five inches in height between the best and worst fed classes in the community.

An investigation of 10,000 children in Switzerland showed that children born in summer are taller for their age than those born in winter; as a majority of children in the public schools are poor, in winter their parents are forced to economize more on account of expense of heating; their rooms are also liable to be small and poorly ventilated; while in summer they are out in the fresh air; food is also cheaper and more varied. The influence of unhealthy conditions on a very young child would be much greater than when it is older and better able to resist them.

$15.00 Seattle, Tacoma and Portland and Return.

July 6 to 13 the Northern Pacific railway will place on sale tickets from Duluth to above points and return at extremely low rate of $45.00, with final limit for return Aug. 31, 1901. Destination must be reached not later than July 18. Tickets are first-classs and good for stopover privileges in either direction, within transit limits. This offers an unsurpassed opportunity for those desiring to hunt new homes and farms to go into the Northwest and look over the country, or for those wishing to visit relatives or friends, or to make pleasure trips. Two trains daily, including famous North Coast Limited.

For tickets and full information, call at City Ticket office, 332 West Superior street, or Union depot.

A real estate investment is usually a safe investment. Our own city of Duluth, with its numberless resources, is a good place to cast your anchor. Consult the "real estate" columns of The Herald every day and see if you can't make a deal.
